Attorney Douglass is home attending the session of the Board.

Judging from present indications it will be several days before navigation opens.

Green apples by the bushel at Carpenter & Bartholomew's.

WANTED.—A girl to learn dress making. For information apply at this office.

The editor of this paper is in Grand Rapids attending the session of the Board [illegible] & M. R. R.

The grand jury of Antrim have completed their labors, and we learn, have not been out of doors.

The case of Lasse Mickle[illegible] appeals and to be heard at the next session of the Supreme Court.

General Burnside and General Logan are the only Union Generals of the late war remaining in the United States Senate.

Go to Carpenter & Bartholomew's for your cheese box.

Some of the Democratic leaders are figuring ahead for a new election for President. That would be worse than the seven plagues.

The next Congress will have ten members each elected by less than ten majority, which illustrates the importance of one vote.

A number of the [illegible] with Carpenter & Bartholomew.

[illegible] Minnesota, the well known gambler of New York, was elected to the Senate of the State, but will never in its history have the governance of the people of his State. Gamblers for Legislators!

A Methodist minister, on arising Christmas morning, carried his stocking from their accustomed place, on investigating, found them on the horns of a cow, tied near his door, by some of his generous parishioners.

Hon. Michael Brown, the gentleman who succeeds Judge Giddings, is highly complimented for the manner in which he bears his new honors and transacts business in the courts over which he presides.

Senator Ferry was elected United States Senator for six years, from the 4th of March next, by both Houses of the Legislature, on the 16th.

Died.—Mrs. E. P. Brigham of Antrim, died very suddenly on Friday of last week, of heart disease. She is buried to-day.

Burned.—The finishing rooms of the Whitewater Manufacturing Company, for C. Hoag and Chalata, at Whitewater, Wis., was destroyed by fire on the night of the 15th. No particulars.

The Democrats of the Detroit district agree very well on politics, but the Detroit agrees in that that another Gamberling gives us control of every local appointment that comes to our table.—Herald.

We are in pretty much the same fix of the Herald. The Democrats is a good local paper but ever it's politics.

Supervisor Wilkinson and Deputy Sheriff Bennett, of Antrim county, have arrested Thomas Hayes, charged with the murder of Mrs. Hayes, his wife, in Central Lake township, Antrim county, on the night of the 10th inst. Hayes was arrested at Petoskey, and will be taken to Antrim county for trial.—Petoskey Republican.

TUESDAY, - JANUARY 25, 1877

A New York correspondent reports that the present owners of the World are S. J. Tilden S. L. M. Barlow, Tom Scott, August Belmont and Abram S. Hewitt.

Miss Kinglake, niece of the Crimean historian, has just made an aristocratic marriage. The lucky groom is the son of Earl Fitzwilliam.

Mr. W. S. Gilbert has written a new play for Sothern. The latter has just received it at Chicago for examination. The comedy has not been christened, but nothing is said in regard it very favorably.

Major Barnes was elected to act as Chief Herald and read the royal proclamation at Delhi on New Year's day because he happened to be the tallest officer in the British army. His dress for the occasion cost £1,000.

After reading so much about the safety of the Kelsheimer bridge, we cannot help wondering that the rest of the road didn't cave in and leave that model of solidity and firmness still standing.—Worcester Press.

When any one is run over in St. Petersburg, the carriage causing the accident is confiscated, the horse are taken to the fire brigade for public use, and the driver is imprisoned and flogged.

Cardinal McCloskey is going to Rome. It is said in official circles, as soon as his health will permit, and on his return he will bring the Pope's hat, for the consecration of the pastor of St. Stephen's as Cardinal Bishop of New York.

The total received at the annual pew meeting of Mr. Beecher's church, last Monday, was $48,421 50. The total amount received for pew-rents in previous year are as 1872, $60,875; 1873, $63,529; 1874, $60,450; 1875, $60,210 50; 1876, $63,680.

George Alfred Townsend says of the management of the New York Herald that "the editors were degraded to reporters at will, and reporters en masse leveled as editors, a system of civil service like a snowball exploding, where those going up astonished meet others astonished coming down."

It is stated that the English Government contemplates offering to Sir Arthur Guinness a peerage, and the little satirist—Darius Ogg—is even now revel. The Guinness brewing firm having dissolved, Sir Arthur receives $5,000,000 for his share. His income has heretofore been $250,000 a year.

In taking a temporary farewell of New York at Wallack's Theater, Saturday night, Mr. Boucicault addressed himself specially to the ladies in the audience, beseeching them that they are the potent factors in an audience, and herwit in their power to make impure pays unfashionable.

Mr. Trinidad Romero is the delegate recently elected to Congress from the Territory of New Mexico. He is a native, speaking English, and a merchant, contractor, and sheep owner, who, though still young, has made a fortune, with the help of his brother, from a rest egg of only $1,000.

The late Mr. James W. Nye, who was at the time a voter in New York city, took no part in the first election of the Republican party because he was absorbed in a two days' game of poker at Seneca Falls with Judge Sackett and the Hon. W. W. Wright. So says Mr. Wright.

Miss Clara Morris fainted upon the stage during a recent representation of "Miss Multon" at the Union Square Theatre in New York. Her health is in a most precarious condition, and many of her warmest admirers and friends urge her to retire permanently from the stage.

Mr. Hendricks has created considerable of a sensation in Indiana by his assertion that he has been called upon to quell serious disturbances in his State, but has done it without calling for troops. His constituents are surprised that he has had such a stormy reign without letting them know anything about it.

The London Spectator says of Mr. Tennyson's late effort: "Harold" is a fine dramatic piece, and has more fire and rapid movements in it than 'Queen Mary,' but we cannot agree with those who think that 'Harold' is to, much less superior to Mr. Tennyson's study of the morbid hopes and gloomy reverses of the great Tudor wreck."

Mr. Habberton's temperance story, "The Barton Experiment," had a sale of 10,000 copies in two weeks, and a second 10,000 is rapidly disappearing. The author is said to be a man about thirty-five to forty, of medium hight, with dark hair and beard, dark eyes, dark complexion, is neither slack nor fastidious in dress, an enjoyable companion, and domestic in his tastes.

If the King of Spain marry the Princess Maria Mercedes, daughter of the Duc de Montpensier—as the gossip say he will—his family relations will be wonderfully mixed. Intermarriage has been practiced among the Bourbons so extensively that the functions of thirty-two great great-grand parents of the young people were owing to multitudinous names, performed by fourteen persons.

President Smith, of Dartmouth College, refuses to reconsider his resignation, and a new president must be chosen. Among those suggested for the place are the Rev. S. C. Barrett, D now professor of Sacred Theology at the Chicago Theological Seminary; the Rev. S. G. Brown, D. D. now president of Hamilton College; Charles A. Aiken, Ph. D., and the Rev. William J. Tucker of New York city.

Columbus, Ohio, dispatch of the 17th says: The Hon. W. A. Wheeler, Vice President-elect, arrived here last night, and was the guest of President-elect Hayes. This morning Mr. Wheeler was presented to the Senate and House of Representatives, and left for Washington this afternoon. President Hayes is looking splendid, and feels no uneasiness as to his inauguration. He spoke in high terms of the course adopted by the Legislature of Michigan in recommending Senator Ferry by acclamation, and acknowledges that Michigan has acted an important part, leaving the Chairmanship of the Republican National Committee and the Presidency of the Senate. President Hayes considers Senator Ferry one of the best and most reliable men in the nation. He apprehends no danger, and he thinks the inauguration will be quiet and peaceable. Mr Wheeler's visit was extremely pleasant, and he fully agrees with President Hayes in all matters of importance. This is the first time Mr. Hayes has met Mr Wheeler, and he spoke of him in high terms, while cordially here who met Mr. Wheeler spoke of him enthusiastically.

ESTABLISHED:
THE DAILY IN 1865.

The close of one of the most exciting and hardly-fought political contests known to recent American history made the Republicans justly victorious, but under such circumstances, and with such a close result as to call upon it unusually to be the exercise of the great conservative power, the bi-last wisdom the most sagacious forsight, and the broadest statesmanship. The election factor of the people with much that has occurred in its administration is unremarkable. There demand is for a genuine Reform, and it will break no further cession or delay. The lamentable condition of the Southern states, the direct result of unequal suffrage on the one hand and fraud and grossly Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are an expression of the varying of our great River Valleys and the Entire Mississippi Valley, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Arkansas, but, Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi, Alabama, Missouri, and many other localities, are treated by Vinegar Bitters with the most unfailing success.

Such diseases as Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the Region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offspring of Dyspepsia, and one bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy column of recommendations.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been used with the most wonderful success.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in painting, type-setting, metal mining, or those who work in Quicksilver, Lead, Copper, Type-setters, rectifiers and Miners, will find occasional use of the Bitters a preventive against any form of disease.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ringworms, Scald-head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried to the surface and expelled by the use of these Bitters in a short time.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. For full directions, see circular around each bottle.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or the turn of life, these Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

Clergymen, Lawyers, Merchants, Editors, Teachers, Students, and persons leading sedentary lives, are peculiarly liable to disorders of the digestive organs, requiring the gentle aid of a tonic and mild aperient. For this purpose, one bottle of Vinegar Bitters is worth a dozen of the usual remedies.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying it with Vinegar Bitters.

Be regulated in Intelligence, Mind and Body, by the occasional use of a dose of Vinegar Bitters, when you feel the need of an appetizer or gentle stimulant.

For Intermittent Fevers, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Biliousness, Headache, Rheumatism, Kidney Complaints, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Female Complaints, Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Tumors, Ulcers, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors, and Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Stomach and Kidneys, these Bitters have been most successful.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Mr. Babberton's temperance story, "The Boston Experiment," had a sale of 10,000 copies in two weeks, and a second 10,000 is rapidly disappearing. The author is said to be a man about thirty-five to forty, of medium height, with dark hair and beard, dark eyes, dark complexion, is neither slack nor fastidious in dress, an enjoyable companion, and domestic in his tastes.

If the King of Spain marry the Princess Maria Mercedes, daughter of the Duc de Montpensier—as the gossip says he will—his family relations will be wonderfully mixed. Intermarriage has been practiced among the Bourbons so extensively that the functions of thirty-two great great-grand-parents of the young people were owing to multitudinous reasons, performed by fourteen persons.

President Smith, of Dartmouth College, refuses to reconsider his resignation, and a new president must be chosen. Among those suggested for the place are the Rev. S. C. Harrett, D now professor of Sacred Theology at the Chicago Theological Seminary; the Rev. S. G. Brown, D. D. now president of Hamilton College; Charles A. Aiken, Ph. D., and the Rev. William J. Tucker of New York city.

Columbus, Ohio, dispatch of the 11th says The Hon. W. A. Wheeler, Vice President-elect, arrived here last night, and was the guest of President-elect Hayes. This morning Mr. Wheeler was presented to the Senate and House of Representatives, and left for Washington this afternoon. President Hayes is looking splendid, and feels no uneasiness as to his inauguration. He speaks in high terms of the course adopted by the Legislature of Michigan in renominating Senator Ferry by acclamation, and acknowledges that Michigan has acted an important part, having the Chairmanship of the Republican National Committee and the Presidency of the Senate. President Hayes considers Senator Ferry one of the best and most reliable men in the Senate. He apprehends no danger, and he thinks the inauguration will be quiet and peaceable. Mr. Wheeler's visit was extremely pleasant, and he fully agrees with President Hayes in all matters of importance. This is the first time Mr. Hayes has met Mr. Wheeler, as he spoke of him in high terms, while everybody here who met Mr. Wheeler speaks of him enthusiastically.

THE Detroit Tribune,
FOR 1877.

THE REPRESENTATIVE

Michigan Newspaper.

THE DAILY IN 1835.

The close of one of the most exciting and hard-fought political contests known to recent American history find the Republican party victorious, but under such circumstances, and with such a close result as to call upon it imperatively for the exercise of the great est circumspection, the highest wisdom the most sagacious foresight, and the freatest watchfulness. The election of the people with such that has carried the administration in unmistakable. Their demand is for a genuine Reform, and it will brook no further evasion or delay. Its mandate conditions at the Southern States, the just result of ignorant suffrage on the one hand and bitter and grieving hatred of the captivity of all men before the law on the other, demoralization and capital remedy which cannot long be withheld with safety. The greatest business energies of the country must be revived by some measures that shall give employment to idle capital. The question of resuming our financial system to the changed condition of the times is one for sound comprehensive, just and safe solution. The use of governmental power for the relief, or even benefit of any class, possession of partisan ends has not with popular confidence and must cease.

It is under such circumstances as these that the mantle of rule is once more placed in Republican hands. The high trust is coupled with confidence that must be fulfilled or the certain loss of all that has been gained is only a question of a brief time.

THE DETROIT TRIBUNE is one of those that believe that those demands must rest on the Republican Party—the party of the final victory—can be and must be met. It pledges itself further in the future that our journal shall be, as it has been for 18 years, a party paper in politics, but always and ever an independent one, firmly though its views on any of a civil war, which has stained and saturated with the blood of patriots and heroes that we have to maintain.

THE TRIBUNE will therefore give its energies and its influence in this effort to aid in advancing Republican principles and measures, the Republican organization in power, but shielding and supporting no administration or party course in other directions the path justly marked out by patriotic duty. It will cease to give a broad and independent view of political affairs, and will plan before its readers the most important and the earliest information attainable from all authoritative sources. We intend that its regular daily and weekly commentary on political topics shall be of the fullest in point of scope and freedom in point of time. In short, The Tribune's readers will be kept fully abreast with the ever moving current of events.

As to GENERAL NEWS in all its various departments, we propose to furnish a weekly budget of all the doings and items, and make THE TRIBUNE a welcome visitor in every office, counting room, workshop and manufactory, and a doubly welcome friend at every fireside. Our collection of MICHIGAN NEWS is by large corps of paid correspondents, by means of telegraph and mail, we intend shall remain altogether unrivaled. The AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT will be made complete in every respect, and will form a leading feature of the paper that will be worth many times its cost to the great Agricultural interest of the State. Our MARKET REPORTS will be as they always have been, prepared with most trustful care and all the movements and prices of all the great staples of trade to which the people of Michigan are interested. Our LITERARY columns will contain the best stories and choicest poetry that can be gleaned in a very wide range of selections, while our minor items will cover every variety of top, amusing, instructive and suggestive.

Thus we shall aim to make THE DETROIT TRIBUNE FOR 1877 most complete in all its departments and more valuable in its contents than ever before, and this continues to win it an ever growing constituency of steady and attached supporters and friends, to whose wants and wishes it shall be our pleasure to minister.

Grateful Thousands cheerfully testify to the wonderful curative powers of VINEGAR BITTERS. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones have not become destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and long remain unwell, provided their bones have not become destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many other large streams and their tributaries, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach, liver, and other abdominal organs. In their treatment, a purgative, alterative, and tonic is required. You will find no cathartic equal to VINEGAR BITTERS for freeing the system from bilious matter.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. No one will deny that the stomach is deranged in the extreme when any of these symptoms arise, and that the whole system will shortly become affected. Strength, health and vigor are not to be obtained without the use of a pure stimulant. Take VINEGAR BITTERS.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Tumors, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Blood are literally driven out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood.

Mechanical Diseases. Persons engaged in Painting and Mineral, seem to be particularly subject to Chronic Diseases of the Stomach and Kidneys. They should take a dose of VINEGAR BITTERS occasionally.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Blood, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. For full directions, read carefully the circular around each bottle, printed in English, French, German, Spanish and Portuguese.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or the turn of life, these Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

Cautions. The Vitalized Agents in VINEGAR BITTERS are extracted from herbs found growing in the United States, without the use of Alcoholic stimulants. All Poisonous, Drugs and Medicines are carefully excluded from this preparation.

Dr. Trask was engaged for nearly years in a series of experiments and investigations, scientific and continuous. At last he succeeded in producing what is known to the world, as the result of his experiments, a combination of Vegetable extracts, the power of which in removing Diseases of the Blood, is truly wonderful.

His discovery consists in a combination of these powerful Vegetable Extracts, Magnetism or Magnetism in the form of an ointment.

Certainly, it is, that the combination of these powerful extracts has attained its highest degree of perfection in the Magnetic Ointment, and has been used for a term of years with the most wonderful success in the cure of

THE BABY FOR ME

I love to greet about the house angelic,
With a heavenly look in their eyes,
And hide in the sunbeams of morning
With their tiny arms in the skies,
And nestle like the buds of a rose,
And disappear like the lines and dimples
And roses over flower that grows.

Or cook, the lullaby baby
That sits one over did roar,
Whose nothing amounts about him,
But he's just the right baby for me!
He's nothing at all like a cherub—
But rather a cherubal girl,
And his hair—well, I know the sunbeams
Whose sunbeams are wonderously thin.

However, though they're like, like the heavens,
As rosie-ish—pretty with him,
Yet his mam's rather large for a rose-bud,
Because—a ball sported one.
His mouth don't resemble a cherry
In the least. They're a strong it the pair,
As you'll think I am sure, if he get sun.
As—oh! he gets sore, by the bye!

And he isn't a bit like a fly,
In any sweet likeness that sooner,
Such as flower on earth, I am certain,
Had a deer little cunning pug nose
Here I mean! full of mischief, the darling.
And as naught as naughty can be.
And I'm glad that he's naught
For he'll just the right baby for me!

THE CAPTAIN'S RUSE.

But come of the year 1780 was a sad period for America. The British held the country from Charleston to the Upper Santee, and in order to complete their conquest had established a chain of posts throughout the State, each of which was strongly fortified and defended by a good garrison. Organized resistance to the British there was none, for the American army, the principal actorsin the struggle were the men who composed the famous "light brigade" of General Marion. The favorite rendezvous of Marion was at Snow Island. This is a piece of high river swamp, as it is called in the Carolinas, and was surrounded on three sides by water, so as to be almost impregnable. Here Marion had his camp. From this fastness he issued forth at pleasure to rouse the enemy's granaries or capture a convoy of arms on its route. Secure in his retreat, he had no fear of reprisals.

In the city of Charleston the people of the British was at its height, the proud-spirited people of that capital were held down by a galling tyranny. Many of them were self-exiled and uncompromising neither in hostility to the English, while others, thinking they could best serve the cause in that way, affected a hearty concurrence in the conquerors, and were seemingly the most loyal of all King George's subjects. Yet, while the English saw this and congratulated themselves upon the good effect it would have on the Colonists, those very "loyalists" kept the American commander constantly informed of all that passed within the British lines, and many a disaster of the English was in this way directly attributed to them.

One of these persons was a lady of the second position and great wealth. Indeed, there were few persons in all Charleston over whose influence in the cause the British were more elated than they were over that of Mrs. Anne Harden. She was a young and beautiful widow, just twenty-five, and as several years had been the standing toast of the beaux of the Carolinas. When the British took the city she was one of the first to submit to the King, and since then her house had been the favorite gathering place of the colonial gentry. Many of Mrs. Harden's friends, who were stanch patriots to the last, quietly cut her acquaintance, and shook their heads in silent indignation when her name was mentioned, and when they dared speak at all it was only to condemn the widow's treachery. In the camp of Marion, however, there was one check that kindled with pride and not with shame when the lady's name was mentioned; and as for Gen. Marion himself, he could have told tales that would have startled the widow's Charleston friends, had it been safe to do so.

While Marion was creating so great an excitement beyond the gates of Charleston, Mrs. Harden resolved to give a ball. Preparations were made on an extensive scale, and the loyal element of society was in high feather. The splendid mansion of the young widow was dressed with flowers from cellar to garret, and blazed with lights on the evening appointed for the assembly, and the band of the garrison discorsed sweet music to the assembled crowds. The entertainment was at its height, when the crowd near the door suddenly parted, and a young man came forward hurriedly. He was tall and splendidly formed, and carried himself erect, with a proud, martial air. He was dressed in the uniform of an officer of the Tory legion, and his general appearance was that of a man who had ridden far and hard during the day. As the young widow saw him, her face flushed, and then grew deathly pale, and she sprang forward with a cry of alarm.

"What are you doing here?" she asked, hurriedly.

"You will see," he answered, quickly, in a low tones. "Only, for Heaven's sake, seem blank and blue to what I may say!" Then he added, coldly, and in a louder tone: "You see, my dear cousin, I have come back to pay allegiance."

"I am delighted to hear it," she replied, warmly, taking the hint at once. "I never thought your heart would cling to the rebel cause."

"Faith," he said, laughing, "if my heart had clung to it, my stomach would have driven me from it. I'm not fond of starving, my fair cousin, and King George lives well, you know. Hereafter, Thomas Wilson lives and dies a loyal man."

Col. Watson had been standing by, during this conversation, watching the couple closely. Now he stepped forward to the lady's side.

"Who's this gentleman?" he asked, somewhat sharply. "He seems wonderfully familiar."

"Oh," replied the lady, laughing, "he is my cousin, Lieut. Thomas Wilson, and, as you will perceive, is in His Majesty's service."

"You seem rather careless of your dress, considering the occasion, sir," said the Colonel, tartly. He was unmoved at the great interest which the lady had shown the newcomer.

"My business must be my excuse, Colonel," said the young man, respectfully. "I am the bearer of a letter from Maj. Gainey, and my orders are to lose no time in delivering it. I have ridden hard all day, sir, and, upon reaching your headquarters, learned of your presence here. This lady being my cousin, I had no hesitation in reading here at once, trusting for pardon to the urgency of my business."

As he spoke he handed to the Colonel a sealed letter. Watson took it hastily and broke the seal. As he read it a smile of satisfaction overspread his features.

"This is very good," he said gleefully. "Gainey is picking up recruits by the hundreds. Wants 400 rifles, fifty sabers, and some ammunition at once.

Will I send them? To be sure I will. Have you wagons, Lieutenant?"

"No, sir," replied the young man. "Maj. Gainey was afraid to send them down. There's no knowing when or where one may meet that swamp Fox and his sneaking cutthroats."

"Very good," said the Colonel, "I'll furnish you with four wagons, and a guard of fifty mounted men, and a start at sunrise in the morning, Lieutenant. Call at my quarters at midnight, and you shall have the necessary orders. Now, sir, you had better take rest, as you will need it."

"First let me offer him some refreshments," said the widow, quickly. "He is tired and hungry, I know, and my guest must leave my house in such a state."

"Return quickly, then," said the Colonel. "I shall be miserable while you are gone."

The young man offered his arm to the lady, and they left the ball-room; but instead of going to the dining-room she led him straight to her chamber, and then, locking the door, said anxiously:

"For heaven's sake, Charles, what is the meaning of this?"

The young man did not answer verbally, but, catching her to his breast, kissed her passionately, and to be frank, the young widow did not resist him.

"It means," he said at last, in reply to her repeated questions, "that we want arms, and have come for them."

What else they said matters not now; but before they separated Mrs. Garden seemed very well satisfied with the young man's explanation. They then repaired to the supper-room, where the gallant Lieutenant found ample refreshments, and the lady returned to the ball-room where Col. Watson was impatiently awaiting her.

At midnight the Lieutenant called at headquarters, and, faithful to his promise, Col. Watson was there. The necessary orders for the delivery of the arms and ammunition and wagons to Lieut. Thomas Wilson, of the "loyal legion," were made out, and the Colonel also joined in the young man's hand a sealed letter of instructions to Maj. Gainey. The rest of the night was spent in procuring the desired articles, and at sunrise the next morning Lieut. Wilson, with his wagons and their contents, escorted by a guard of fifty men, set out for the "High Hills of Santee," where the Tory Major's headquarters were located.

The wagons and their escort made good time, and by sunset were forty miles from Charleston. The sun was scarce half an hour high when Lieut. Wilson ordered a halt for the purpose of camping for the night. The mounted men fastened their horses to the trees and removing their saddles prepared to cook their evening meal; the teams were unhitched from the wagons and the command biased themselves in preparations for a comfortable night. Every one was busy, and no one noticed that while these arrangements were in progress Lieut. Wilson had drawn off from the party and disappeared in the woods that bordered the road. Suddenly there was a crackling in the brushwood, which caused the British troopers to spring to their feet in alarm. As they did so, a voice, which sounded not unlike that of the young Lieutenant, shouted loudly:

"Surrender, or you are all dead men!"

Gen. Marion secured his prisoners, together with the arms, ammunition, wagons and horses, and set out, after a rest of a few hours, for "Snow Island." At the request of the fugitive Lieut. Wilson, he sent back one of the released to Charleston with a note to Col. Watson, informing him of the trick that had been played on him by the young officer, who, so far from being a lieutenant in the Tory legion, was none other than the famous Charles Hampton, a Captain in Marion's Brigade, who planned and carried out the affair successfully—thanking the Colonel for the excellent weapons and other materials he had sent him, and promising to do good service with them.

The British commander was furious when he read the note, and saw the hoax of which he had been made the victim. He went in haste to Mrs. Garden, but the fair widow had sailed for England. He was compelled to swallow his mortification in silence; and a few years later, when the war was over, his chagrin was not a little increased by the tidings which reached him that Mrs. Garden had married the young officer who had tricked him out of his rifles.—Hertford Times.

Pretty or Not.

TO BE pretty is the great object of almost every living woman, even those who bestow upon this propensity of doing so. Beautiful women spend a great deal of thought upon their own charms, and homely women grow homely through fretting because they are not handsome. Men, at least while they are young, are very like women in this respect, though they hide their feelings better.

There is one comfort to the homely one, however. After you come to know people very intimately, you do not know whether they are pretty or not. Their "ways" make an impression on you; but not their noses and ears, their eyes and mouths. In time, the soul expresses itself to you, and it is that which you see.

A man who has been married twenty years scarce'y knows what his wife looks like. He may declare that he does, and tell you that she is a beauty, or a fright, but if you watch him closely you will find that he is a bewitching little blackie, with soft blue eyes, long after she is fat, and red and forty; because the image of his early love is in his heart, and he doesn't see her as she is to-day, but as she was when he married her. Or, being an indifferent husband, he may not know that she is the fine woman that other people think her. You have known men who have married the plainest women, and think them beauties; and you know beauties who are quite thrown away on men who value a wife for her success as a cook.

As far as one's effect on strangers is to be taken into consideration, beauty is valuable, and very valuable, so. If you have it, rejoice; but, if you have it not, be content. Take care of your heart, your soul, your mind, and your manners, and you will make for yourself that beauty which will render you lovely to those who are nearest and dearest to you.—Frank Leslie's Ladies' Journal.

A Sick Girl's Singular Pet.

A YOUNG, feeble-ribbed woman has lately had an interesting experience with a monstrous rat. She lives with her mother and two sisters, in a couple of humble quarters in neither Liverpool. On account of the efforts of her mother and sisters to support their home, the invalid was frequently left alone for hours. When all was quiet a huge rat made his appearance through an aperture in the closet. The sick girl, having no fear of rodents, threw some crumbs from her table; but for several days the big rat declined, and ventured no further than a head's length beyond the hole. Finally, he took courage and rushed out for the morsels thrown by the feeble hands; still, he made as little delay as possible and the time had grown ripe for close acquaintance. The invalid gradually induced his ratship to make nearer advances, and he began to linger after the daily meal, and gamboled about the floor, until the first strange footstep fell upon the threshold, and then he went off like a flash. Then it became one of the poor girl's sick whims to have her rat's daily portion specially laid by, and the fierce-looking and anomalous pet at length was coaxed to run up the side of the table and nibble his dinner beside his kindly mistress; even then he could not be induced to stay if the most stealthy footfall were heard near the door. The only way in which outsiders could watch his movements was through the little windows on the top of the door. At last he grew to trust himself to be fondled, without offering any treacherous resistance, and the sick girl had not the least fear of him. He was never heard at night, nor was there any other rat about the premises. Thus the feeble hand could secure the strange pet no longer, nor could the poor girl be left alone long enough by one grave-looking, elderly man, and neither man nor horse seemed to be in any hurry whatever.

SALE OF NERBIE.

CHARLIE RUBY'S papa and mamma were poor, and the little boy's toes would persist in peeping from his boots, and his pants and jacket were very like the clothes that the Children of Israel wore in the wilderness, for they were continually showing elbows and knees that wished to hide away from notice.

Now all this was very discouraging to Charlie, who had to run to the baker's and grocer's, and do many other errands beside. But when the poor boy ventured to speak of these troubles to his mother, she would sigh and look around at the little brothers and sisters that were so many that they crowded the small room that was kitchen, parlor and bedroom all in one. Each one of these had toes, elbows and knees that, like Charlie's, would not stay covered, and the poor mother could really do nothing for their troubles, for babies were so plenty and clothing so scarce that she sometimes found herself wishing for more of the latter and less of the former, though after such a wish her heart would smart her, for each of her babies was dear to her; and though she saw, we room was so full that it could hold little more, she would say to herself that the safety of each one depended upon their being all in one. From Charlie (who was the eldest) to the three-months-old infant that lay in her arms, there was a large place in her heart and some sort of a place in the room.

There was Charlie, aged ten; Sam, a year and a half younger; Katie and Jennie, the six-year-old twins; then Mollie, Nebbie and the baby.

Charlie and Sam were frequently obliged to watch over the younger children, which took time that otherwise would have been spent in boyish sports; and Nebbie, who was in reality a baby, but had, by the uncommon, early development out of his place into one that he was not able to fill, was a great trial to the boys' patience. He would cry if they went off without him, or to be carried if taken out for a walk, cry if a stranger spoke to him, and cry if he were hungry, and Charlie and Nebbie's stomachs were a kind that were ready to take in a supply. So Nebbie's tears left his dark eyes moist most of the time.

Now Charlie was a great planner, and Sam considered his elder brother as an oracle that he was always ready to and him in carrying out the plans he favored.

One day, after Charlie had carried Nebbie to the store, to the spring and to the playground, and yet had the little fellow clinging to him when his mother called him in carrying out these plans he favored.

"Now, here's a chance, Sam," cried Charlie, catching up the little victim and running out into the dusty road, "let's run away, and see what we can see."

"Here, mister! do you want to buy Nebbie?" he shouted, as the carriage came near.

The gentleman stopped his horse and looked gravely at the eager faces before him. "What do you say?" he asked, with a nod at Charlie.

"Why, I want to sell this little boy in an airne," replied the other, nothing daunted.

The said gentleman was no less a personage than a neighboring parson, who was studying up his sermon for the coming Sabbath, and had no time nor desire to inquire into the case; so, gently and seriously, he talked to the boys about the sin of trying to sell their brother, and ended by giving the account of Joseph, sold by his brethren; and then he drove on, leaving his disappointed hearers very little gratified by what they had heard.

"I say, Charlie," said Sam, "if them 'ere fellows had their jackets all torn and the patches dangling on their knees, I don't wonder they sold that little chap, do you?"

"No, indeed. I guess that ole gentleman don't know much about boys' clothes, jackets and pants. But I tell you, I just thought of something. The man that drives the feed wagon comes along to-day, and he has often asked me if I'd like to sell one of her babies. If he really wants one maybe he would buy Nebbie. When I asked mother she said he was only in fun; but he never laughed over it, at any rate."

"Let's try him," cried Sam, excitedly.

Poor little Nebbie was wholly unconscious of his coming fate, for he was all too young to understand his brothers' conversation regarding himself.

The afternoon was more than half spent when the great wagon-load of flour and feed came rumbling along the village road. The driver was a great favorite, and very fond of children. He didn't stop to be hailed, but cried "whoa" to his horses, that he might have a chat with the children.

"Please, sir, do you want a little boy, with curly hair Nebbie?" asked Sam, impulsively.

"I don't know," said the driver, with a broad smile. "Why do you wish to sell him?"

"Oh, we all need new clothes," Sobs that, he's such a bother." Here Charlie gave Sam a treacherous kick in the shin, thinking the sale would be spoiled by such lack of judgment in speaking. But the man of the feed wagon, though he was all, acted wholly in accordance with the interruption, and gravely inquired:

"What do you want for the boy?"

"Twenty dollars. That's what the mum said they sold Joseph for, 'cause, is that too much?" And Charlie's face was anxious to an extreme.

"Oh, cheap as dirt. A real bargain, I think," and the driver looked at poor little Nebbie, while his eyes twinkled and his mouth quivered with suppressed laughter.

"Well, will you buy him?" said Sam, anxious to settle the matter at once.

"Does he ever cry?" asked the driver.

Sam and Charlie eyed one another, as much as to say: that's rather a hard question; but a bright thought stirred the latter. "Cry? Oh, sometimes," he said, "but candy will make him stop ever so quick."

"All right—I'll buy him; stow him in, and here's a bright silver quarter for each of you, and you shall have the remainder next week."

Nebbie quite willingly rode away, sitting in state on the large flour bag cushion, and Charlie and Sam went back to the shade of the tree and began to plan how they would spend their money, the price of their brother. But somehow they were not so happy as when Nebbie was with them, and presently they ceased to talk, simply because their hearts were so sad. Charlie hid his face in the grass, and Sam's cheeks were full of tears that came from his brimming eyes. After a time Charlie sobbed aloud, and then Sam asked, in a dolorous tone, if they couldn't get him back.

"I hope so," said Charlie. "I'd rather have backaching, and ermache too, than to part with him, he's such a good little fellow—isn't he, Sam?"

"Yes," said the other piteously.

"And I'd rather wear the old jacket, and pants, too. Oh, dear!" And Sam set up such a dismal howl that his mother came out to see what was the matter, and found her two eldest children making as loud lamentations as the hired mourners of the East, and anxiously she asked what was the cause. The explanation was scarcely commenced when the great rumbling feed wagon drove up to the gate. Charlie rushed out, with Sam at his heels, and Nebbie was held, fast asleep, in his wee, in his eldest brother's arms. The driver was sick of his bargain, so he said. Nebbie had wanted to have him let the horses take care of themselves that he might turn nurse at once. This he could not do, so he brought him back; and if the boys would only take him again they might have the silver quarters, and he would feel that he had been let off easy. And he concluded by saying that he thought they might take him back, for they misrepresented a little when they said candy would always serve to quiet him, for the urchin had cried though a pound of candy was at his disposal.

Nebbie was caressed and kissed till he opened his eyes in wonder. The feeding time drove away, laughing most heartily, and the boys were cured of all desire to sell Nebbie.—N. Y. Witness.

A Honeymoon Telegraph.

A BOSTON marriage was celebrated here a few weeks ago between the daughter of a well-known banker and a young merchant. The demands of business were so pressing that the bridal trip was a short one, and in a very few days the young husband was back in his store attending to business. Now, while this man is remarkable among his friends for his devotion to the interests of his firm, he is likewise known as one of the most lovesick of "lovers." During his courting experience, bouquets, baskets of fruit, perfumed notes and other soft evidences of his gushing love were daily occurrences; and the young lady was remarkable for the sameness of her replies. The general reputation was that of an uncommonly lovesick couple. After marriage the lady had no idea of losing the society of her husband for twenty minutes, then take out the goods and to the liquor and oil of vitriol and stir well. Put in the goods again and let them rest. In the goods again and let them rest. The gentleman is now to be applied to the patient as warm as can be borne.

TIRESIUS.—One corpus bovrlee, one cause gum arabic, one ounce emblex. (Those must be pulverized in the finest glass'e.) one pound powdered sugar, two tablespoonfuls paregoric, water enough to moisten. Then take dose sufficient to make it roll out easily, cut out with a thimble, and dry thoroughly on a platter.—N. Y. Times.

WHY not make your own vinegar? Take a common apple-barrel, or make a small bucket of clean boards, and into these thaw all the cores and parings of fruit, as they accumulate. Let them ferment and drain the juice into jugs. It is vinegar at once. After fermentation, a little water may be added, which will burry the process.—Detroit Tribune.

GINGER SNAPS.—Two teaspoonfuls of molasses, one of sugar, one of butter or pork-drippings, one half of each of the latter two; one tablespoonful of ginger, a teaspoonful of ground cinnamon, one of cloves; one teaspoonful saleratus dissolved into the cup with boiling water, stir all together, mix not too stiff, roll out a little thicker than for cookies, cut out, bake in a quick oven.—Rural Home.

COLORING COTTON GREEN.—For ten pounds of cotton carpet yarn, boil half a loose sack four pounds of fustic for two hours. Take out the sack and add two ounces of blue vitriol, dissolved and put in the yarn; keep it boiling gently one-half hour, stirring all the time. Then lift out the yarn, add to the water four ounces of bright yellow, and when well put in the yarn and stir gently for fifteen minutes. Leave it until cold, take out, rinse in cold water and dry in the shade.

HEAD CHEESE.—Clean the legs nicely and boil by themselves, so that when done there will be plenty of the liquor. Boil the upper head, minus ears, eyes and nose, in a considerable lean meat, tenderloin is best, and when done remove bones and skin from head and boiling liquor; add the feet and pepper legs; chop the lean; salt and pepper to suit the taste, and the liquor the legs were boiled in, and last, but not least, a teacupful of vinegar and a tablespoonful of catsup to every gallon. When thoroughly cold it can be cut out in slices. This makes the best head cheese.

COLORING COTTON BLUE.—Take two pounds of copperas, one and a half pounds of prussiate of potash, one-half pound of oil of vitriol. Dissolve the copperas in enough hot water to cover the goods. Small two hours. Take out the goods and put in cold water; then empty the kettle and put in fresh, soft water, sufficient to cover the goods well; add the prussiate of potash, put in the goods and boil twenty minutes; then take out the goods and to the liquor add oil of vitriol and stir well. Put in the goods again and let them rest. The bath is now as dark as desired. Rinse in cold water.

Bleaching Cotton.

SOME of our readers may find it a great convenience to be able to bleach a few hanks or short pattern warps, in order to get clean bonnets, and therefore, we give the following safe method:

Boil well your twist, having first put in the water two ounces of soda and to the gallon of water; wash off in cold water. Mix one pound of fresh chloride of lime in two pints of water, crushing all the lumps, and then add forty-three pints more water. After allowing time for the lime to settle, pour off the clear chloride liquor, and immerse the yarn for about seven hours, in a cool place. Care must be taken to keep the chloride solution and the yarn from contact with iron. Wring out and wash in cold water, and do not allow the yarn to remain in the air very long. Then immerse in a well-mixed solution composed of twenty-six drachms of double oil of vitriol to forty-five pints of water. Allow the yarn to remain in this acid solution ten hours, then wring out and wash off in cold water. In order to thoroughly remove the acid, work it well through a good white soap bath, and to this add a little marine blue to give the yarn my desired hue. Finally, wash through warm water to clear away the soap. These proportions will do the least possible injury to the strength of the yarn. The solutions may be used stronger if it is desired to shorten the length of time of the processes. If soft nude yarn has to be bleached the solution may be used about one-third weaker; but if doubled yarn, the strength of the solutions must be increased, according to the perfection required in bleaching.—Textile Manufacturer.

JESSE BENT, the late Register of Deeds for Kent County, on retiring from office took over books of deeds covering a period of three years, from his office, claiming them as private property. On the 9th the books were recovered by the county sheriff.

A MAN NAMED M. HALEY was found in a dying condition the other morning between Au Sable and Fond River on the 9th, frozen to death. He left Rose Lake for Fond River the day before, and Haley was almost state-proof, and had no family.

THE proceedings of the State Board of Health this year were $2,230.61.

GOV. CROSSWELL'S INAUGURAL.

The inaugural address of Gov. Crosswell was delivered in the Legislature in joint session, on the afternoon of the 9th. He congratulates the people on the financial condition of the State, and suggests changes in the present system of taxation. He recommends the establishment of a State Board of Equalization, to consist of the Governor, Auditor General and Treasurer of State, whose duty it shall be to equalize the valuation of property throughout the State, and to report to the Legislature at each session the amount of taxes for State purposes to be raised in each county. He recommends the passage of laws to prevent the adulteration of milk, and in regard to the sale of lands for delinquent taxes. He recommends the passage of a law limiting the liability of railroad companies for loss of baggage to $100, unless a higher value is declared, and the payment of additional charges. He recommends the passage of a law requiring railroad companies to report to commissioners the amount of freight carried over their roads, and the rates charged. He recommends the passage of a law providing for the appointment of a commissioner of railroads, whose duty it shall be to investigate the business methods of railroad companies. The message at nineteen pages of foolscap. The Governor recommends the establishment of a State Reform School for the reformation of juvenile offenders, and the passage of a law providing for the appointment of a commissioner of labor statistics.

MORTGAGE SALE.—Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage bearing date the twenty-fourth day of A. D. 1868, and executed by Hampton Newcomb and Mahala Ann Newcomb, his wife, of Charlevoix county, Michigan, to Rensselaer Hall, of Rock Island, Illinois, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Charlevoix county, Michigan, on the 25th day of January, A. D. 1869, in Liber 1 of Mortgages, on page 69, which said mortgage was on the 24th day of November, A. D. 1875, duly assigned by said Rensselaer Hall to Orlando H. Newcomb, of Rock Island, Illinois, and by the said Orlando H. Newcomb to the undersigned, and which said assignments of said mortgage were duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of said county of Charlevoix, on the 24th day of November, A. D. 1875, at 9 o'clock A. M., in Liber 1 of Mortgages, on page 69, and which said mortgage is now owned by the undersigned, and on which said mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of Two Hundred and Seventy-five Dollars and Seventy-five Cents, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof, and the power of sale contained in said mortgage having become operative by reason of such default, notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described therein, to wit: The south half of the southeast quarter of section number twenty-six, in township number thirty-three north of range number five west, containing eighty acres of land, more or less, according to the United States survey thereof, at public auction or vendue, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House in the village of Charlevoix, in said county of Charlevoix, on the 24th day of January, A. D. 1876, at 10 o'clock A. M. of that day, to pay the amount due on said mortgage, with interest and costs of foreclosure and sale.

A Sterling Vegetable Remedy

Which Eradicates

DISEASES OF THE THROAT AND LUNGS, DYSPEPSIA, CHAVEL-PAINS, URINARY TROUBLES, NERVOUS DEBILITY, EXPECTORATION OF BLOOD, TORMENT OF THE LIVER, CONSTIPATION, SCROFULOUS AFFECTIONS, AND FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

For nearly a quarter of a century this sterling preparation has been offering cures of the various diseases to which it is adapted, and thousands of persons, of perfect reliability, in all cases of recovery have given testimony to its wondrous remedial efficacy.

As a remedy for diseases of the Throat and Lungs it has achieved a popularity rivalled by but few of the patentary remedies. Experience has shown that for those who are troubled with weakness of the lungs it is the best possible protective against Consumption, and it may be relied on with certainty to eradicate Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup, Diphtheria, and Soreness of the Chest.

Coughs of the most obstinate kind are speedily overcome by it, and since a simple cough is very prone to develop into some inflammation of the lungs, the early use of Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial is theoretically as well as practically essential, as it not only prevents the further progress of the disease.

Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Torpidity of the Liver and of the Kidneys are promptly overcome by this superb vegetable corrective, which not only regulates but strengthens the organs of digestion, as well as those of the urinary and biliary secretions. It imparts unvarnished relish for the food, and by promoting digestion and assimilation, enriches the blood, which is the natural motor of vital energy and nutriment to the system.

Dr. L. G. G. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial thoroughly purifies the bowels, removes Bread and Bowling Pains, banishes from the system all dyspepsia and all other impurities, and effectually counteracts a tendency to Gravel. It also entirely obviates the weakness incident to females.

Dr. L. G. G. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial is no mere placebo. It is a medical medicine, and has been repeatedly recognized as such by the press and members of the medical profession, who emphatically endorse a popular verdict long since rendered in its favor.

THE NEWS.

AT HOME.

THE Democrats of the Illinois legislature nominated Gen John M Palmer as their candidate for United States Senator on the 12th.

A KEROSENE lamp exploded in Rochester, N Y, on the evening of the 12th. The fire which followed burned up a church and other property valued at $40,000.

J. G. BENNETT sailed for Europe on the 13th on the steamer Scotia. The report that Bennett and Miss May had been married was decidedly incorrect. It was stated on the 14th that Fred May was wounded in the duel with Mr. Bennett, and that he was then in Baltimore under the care of Dr Allan Smith.

THE case of the United States Supreme Court decided that land grant railroads are not bound to transport troops and property of the United States free of charge, and that they are each entitled to compensation for all such transportation they have performed, excepting the carrying of the mails, subject to a fair deduction for the use of their several roads.

HON WM A WHEELER exemplied his seat in Congress on the 13th for the first time since his election. He will be sworn in as United States to recognize either Governor, it must be Packard. Shortly after the 14th Packard issued a proclamation calling upon that body of persons pretending to be the General Assembly of Louisiana to disperse and desist from any further legislative usurpation, etc., meaning the Democratic Legislature. Nichols and his Legislature, the Associated Press dispatch says, met and held the pandemonium, and would resist any attempt to reorganize the court and usurp the offices. Judge Shaw had issued a writ of habeas corpus requiring the Sheriff to produce the bodies of the Assistant Sergeants-at-Arms then in the Packard Senators who were held in custody in Pinchback's house. The Clerk of the Sixth District Court had also issued an order directing the Sheriff to produce a sufficient force to protect the Court from violence and intrusion at the hands of the lawless and unauthorized mob. It was almost totally destroyed by fire. Loss, $75,000.

THE Maine Legislature elected Hon James G Blaine United States Senator for three and long terms on the 16th. The vote was nearly unanimous.

A NEW YORK dispatch of the 15th says that Judge Donahue, of the Supreme Court, has released Phelps from custody, holding that he was justified in refusing to answer certain questions propounded by the Grand Jury in relation to the Tweed May duel.

THE Arkansas legislature elected Hon B H Garland, Dem, United States Senator, on the 16th, by a nearly unanimous vote.

THE Legislatures of Minnesota and Michigan on the 16th, re-elected Messrs Windom and Ferry to the United States Senate from their respective States.

ROAD AGENT JOSEPH SMITH, the oldest officer of the army, died in Washington on the 17th

A WASHINGTON dispatch of the 17th says that the Electoral Commission on Counting the Electoral Votes had agreed upon a report according to which the decision of commissioners questions would be submitted to a tribunal composed of five Judges of the Supreme Court and five members of each house. Multiple or several decisions of the final tribunal to be rendered by the concurrent vote of both houses of Congress.

THE New Hampshire State Democratic Convention was held at Concord on the 17th. Hon. Daniel Marcy was nominated for Governor and Thomas Dinsmore for Railroad Commissioner. The resolutions denounce the alleged conspiracy to place Mr Hayes in the Presidential Chair, in defiance of the will of the majority, and pronounce Mr Tilden the unquestioned choice by either of the opposing political parties.

NEW ORLEANS dispatches of the 17th say that the situation is unchanged. The State Governments are regarded as past for the present. Gen Augur replied to Gov. Packard's letter of the preceding day, and declined to intervene in the affairs of the State, on the ground that the Constitution called upon the Governor. In the Republican House, Barrett and Kennedy, who had gone over to the Democratic House, were expelled. In the Democratic Senate, Mr. Eustis introduced a resolution setting forth that one Packard, falsely assuming to be Governor, and by means of a scandalous and libelous publication, purporting to be proclamations addressed to the General Assembly and the lawful authorities, sought to bring them into contempt, and instructing the Committee on Judiciary to inquire whether said Packard by authorizing said scandalous and libelous publication has not committed a breach of the privileges of this body, and to what measure, if any, should be taken to punish said Packard for said contempt, and to maintain the dignity and authority of this body." So ordered. The House bill in reference to the protection of colored people was passed unanimously.

CONGRESSIONAL.

ON the 15th a resolution was passed in the Senate to print 65,000 extra copies of the testimony taken before the Committee on Privileges and Elections in regard to the late elections in Louisiana, Florida and South Carolina. A large number of petitions were presented and referred. New rules were reported and considered for the government of the Senate. The time for the report of the committee to inquire into the charges in the relative value of gold and silver, the causes thereof, etc., was extended to Feb 28. Mr Windom made a personal explanation relative to certain charges submitted to Count Bismarck and received his indorsement.

CONSTANTINOPLE dispatches of the 18th say the Grand Council of the Empire met on that day to discuss the intimation of the Great Powers. Speeches were made by leading dignitaries, and at last the Council unanimously voted to reject the proposals of the Conference, and should it [illegible] Death before dishonor." Midhat Pasha asked whether the Porte might enter upon negotiations with the Powers respecting the rejected points. The Council said he could not, and declared that the Turkish monitor proposals were the only subjects to be further considered.

Report of the Congressional Joint Electoral Committee.

WASHINGTON Jan 18.

The following is the report of the Committee of the Senate and the House of Representatives appointed under the several resolutions of these bodies to prepare and report a mode to examine and count the final ballot to accomplish the lawful counting of the Electoral votes, and the best method of settling all questions arising therewith, and due declaration of the result. The committee say that they have considered the subject assigned in said resolutions, and have had full and free conference with each other thereon, and now report the accompanying bill and recommend its passage. The committee continue:

We have applied the utmost practicable study and deliberation to the subject, and believe that the bill now reported is the best attainable. It is framed in accordance with the views and disputed theories arising out of the late election. It is framed in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution, and a wide discretion of question was searched and the resolution was reported to the Senate.

The Conference of the representatives of the Great Powers held at Constantinople on the 15th presented an ultimatum to Turkey. The former demands were essentially modified, the loans connected with the appointment of the Superintendence Commission and the Governors. The Porte asked time for consideration, and until the 20th was given.

According to confidential dispatches of the 16th, the Turkish Ministry had telegraphed Servia advising peace, since no event would the surrender be demanded before the first of March, and a Turkish army would be marched against Belgrade immediately thereafter.

THE French Minister to the United States has been recalled, and Max Outrey, at present French Minister to Japan, appointed his place.

Belgrade dispatches of the 17th say Russia had assumed the payment of a mixed brigade of 6,000 men in the Servian service. The Poles were reported to be exceedingly wanting and disposed to take advantage of Russia's difficulties. Turkey and Servia had agreed to exchange prisoners.

Advances to Berlin dispatches of the 17th, the German Ambassador at Constantinople had been instructed not to sign the final protocol, to be submitted to the Conference, until the full text thereof had been submitted to Count Bismarck and received his indorsement.

Accounts to London dispatches of the 18th, the Conference had decided to make a last appeal to the Porte on the 20th, and demand a categorical answer on the 25th. The Sultan had resolved, if his agreement was reached by the last of February, to renew hostilities with Servia and Montenegro. A note had been presented to the Turkish Minister of Foreign Affairs demanding that Turkey recognize the Servian and Montenegrin forces as integral portion of the Ottoman Empire.

A request was made, on the 16th, by Robinson for reparation for an outrage committed a few days before by the Baton Rouge in crossing the bauche, murdering a Roumanian sergeant and killing two Roumanian soldiers.

THE Spanish merchant steamer Montserrat, captured by the Cuban insurgents, is reported to have been burned on the approach of a Spanish war steamer, and her captors fled to the Venezuelan coast.

President Anderson, of Vermont University, thinks that we should not have recourse to the great power of prayer for every sickness, and considers that if given, the best mode would be for the rest of the body.

A pine pensel, engaged in the state near Vernon, has made diamond on emeritus fakir with silver coin dollars from the nights of the last Indian campaigns. The value of the trinkets was estimated at $1,000.

The late James G. Arms, president of the man was free on in spite of the objections of the physicians. A few eight ago his master said that he to meet could not live a week, but the next man is not subjective to duty, but continues his literary labors.

Lemon Hosely and Constance have each hired $100 by the Lord for the exercise of a Shakespeare memory of both on Sept. 1st Avon. Of the sum deposited ($10,000), the bank is a party, $5,000 has been subscribed, and Payne Longest will lay the corner stone on April 23.

The army of Boston ground to an explosive condition. "Early Rollers," who recently yearly pay the sum of $25 to $35 that the son of Jo Joint III. will be officially proclaimed. Property in Boston during recent a distance. The followers as most susceptible by the Prince of Wales and by three or four persons.

At one of the Opera recent receptions a young American girl, whose height was remarkable, received the Morning and rose slowly from her knee. To be gay to smile and made his kind again "Miss," he said, "I could once to give you a seat of such a kind."

A keen London correspondent, who seems to be one too much of the pastimes, expresses that he is not willing the interest of the Queen Mary in the matter to the interest that of the people. Those letter were directed at a certain point in the late parties were interrogation and denial.

A lady of Derry, New York, residing in a commercial town has lived in New York, should never Tuesday night of drinking lively and coming home her aged husband, doing and with a revolver. The phenomena young girl on the ing asked the opinion of the editor, observed: "The only to do with mutual to take care that he does."

Journalism in Louisiana is fashions Gambling. Another paper has made a prospectus of a new paper. To be called the Rattle-de-bo. Its subscribers contain the Editor's telegram announcement "Truth, cold bath, substituted in bread exactly, mixed with nitro-glycerine and dynamite, set on fire by the lightning volcanic blaze of indignation of a score fire, has now robbed and enslaved commonwealth, becomes insufferable and treasured in all honest men." Rock Pomeroy in their capacity would find his occupation gone.

The English sparrows have deserted Boston and gone West. A resident of Cambridge, who has lost his head by watch the birds and has kept food for them on the premises ever since the first snow fell, observed a flying off of the grasshoppers upon his dwelling last week, and on Sunday his family can no longer be induced by Hadley cornet that large gatherings of the year were generally ended in a high flight and to the appearance of the flies in Winter. They were exclusively dispersed with the city seats of Rather.

For nearly a quarter of a century this sterling preparation has been curing cases of the various diseases to which it is adapted, and thousands of persons, of great variety in all climes of country have borne evidence to its wonderful remedial power.

As a remedy for diseases of the Throat and Lungs it has achieved a popularity rivalled by that of few proprietary remedies. Experience has shown that for those who are troubled with weakness of the Lungs it is the best possible preventive against Consumption, and it may be relied on with certainty to eradicate Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup, Influenza, and all disorders of the Chest.

Coughs of the most obstinate kind are speedily overcome by it, and even a simple cough is very prone to develop itself into inflammation of the Lungs, the early use of Dr. Wishart's PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL correctly prevents the Wexford County had been taken from course to circumstances by an attempt to remove the county seat from Cadillac to Boon Mills. Charges of bribery and corruption to obtain the removal were made against Clam Lake parties who hoped to get the county seat removed to that place "ers Boon's Mills" as Hon. T. A. Ferguson puts it, and our supervisor named Philip Frost was offered $70 for his removal, and accepted $10 to "shut the bargain," after which he "sparkled," and leaves Wexford in the Clam Lake News in a "right merry" mood as the matter is passed.

A WASHINGTON Associated Press dispatch of the 19th says: "In view of the fact that Justices Miller and Field are two of the four Judges especially designated by the Joint Committees bill to be members of the Commission, the respective friends of these gentlemen desire it to be stated that a recently reported conversation with Justice Miller in which it was alleged he had given public and emphatic views on the Presidential question, is greatly exaggerated, also, that the published statement that Justice Field, as a dinner party at the house of a Republican Senator, recently, expressed his opinion on the Presidential question as regarding the action of the Louisiana Returning Board, is entirely untrue. The Republican Senator referred to has consulted gentlemen who authorizes an emphatic denial of the whole story. Justice Field's remark on that occasion was simply to the effect that he believed there was good sense and patriotism enough in the two houses of Congress to prevent any fraud being perpetrated, and that there would be no difficulty in counting and declaring the result peaceably and satisfactorily although."

On the 19th, the Massachusetts Legislature elected George F. Hoar to succeed Mr Boutwell in the United States Senate on the 4th of March. The Senatorial caucus on Democratic side closed on the 19th, and resulted in the election, on the seventy-third ballot of James O. Bailey to fill the vacancy in the United States Senate caused by the death of Andrew Johnson. The Nebraska Legislature, on the 19th, elected Alvin Saunders United States Senator, to succeed Senator Hitchcock, whose term will expire on the 4th of March.

It is said that President Grant has stated that he will sign the bill providing for counting the Electoral vote in case it passes both houses of Congress.

H. G. DEWEY & Co., in their annual circular state that business failures in the United States for 1876 numbered 10,862, against 7,740 in 1875. The total liabilities of these failures were, in 1876, $191,117,786, in 1875, $201,060,359.

The dead body of Charles Collins, Chief Engineer of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railroad, was found in his room in Cleveland, Ohio, on the morning of the 20th, with the appearance of having been murdered two or four days. The revolver was held fast in his hand, while another and a razor lay near by him on the bed. A telegram says it was an undoubted case of suicide by shooting. His supposed the insanity on account of the late accident at Ashtabula had made him deranged. His family was absent at the time of the suicide.

GOV HENDRICKS was interviewed on the 21st relative to the plan proposed by the Joint Committee of Congress for settling the Louisiana Returning Board case, and said to have expressed himself gratified that "so fair a bill had been reported," and he thought it would be accepted by the country.

SENATOR of the Bennett May died, the New York Tribune of the 21st says: "Letters from one of the seceded in the dust have been exhibited to us, which make the following facts clear: (1) That May, as the challenged party, having the right to a choice of weapons, chose cavalry sabers. (2) That Bennett's friends objected, on the ground that this gave May an advantage; (3) That May's friends yielded their claim, and assented to dueling pistols. (4) That the terms were settled by telegrams. (5) That no witnesses were present, even the surgeon remaining at a distance. (6) That they, or in sight of the dueling ground being the two principals and their two seconds. (6) That the word was given three times, first, one, two, three; stop. May was not to move their pistols from the perpendicular until the word 'fire' was pronounced, and not to fire after the word 'stop' was pronounced, and the seconds having the right to shoot down either man who disobeyed this requirement. (7) That this act and May fired almost simultaneously at the word 'one.' (8) That neither was touched; (9) That Bennetts friends then proposed themselves satisfied; and (10) that the parties straightway separated, the whole affair scarcely lasting quarter of an minutes. These we have reason to believe, are, so far as they go, the exact facts."

On the 22d, in the District Court of the Southern District of New York, United States District Attorney Bliss commenced suit, on a capias, against ex-Gov. Samuel J. Tilden, to recover $250,000, alleged to be the balance due for income tax. The capias was made returnable on the 5th of February.

THE Philadelphia Board of Trade, on the 23d, adopted resolutions approving the compromise plan for settling the Presidential question, and in Harrisburg, on the evening of the same day, at a large meeting of citizens, resolutions were adopted indorsing the report of the committee.

On the 23d, the New Jersey legislature elected John R. MacPherson to the United States Senate, by a joint majority over F. T. Frelinghuysen, the present Senator.

On the 23d the Minnesota Senate, by a decided majority, adopted John resolutions instructing her Senators, and requesting her Representatives, in Congress to support the bill pending before that body to settle the Presidential complications. The Indianapolis, Chicago and St. Louis Boards of Trade have also adopted resolutions favoring the Compromise Electoral bill, and requesting Senators and Members on Congress from their respective States to support it.

THE Secretary of the Treasury, on the 24th, issued a call for the redemption of $10,918,100 of 7-20 bonds of 1865, May and November.

A WASHINGTON dispatch of the 24th says ex-Secretary Belknap had modified the District Attorney that he should appear on the 29th inst. for an immediate trial of the suit against him in the Circuit Court of the District, and ask to be discharged in case the prosecution were not ready to proceed with it.

THE Judiciary Committee of the National House of Representatives have resolved that articles of impeachment should not be preferred against George M. Robeson, Secretary of the Navy.

ON the 24th, the Connecticut Senate passed resolutions indorsing the Compromise Electoral bill pending in Congress. At a large meeting at Parnell Hall, Boston, on the 24th, the Conference plan of a Republican Senator, recently, expressed his opinion on the Presidential question as regarding the action of the Louisiana Returning Board, is entirely untrue. WILLARD A. SMITH,
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

News of interest is scarce this week. The eyes of the country are turned so exactly on Washington during the novel and memorable proceedings of Congress touching the political deadlock that local events seem to be waiting in suspense for the results there to be made known, before resuming their regular march. I can therefore do little to-day but, like Mrs. Iago "sit/stitche small beer" and note a few of the present incidents, amusements and vagaries of New York life.

A novel effort in the revival line is now being made by some enthusiasts who have set themselves the task of "running the mesmeric" in Wall street. Meetings are daily held, and all of the bulls and bears who can be got to attend get hot shot from the long haired exhorters who adjure them in the most vehement manner to renounce their "ways that are dark" and can form the whole system of "puts," "calls" and "straddles" to a standard of high morality. The "stock" go about quoting "Platonism Pat" above par/pity and weakening and "Mansions in the Skies" as strong and rising rapidly. No one but the laborers themselves in this somewhat unpromising vineyard seems to regard this movement at all seriously, and it will be short-lived beyond a doubt. Wall St. brokers are about the last class of men on the American Continent to be "bulldozed" into the pews of the church.

The sleepy quiet of Staten Island has been a little broken in this week by the operations of some adventurous spirits from New Jersey, turning with desire to pass the old world's regime to have been birthed in the soil of that locality in revolutionary and even pre-revolutionary periods. Legends as setting the existence of such treasure treasures have always been more or less current on the island, and on other occasions trifling sessions in old spanish and English coins have been either turned up by the ploughshare or found secreted in the walls of old buildings. Of course these have been sufficient to keep alive the old stories and maintain an interest in the place in the customers of Monte Cristo. Of late efforts in this direction have been fruitless no more bound boxes filled with gold and diamonds rewarding the labor which has honey combed the hills of the Island in the search. Nothing deterred by this ill success, however, a party of five valiant Jerseymen have three times during the last fortnight crossed the intervening water at midnight, and by the ghastly light of a dark lantern dug what the terrified observer might well have imagined to be the secret graves of murderers. Although nothing has thus far come of these endeavors to discover a royal road to wealth, perseverance is said to accomplish all things, and I may yet be called upon to chronicle a resurrection of treasure which will cover those barren slopes with gold mines from this hard pinched island of Manhattan.

For some time the world has heard but little of our eminent reformer, philosopher, and former candidate for the Presidency, Mr Geo. Francis Train. Now however he is out again—large as life and twice as natural—in a small two cent paper with the motto "Live lions is turn lions! Age from the new Sunc man in this mad world," and call of "Geo. Francis Train's Paper." In the initial number Mr. Train styles himself "The most remarkable man living or dead," and I hardly think it would be safe to dispute him. The paper is evidently all from the same pen and is the most amusing and astounding collection of rant and nonsense, sprinkled here and there with sharp bits of truth, that it is possible to conceive. Whether it will be continued is a question which probably the illustrious editor himself could not answer, but as nothing which he ever yet did has succeeded, it is more than likely that the first issue will be the last as well.

Train used to call himself worth $20,000,000 when he controlled most of the real estate in Omaha, but now acknowledges himself bankrupt. There was enough method in his madness, however, to settle a moderate fortune on his wife in the days of his prosperity, so he lives comfortably enough now. Throughout the present weather of the past year he has almost lived in the open air, the benches in Madison square being his favorite resort. Here he could be found morning, noon and night, reading his paper, sunbrowned and hearty, the very picture of repose and good health. When not thus engaged in watching the affairs of the world, he was usually busy with his only friends, the bird and the children, with both of which thread and aberrant classes of the community, to his credit be it said, he seems a good favorite. His cutting bread crumbs to the one, sugar plums to the other, and talks to them all alike. With the grown up portions of humanity Train professes to wish little to do. He will shake hands with no one, and allows no one to sit down beside him. Conversation with acquaintances he limits to five minutes duration, giving as a reason that such conversation draw too much on its store of "magnetism," and has a scale of similar original and recently imposed rules of life. Whether he be at present under the influence of one who has ever talked with him half an hour can doubt that a powerful and useful man was spoiled by leaving the balanced wheel out of the intellectual mechanism of George Francis Train.

Spurred on by the continuous cold of this winter, there has been a general line and cry after the horse car companies to have them to provide means for fighting their own oppressor. The pressure was in fact so strong that the Common Council had to appoint a special committee to investigate the subject and report on the feasibility of the innovation desired. The committee has just reported against compelling the corporations to make such provision for the comfort of the public, and shivering and cold lose will continue to be the order for the long traversing public for the rest of this year at least.

A new spat started this week by the opening of the ice yachting season on the Hudson river. The fun must here intimating to say the least, as the upset craft ran with a favorable wind rather better than a mile a minute.

At the Tenth Avenue Theatre Mr. Daly's new comic romance in Lemons" is being nightly received to the great satisfaction of both manager and audience.

At Wallack's Mr. Lester Wallack is acting for the first time this season. The play is one expressly written for him and called "All in the Way."

Miss Emma Abbott, the young American vocalist, whose success, deserved and welcome in Europe have been the subjects of frequent comment in the American press for several years past, has created a sensation generally in the country, commencing early in February.

We have also been enjoying our first season of opera this winter. Four performances have been given at the Academy of Music by the Kellogg English Opera Troupe, under the management of Max Strakosch. In them the novelty of the season is Wallace's much talked of opera of "Lurline." The music is pleasing and the opera is well mounted, but the singers have failed to call forth any enthusiasm, albeit Miss Georgiana Kellogg has created a favorable impression. The Academy of Music is the leading English Opera House, under the management of Max Strakosch. It has the novelty of this season in Wallace's much talked of opera of "The Flying Dutchman" which this troupe has had the honor of bringing out for the first time in America. The immense audiences which have packed the Academy from floor to ceiling at every performance attest Mr. Strakosch's judgment in the matter.

And apropos of the opera there has been a rumor on foot for some months that New York was to have, through the exertions of the well known impresario Strakosch a mammoth and palatial opera house, with every variety of music attachment and all the—everything to astonish Europe, Asia, Africa and New Jersey—and that work would be commenced this season. This little story has been tenderly fostered by the newspapers, which one day this week got nations along so far as the purchase for $250,000 from Wm H. Vanderbilt, of the site of the building, a block of land near the Grand Central Depot, by the stock company having the enterprise in charge. The announcement was made at the same time that Mr. Vanderbilt was a heavy holder of the stock, and that an architect had been employed to commence operations at once. The latest announcement, brought out a characteristic crowd of contractors all hungry for a job, and further induced an investigation which elicited the facts that Mr. Vanderbilt doesn't own the property in question, that it hasn't been sold to anybody, that Mr. V. owns no stock in any such company, and does'nt want to, that no plans for any such building have been given out, and that the whole thing has grown in aggravated case of "castle in the air." We don't talk as we did about "our Opera House" now as we did.

President Grant's Message Relative to the Use of Troops in the South.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.

I come to the consideration of the House of Representatives invited action by the Senate by the message of the President of the United States, communicating the President to the House of Representatives, that body copies of all orders and instructions emanating from him or from the Executive Departments or any officer or commander or civil officer acting under the orders of the army in Virginia, Georgia, Louisiana and Mississippi from the 1st of August last to present such all reports from any of said officers or officials as the President may call for before the House of Representatives, the following message, after stating the House resolutions reached him on the 15th of December, the President says:

"I have not considered it compatible with the public interest at any time during the progress of the inquiry to communicate to the House of Representatives information in the course of the inquiry, but have from time to time communicated to the House of Representatives already made public. The delay in answering the present resolution was occasioned by the necessity of collecting the information required from the different parts of South Carolina, and a desire to embrace in the answer all the information which might be necessary. The documents accompanying this message will be found to contain all the information in regard to the condition of affairs in South Carolina which I possess, except such as would be improper to make public at present. Many of the statements of fact set forth in the accompanying papers are verified by the affidavits of the parties making them, and others are within the personal knowledge of officers in the employment of the United States. These communications I have chosen to regard as private, because I have not considered it consistent with the duties of my office to make them the basis for the publication of charges against the character of citizens of the United States, which publication of the evil results of which I have already had too much experience. Should the House of Representatives, acting under the Constitution, deem it proper to make the charges public, I will cheerfully furnish the names of the witnesses by whom the facts can be established, and will take such steps for the protection of the witnesses as may be in my power. I do not feel at liberty to withhold from the House of Representatives any information in my possession which they may deem necessary to the proper performance of their duties in the premises, and submit the settlement of the State and of the United States. Acting under the duty on the Revised Statutes of the United States, commanding the President of the United States to guarantee to each State and every State in which the laws of the United States may be opposed, and the execution thereof obstructed by combinations too powerful to be suppressed by the ordinary course of judicial proceedings, or by the powers vested in the marshals by law, application may be made to the Legislature or the Executive (when the Legislature cannot be convened) for such aid as may be required to suppress such opposition and enforce such laws. I shall promptly take such steps as may be necessary to enable any State or people to procure such legislation as may be required to protect life and property, and to secure the enforcement of the laws and the punishment of offenders. Anticipating the possibility that I may be called upon to exercise the powers conferred upon me by the Constitution and laws to suppress insurrection, domestic violence, and to enforce the faithful execution of the laws of the United States, and to preserve the peace of the United States after the present has been laid and where the proper authorities of any State or Territory fail to make application for such aid when such application would be in time to enable me to act before the end of the session, I request that I may be authorized to act if such case should occur, and that the necessary appropriation be made therefor. The circumstances which may call for the interposition of the United States are fully set forth in the accompanying papers, and I refer to them for information in regard to the present condition of affairs in South Carolina. I have no reason to suppose that the condition of affairs in Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and in Texas, as set forth in the newspapers of the several States, recommending "the Mississippi plan," is exaggerated, but I do not consider it necessary to call the attention of Congress to the facts."

Local News.

A girl at Doc Wood's house Saturday morning. Ten pounds.

S. S. Lissonn and daughters arrived in town on Friday for permanent residence. His wife will follow next week

DENTAL.—Dr. DeWitt A Burnett, Physician and Dental Surgeon, will be in Charlevoix to-day and remain for a season to attend to all work in his line

THE Board of Supervisors of Antrim County are to have a meeting on the 16th, to consider the county seat question.

CHANGED HANDS.—James Kerr has sold to Geo. Anderson the farm on Section 16 in Marion, formerly known as the Geo Clark place, for $950.

DIED.—Philip D M Harris, a colored man who resided about seven miles south of this village, died on Tuesday after three weeks illness, of inflammation of the bowels.

O. S. WASHBURN.—We understand Mr Washburn and family have been detained in Wisconsin by the serious illness of one or more of their children, of diphtheria.

PUBLIC SERVICES will be held at the school house on Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday Evenings at 7 o'clock, preaching by the Presiding Elder. Quarterly meeting next Sabbath.

THE Ladies Aid Society, will hold a variety social at the House of Hon. John Nichols, on Tuesday evening, Feb. 13, 1877. A cordial invitation is extended to all. MRS. E. A. BUTTARS Sec'y.

EMMET COUNTY ITEMS.—We are indebted to the Little Traverse Republican for the following:

Lake Michigan, viewed from Crosse Village, is frozen out as far as visible to the naked eye.

Messrs Butler and Dolf, of Little Traverse, have purchased the mill at Crosse Village, and will commence fitting it up immediately.

The Sentinel.

Our readers will observe that with this issue we have reduced the size of the SENTINEL one column on each page. It is only necessary to state that our income for the past year,

1st. The expense of publishing the largest paper ever issued by the press,

2d. The retirement of a large number of outstanding accounts of subscription in the aggregate amounting to a very large sum for no income, together with no responsible business.

When the SENTINEL was enlarged, it was in the midst of advancement of labor and promising prospects. Patronage seemed to be concentrated that business interest, were on the rise, and our enterprise would meet with a compensating encouragement. Such did not prove to be the fact, and the result is before our readers.

The change however, will not alter the final fate and aim of the SENTINEL. Just as many columns of local news will continue to be furnished, and but four columns less of inside matter.

The price of the SENTINEL is reduced to one dollar and fifty cents per annum. This places it in the power of every family to get their home paper, which we hope they will do.

S. C. Rose, brother of H. O. Rose, of Petoskey, died at Coldwater, on the 24th of last month. He was for many years a prominent railroad contractor, having built a portion of the L. S. & M. S. & Michigan Southern through this State. His age was 65.

SUICIDE BY ICE.—Wm. Harris, of Norwood, committed the infanticide one day last week that his wife, who is under medical treatment in Battle Creek, was not expected to live. Although Mr. Harris' friends thought he was also quite seriously ill, he took his family and left for parts unknown.

DARING ROBBERY.—On Monday evening last, while Solomon Dawson was at the supper, some person broke open the back door of the store, and took from the drawer a pocket book containing $200 in cash and $200 in notes, bonds and orders. No clue has been found to the detection of the robber.

BY TELEGRAPH.—There are strong inducements that Tilden will be elected, as Little Traverse has a new Post Master. A Blackbird, the present encumbent, shivered a little on the first intimation, but as the mails come in regular on monday night last satisfying him that he could still remain on the premises, he consented to have the little fellow duly installed deputy. He weighs 9 lbs.—Little Traverse Republican.

S. S. LISSONN.—Mr Lissonn, the jeweler, whose arrival we have elsewhere noticed, has arrived to stay. He will carry on his business at Dr. Lewis' Drug Store, and we bespeak for him a liberal share of patronage.

THE editor of the Charlevoix SENTINEL is eating maple sugar in January, and waiting for Hayes to be declared President.—Locate

We shall not have to wait long neighbor.

WANTED.—A girl to learn dress making. Apply at this office.—Charlevoix Sentinel.

What are you going to do with the decision, friend Smith?—Grand Traverse Herald.

He is going to bring it out in a new dress, of course.—Detroit Post.

"DESTITUTIONS."—The "relief" system now being operated for the "destitute" of the North, will we predict work actual harm to the section so operated upon. While there have been a few cases of actual destitution, it is undoubtedly true that a great proportion of the relief goods have been consumed by strong able-bodied men. Work at living wages has been offered them from various directions within the region, but as long as enough to eat can be secured work is unpleasant. In this manner, laziness has been encouraged, and a sympathetic people duped.

To Our Patrons.

Every subscriber to the SENTINEL will receive credit for the difference between the old price and the new. At the close of the volume for which he has paid, enough numbers will be added to equal the amount.

WANTED.—Wood on subscription for the SENTINEL.

WANTED.—Every person indebted to this office to call and settle.

PARDON.—Advices from New Brunswick state that our former fellow townsman W. H. Cary, is rapidly dailing and no hopes are entertained of his recovery. He is still in the Insane Asylum.

We recently visited the office of the County Clerk and Register of Deeds, and found everything orderly and system atic. Thus far Mr. Upright has proven himself both capable and worthy of the position.

THE HARBOR BILL.—In the river and harbor bill, the following amounts for prominent lake points, are included: St. Mary's River and St. Mary's Falls Canal, $100,000; Saginaw River, $60,000; Buffalo, $50,000; Detroit, $50,000; Erie, $25,000; Cleveland, $10,000; Toledo, $20,000; Chicago, $5,000; Michigan City, $55,000; harbor of refuge, Lake Huron, $25,000; Grand Haven, $20,000; Cheboygan, Mich., $15,000; Milwaukee, $30,000. An effort will no doubt be made to include Charlevoix in the bill.

RAILROAD TO LITTLE TRAVERSE.—Considerable excitement exists at Petoskey and Little Traverse over the likelihood that the G. R. & I. R. R. will continue their line to the latter place. It is said the Co. will purchase the iron rail furnish, rolling stock if the citizens will grade and tie. Little Traverse people claim that they can do their part for $9,000, and the road will probably be extended

Notice.

Owing to the great rush we have on Saturdays, the ladies of Charlevoix will find it to their interest and great pleasure, to call and look at our goods or do their purchasing, any other day, or early Saturday mornings, as they can receive better and more prompt attention from our experienced and gentlemanly salesmen. No trouble to show goods. FOX, ROSE & BUTTARS.

Presidential.

The electoral commission has decided by a majority vote that Congress cannot go behind the certificate of the Returning Boards. Under this decision the States of Florida and Louisiana will be counted for the Hayes. The only leg left under Tilden is the Oregon electoral vote fraud cannot be sustained. Greenbacks are worth almost as much as gold, and the indications are that actual specie resumption is not very far in the future.

Wendell Phillips said in his lecture at Chicago the other night: "Five years from now, side by side with Washington and Lincoln, will stand the name of Ulysses S. Grant." And, being interrupted by applause mingled with hisses, he proceeded:

"That boy is better than the plaudits of this great audience, for it shows the grandeur of his claim to public attention. There stands President Grant. He has been slandered by his own party; he has been forsaken by many of his friends; he has warred in calmness and without fear or favor, but through it all he has shown the integrity of Abraham Lincoln and the division of Andrew Jackson. The country owes its existence to no man more than to Ulysses S. Grant. In the time of heroes of this land the old and new world, the name of U. S. Grant will stand side by side with that of Wellington."

Hon. Wm A. Wheeler recently visited Gov. Hayes at his home in Ohio, and is reported as having said, shortly after leaving the Hayes mansion, that he and the Governor understood each other like brothers within five minutes after they met. He says the sincere and unaffected greeting of Mrs. Hayes as she stood hospitably in the doorway when the carriage drew up is a charming picture in memory. He received with peculiar pleasure to the incident of her bringing forward her colored servants, in a group, to shake hands with him, before the multitude of outside callers had had their turn, and of her telling him that they understood now with his name meant to their hopes as a people. He told Mrs. Hayes with great earnestness, on leaving, that if she would bring her home life and her home manners into the White House, and keep them undarged by the atmosphere of official life, she would do a good thing for her country.

The night the 4th of March comes the more anxious does Grant grow to get out of the White House. "The next four Weeks," he told Alick Stephens, on Saturday, "will be very long to me, and I am impatient for the end."

PERSONAL.—S. N. Sisc and wife returned home from Wisconsin, Thursday.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

FOREIGN.

A Pera telegram of the 28th announces that the first meeting of the Turkish Parliament will occur on the first of March.

In consequence of a legal technicality, the American "Spiritualist" Slade, who was sentenced by a London Court to three months' confinement at hard labor upon a charge of vagrancy, has been released, his sentence having been set aside by the Court to which he appealed.

A decree has been issued by the Belgian Government prohibiting the importation of cattle from England, Germany, Russia, Austria and Turkey.

A Constantinople dispatch of the 29th says the Porte had notified the Powers of his decision to appoint five Christians to be Governors of her Christian Provinces.

According to Paris specials of the 29th, a defalcation of 600,000 francs had occurred in the Banque de Paris. The culprit was one of the chief clerks in the bank.

On the 30th ult., Countess Howe threw herself out of a window of her residence in Berkely Square, London, and died from the injuries received. The suicide was induced by grief at the death of Earl Howe, her husband.

The reported retirement of Prince Bismarck from the Russian Cabinet was emphatically denied by the Paris correspondent of the London Standard, in a letter published on the 30th ult.

A Washington telegram of the 29th ult. says there was not a particle of truth in the statement, recently made, that the Spanish government was in negotiation with the Cuban insurgents with a view to grant them autonomy, or self-government. On the contrary, Spain occupied the same position as previously with regard to the affairs of Cuba, with no probability whatever of changing it.

Prof. Lankester, of London, on the 30th ult., took out a new summons against Slade, the American Spiritualist, and his assistant, Simmons, for conspiracy, and one against Slade, under the Vagrant act.

A Berlin telegram to the London Times, published on the morning of the 1st, says Russia had determined upon prolonging the present condition of peace to Turkey indefinitely. She had decided not to declare war, but would maintain an army of observation on the frontier, prepared to take advantage of contingencies that might arise hereafter.

Herr Barth, the German explorer, escaped a burning by Portuguese cannibals in South Africa, recently committed suicide at Lourdes, while delirious from fever. Herr Mohr, another German explorer, engaged in searching for the sources of the Congo River, also died lately.

Montenegro has accepted the proposition of the Turkish Prime Minister to treat with Turkey directly for peace.

London dispatches of the 1st announce the appointment of the clodepaid in Limehouse Parish, a suburb of London.

DOMESTIC.

Messrs. Moody and Sankey began their revival meetings at the Tabernacle in Boston on the afternoon of the 28th. The building, which seats 8,000, was filled in every portion, and it was estimated that 10,000 people were turned away from the doors, being unable to gain admission.

Considerable excitement has been lately occasioned in Chicago because of the alarming prevalence of scarlet fever and diphtheria. Meetings of physicians have been held to devise means to stay the progress of the diseases. The mortality among children has been very large.

A young man named Charles P. Wetmore, aged twenty-six years, died in Cincinnati on the morning of the 29th ult. prophesying after suffering fearfully from an attack since the 26th. The deceased was fifteen last summer three times by one dog and once by another. The symptoms first manifested themselves on the 25th, but he did not summon a physician until the next day.

The Supreme Court of the United States has adjourned until the 22th of February, on account of the withdrawal of five of the Justices to form the Judicial branch of the Tripartite Electoral Commission.

On the 30th ult., the United States Treasury declared all 4 per cent. bonds of 1868 in legal-tender notes, being eighty per cent of the bank circulation loaned during the month.

The Coroner's jury, in the case of the Brooklyn Theater calamity, have rendered a verdict in which they say that of the 218 victims of the calamity only two were burned to death, the remainder being suffocated.

The public debt statement for January shows the following: Debt bonds outstanding, $1,681,797,500; total debt, $2,220,570,318; cash in Treasury, $19,718,966; debt less cash in the Treasury, $2,000,851,352; decrease during January, $2,069,960.

PERSONAL.

Gen McDonald, of the whiskey ring in St. Louis, has been pardoned. The reason given for his release is that his health was so shattered that he would soon die, if kept in confinement.

Gov. Kirkwood, of Iowa, resigned his office as governor on the 31st ult. He was elected United States Senator from Iowa by the Legislature last winter. Lieut.-Gov. Newbold succeeds him.

POLITICAL.

The West Virginia Legislature, on the 26th, re-elected H. G. Davis to the United States Senate, and also chose F. Hereford for the short term to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Allen T. Caperton. The Georgia Legislature, on the same day, elected Benjamin H. Hill to succeed Mr. Norwood in the Senate.

The vote in Congress on the Electoral Compromise bill was divided politically as follows: In the Senate, twenty-six Democrats and twenty-one Republicans voted for the measure, and sixteen Republicans and one Democrat (Eaton of Conn.) against it; there were eleven Senators either absent or not voting. In the House, 156 Democrats and thirty-seven Republicans voted for the bill, and sixty-nine Republicans and seventeen Democrats against it.

The Congressional portion of the Electoral Commission consists of the following members: Senators—Edmunds, Morton and Frelinghuysen, Republicans, and Thurman and Bayard, Democrats. Representatives—Payne, Hunton and Abbott, Democrats, and Garfield and Hoar, Republicans. Associate Justice Davis, of the Supreme Court, on the 29th, peremptorily declined to serve on the Commission, on the ground of his recent election to the Senate.

On the 29th, Judge Carpenter, of South Carolina, decided that neither Chamberlain nor Hampton was legally installed as Governor of South Carolina in December last, and that Chamberlain is lawfully in possession of the Executive office, on the ground that he is entitled to hold over until his successor is duly elected and legally qualified.

Judge Bradley was, on the 31st ult., chosen the fifth member of the Judicial branch of the Electoral Commission. The Tripartite Commission assembled at noon in the Supreme Court room and organized. The oath of office was administered to Justice Clifford by Mr. Middleton, the Clerk of the Court, and Justice Clifford, who, by the Electoral act, is the presiding officer of the Commission, then administered the oath to the other fourteen members. James H. McKinney was then appointed temporary Clerk to the Commission. The Republican National Committee decided to engage as leading counsel before the Electoral Commission William M. Evarts and E. W. Stoughton, of New York, and Stanley Matthews and S. S. Shellabarger, of Ohio. The Democrats had engaged as counsel Lyman Trumbull, of Illinois; Matt H. Carpenter, of Wisconsin; Jeremiah Black, of Pennsylvania, and Ashabel Green, of New York.

The Prohibitionists of New Hampshire met in State Convention, on the 31st ult., and nominated Hon. Asa S. Kendall as their candidate for Governor.

On the 31st ult. the Legislature of Kansas elected Col. Preston B. Plumb, of Emporia, United States Senator, to succeed Senator Harvey, whose term expires on the 4th of March next.

A Columbia (S. C.) dispatch of the 1st states that Gen. Hampton, having granted a pardon to Ariza Roxborough, a colored citizen now in the jail of Chester County, and the Sheriff refusing to release the prisoner, on the ground that Wade Hampton was not governor of the State, Judge J. T. Mackey seized a writ of habeas corpus, on the petition of the prisoner, and the case was argued, when Judge Mackey promptly decided that Wade Hampton was the legal Governor. The Sheriff's counsel promptly appealed the case to the Supreme Court.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Bills were passed in the Senate, on the 25th—Military Academy and Fortification Appropriation bills, with amendments, to ratify the agreement with certain bands of Sioux Nation Indians and with the Northern Arapahoe and Cheyenne Indians, to extend for two years from the 4th of March next the act establishing the Board of Commissioners of Northern Claims; with an amendment providing that nothing in the bill shall be construed so to extend the time of filing claims before said Commissioners, or to allow the prosecution or adjudication of claims now barred by law. In the House, a report was made from the Judiciary Committee in favor of the admission of Mr. Bedford as a Representative from Colorado. The Inflation Appropriation bill passed.

In the Senate, on the 26th, Mr. Hallery, recently elected Senator from Tennessee, took the oath of office. The President's Message giving his reasons for approving of the Electoral Count bill was received and read. A majority report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections in regard to the late election in Florida was made, to the effect that the count of the Canvassing Board giving Hayes 930 majority was legal and Constitutional, and that the Board had the legal right to seek the evidence in the Governor's office and that of the Board in conclusive and cannot be revised by the returning board by a word of the majority, because the electors are fourths elect, as provided by the Constitution, because the Constitution gives the whole power in the State to the Board of Canvassers of Northern Claims. Considerable. Bills were introduced in the House to repeal the act fixing the 4th of March as the day for the inauguration of the President and to extend Michigan for railroad purposes the unsold lands granted for said road; also relative to the President's Message relative to the signing of the Electoral Commission bill was received and read.

A large number of petitions were presented to the Senate on the 26th, asking for the passage of an amendment to the Constitution prohibiting States from disfranchising persons on account of sex. A vote was then had for members of the Electoral Commission, and Senator Edmunds, Democratic Senator Thurman and Bayard were unanimously chosen. Senator Frelinghuysen, Republican, and Democratic Senator Bayard also received a majority on the second ballot. Senator Morton was declared elected by a majority of one. Democratic Senator Bayard also received a majority on the second ballot. Senator Morton was declared elected by a majority of one. Democratic State Committee testified before the Committee on Privileges and Elections of the Senate, on the 27th, that the Democratic State Committee of Florida had employed counsel to advise with the Democratic Executive Committee in relation to the contest in Florida in reference to the Electoral vote on the 22th of February; witness considered the action of Messrs. Tilden, of New York, in "recall requests" as unauthorized and unwarranted; he understood in order to Watts that Tilden desired witness to advise the Democratic witnesses to withhold information which would help the Republicans; witness did not consider Watts' letter as a request, and did not so understand it; he was the author of the letter to Watts; Tilden should not be intended witness to understand that he was the author of the letter; before drafting a certificate, he had been more definite in his dispatch. S. B. Eaton, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee testified he met a man named Pettigrew in the city of November in the Clarendon Hotel, Portland, Ore., he (witness) had a conference in reference to the counsel to appear before the Committee; he employed Hoadley and Lord to appear; Hoadley was employed to appear against leaving a certificate of election to Wells; he was employed to appear before the Committee; Hoadley and Lord were employed by agreement between witness and Tilden; witness was not aware of it; he did not take possession of the Democratic headquarters; witness is now with or negotiating place in the Democratic headquarters; he had not seen any evidence or statement; witness only received information from the press and from counsel; he had not seen any evidence; witness only received information from the press and from counsel; he had not seen any evidence; witness only received information from the press and from counsel; he had not seen any evidence

OUR NEW YORK LITTER.

The cipher meagre list of holidays put down in the New York calendar fails fully to receive an important addition this year. A number of gentlemen who have witnessed or participated in the Carnival celebrations of Europe, and of New Orleans in this country, are making a decided effort, and with every prospect of success, to introduce the festivity, as observed in the latter city, into New York. Everybody has heard more or less of the Bacchanalian doings in which many natives take their "merry well to the fore" (which is the meaning of Carnival) just before the forty days of Lent, which are supposed to be passed in sackcloth and ashes. Especially in the Roman cities is this the greatest holiday season of the year, or lasting through a whole week. It has been my good fortune to take part in the Roman Carnival, and I assure you that it is what we call in the American language, "a high old time." No instance is there excepting in costumes, masks, cashion confetti, bon-bons and the other articles of the carnival, and the scenes are crowded day and night with carriages loads of masked beauties, and the pedestrian throng, of fops, knights, adventurers, and whatever other shapes it possesses enough to assume for the time being. The windows and balconies of the main streets are gayly dressed, and all densely packed with maskers as the roadway below, while those above and those beneath pelt and cheer at each other with tinsel goat bonbons. Throwing confetti still continues to be the favorite amusement of the maskers as of old, but in late years economy has deterred from the pleasure of the decoration by substituting for the sugar plums or confetti proper, a coarse imitation consisting of little balls of clay about as large as peas, whitened by rolling in lime.

Among the most interesting features of the Roman carnival scenes, however, I should not care to see introduced here, is the reckless horse race with which it closes. Late in the afternoon of the last day, when the excitement bordering through the dreary weariness of the participants, the centre of Corso, the broad street some two miles long which is the principal theatre of carnival festivities, is cleared by the tremendous exertions of the police of soldiers, and the motley rogue of revellers are packed along the sidewalks. Then, when all is in readiness, a signal is given, and half a dozen wild horses are loosed at one end of the street, and start like arrows down the open roadway. Along their flanks are loosely fastened little steel darts with points as keen as a needle's, which prick the startled animals at every leap. Urged on by the triple goads of pain, fear and excitement, their speed soon becomes absolutely terrific. On they rush through the double row of spectators, with a yell and gesticulate as they pass, and close in behind them like the water in the wake of a swift vessel. Faster and faster fly the startling crowds, wilder and wilder grow the cries of the surging crowds till at the end the poor horses, foaming, panting, terror-stricken and utterly crazed with fright, run headlong against an immense piebald rag hung across the street to receive them, and fall lifeless to the pavement.

You can hardly conceive of anything more exciting than this race but it is as cruel as bull fighting; a horse which has run that gauntlet if he does not die at once, is seldom good for anything afterward and I believe this feature of the carnival has been omitted during the last year or so. The Flea of having one day of masquerade and burlesque in this city has been received with much favor and several German, French and Italian societies are actively interesting themselves to ensure its adoption and success should this plan for a Mardi Gras be carried out I shall take pleasure in chronicling its important features for the benefit of your readers.

Meanwhile the terrible calamity which a comparatively few weeks ago sent a shudder throughout the land has been practically forgotten, and will hereafter be only occasionally recalled to mind through some casual remark of newspaper item, and then will hardly excite a feeling of any kind. Such is life—and more especially Death—in this cold world.

A fortnight's fair for city visitors to display their wit open to the provinces of the countryside visiting the good metropolis, and the cats with which he is taken and done for by the city sharps. One of the events of this week goes far to avoid proving that ordinary is not an unfavorable combination, but may appear in one whose life has been spent among the bricks and paving stones by the circumstances related in an old New Yorker who had $25,000 worth of diamond jewelry, on which he wanted to raise a loan, accepted the kindly offered services of a young man who volunteered to help him manage the matter. After various preliminary negotiations arranged by the gentlemanly young man, in which he managed to gain the entire confidence of the old gentleman owner, the insurance company to a down town hotel where the transaction was to be consummated. At the door the hotel porter met them the young man saying he wished to show them to a room over the office, and requested the elder to remain for him. The latter "wait for him," and that's all he saw of it for hours. For the elder youth waited in the hotel days and days by a little calculation. The fact has been caught. The gentlemen diamonds have not. Meanwhile every man should not laugh too hard at the unfortunate country for falling an easy prey to sharpers.

In a recent issue I spoke of one of the attractions of local theatre in New York which has since been done away with by a better position which the revolving scenery of the Academy of Music, had caused to be given general. This is the setting of vanishing pictures by which the actors are left on the stage and the audience is in the way of theatrical comforts that many dollars have been saved. It is fortunate in making it frequently occurs that many dollars pleasure are given as well as many that are of no practical value to the people. Such facts as learned by the gold dozen dealers who make this business especially, and a week or two after the occasion one of them will call on the young couple and cautiously broach the subject of payment. At first no offer is made, refused with scorn and indignation, but in the end or will often carry off under the pressure of the moment generosity the happy couple of the wedding offer some for several days and pay from a third to one half more.

The New York Journal, which last week in giving a long report of the proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Masons, in session in this city, failed to mention the name of Bro. Gen. Custer, who was present and took part in the proceedings, has since published a long account of the meeting, in which the name of Custer appears frequently. The omission of Custer's name from the list of those present, and the publication of the proceedings, are considered by many as a deliberate insult to the General, and have created a great deal of indignation among the members of the order.

THE LITTLE DAUGHTER

Oh she's a flower—lovable our hearts
Suddenly sweet, so gaily growing
Rosy eyes day, now pearled blooms
To our delighted eyes are showing.

And she's a bird—for in her voice
Thrilling sunsh-tones are hiding.
When at night she speaks, they just carry out
And gaily call, our fond search guiding

And she is a star—her bright, pure eyes
Are looking in the same unclouded
With grave, expecting, mild surprise,
At all her worldly wise flattering.

And she's a blessing—a rare one,
Our lives were rough and often ready
To curse, were but now they're mine.
Dear bird, Eve has made them steady

Is she an angel?—Ah, no I say
For then I think the angels brought her,
For their strong shine was fit away;
And we would keep our little daughter
Mary Ashton Rice Livermore, in Springfield Wkly. Republican.

A SLEIGH-BELLE.

Harold Brown's sleigh dashed merrily up to Harold Brown's door, and at that moment (she was the soul of punctuality) out came Harold Brown's only sister, and little woman wrapped in furs and veils and worsted things from head to foot.

"Hop along, sis," he shouts; and then, without waiting for her to "come along," he jumps from the sleigh, reaches the top of the stoop in three strides—he's a full, broad-shouldered, dark-skinned, limp-eyed young fellow—catches her up in his arms as though she were only a bundle, and to the twinkling of an eye she is snugly stowed away among the buffalo robes.

Dash goes the whip. "G'lang, Ned!" cries Harold. "Ned" tosses his head and paws the ground an instant to set the sleigh-bells ringing properly, and off they go.

"Are you warm?" asked Harold of the bundle at his side.

"Almost smothered," answers the bundle, in an indistinct voice with a slight lisp.

"That's right, my darling," says the brother, who adores his pretty young sister—the only one left him of four. "I should fear my hair in a wild sleigh-ride would be aware—no more than you did about yours. And she'd rather be called 'Bertie,' a great deal; and her papa insists upon 'Alberta,' and consequently, like a good daughter, she insists upon 'Alberta' too. He wanted a boy when she was born, to be called 'Albert'—that's his own name, you know; and when a girl came instead, he and no girl should interfere with his plans, and he named her 'Alberta,' which is almost the same thing. And it's just as well he did, for he never had another child, girl or boy."

"His there hadn't been a boy," grumbles Harold.

"For shame, brother!" exclaims the little woman, partly unfolding the veil that hides her dimpled chin and rosy mouth, that she may speak with greater effect. "How can you wish that there was a great, stupid young man instead of that dear, sweet girl? for she is a dear, sweet girl, though you, Lenn't for the life of me see why—neither can Fred—choose to be angry with her."

"I didn't wish for a 'great, stupid young man' in her place," explains Harold, with a short laugh. "That he would necessarily have been 'great and stupid' only feminine logic can prove; it's beyond me. But if 'Albert' had been first, and Alberta, by some other name, second, she wouldn't have been an only child, as she is now, petted and indulged in every whim and fancy, until she imagines herself a queen and all the world her slaves."

"You said 'a princess' a few moments ago," says Cora, demurely.

"And perhaps she wouldn't be smiling on that grinning idiot, Dan Van Reinsselaer—they say she's going to marry him, his fortune equaling her own, and his great-great-great-great-grandfather having been one of the very first Dutchmen that landed on those shores—and turning away from the fellow she has known from her infancy, and who has—Whist, Ned, keep still! Why the dence don't she come, and her train make their appearance?"

"I'm coming

A Berlin telegram of the 3d says the German Public Prosecutor had instituted proceedings against the son of Count Von Arnim on account of offensive newspaper articles.

The attempt to amalgamate the Direct and Anglo-American Cable Companies has failed.

The steamer George Washington, of Cromwell, Canada, lately went ashore on Cape Race, and all hands were drowned. Up to the morning of the 5th, fourteen bodies had been washed ashore.

According to Constantinople telegrams of the 6th, Mithat Pasha, friend Vizier, had been dismissed and sent beyond Turkish territory. He was charged with scheming for Constitutional reform in such a way as to encroach upon the Sultan's prerogatives, and conspiring to dethrone the present Sultan and replace him with ex-Sultan Murad.

Smallpox prevails to an alarming extent in London. During the week ending Feb. 6, 568 deaths had occurred.

On the 7th, the Porte issued a circular notifying its representatives abroad of the recent Ministerial changes, and added that the principles enunciated by the new Constitution would be vigorously developed. It was said in Constantinople, on the same day, and generally believed, that the exile of Midhat Pasha would be only temporary.

The British steamer Ethel went ashore on Lundy Island, on the 7th, and became a total wreck. Nineteen persons perished. On the same day, ten men were killed by a colliery explosion near Bolton, England.

On the 8th, the British Parliament was formally opened by the Queen in person The Lord High Chancellor read a speech from the Throne.

According to Belgrade dispatches of the 8th, great activity prevailed along the Black Sea and the River Pruth. The Russians had bridged the latter with pontoons.

DOMESTIC.

Mass meetings of unemployed workmen were held in New York City, on the evening of the 3d, and resolutions were adopted calling upon the State Legislature for an appropriation of $2,000,000 to give work to 55,000 idlemen.

News was received at Chicago, on the 5th, that Grey Horse's band of hostile Cheyennes and Ugallala Sioux had been defeated in several engagements with the United States forces under Gen. Mackenzie, lasting from Jan. 1 to Jan. 8. The Federal loss was three killed and eight wounded. Indian loss not reported.

Dispatches of the 5th state that the Apaches were killing and plundering settlers in Southeastern Arizona.

PERSONAL.

A recent Washington dispatch announces that Maddox, the Treasury Agent, who had been giving testimony in the Louisiana case before the Committee on Powers, Privileges and Duties of the House, had been removed from his official position as Agent of the Internal Revenue Bureau, and that the President had appointed Col. S. E. Chamberlain, of Virginia, to the office.

State School Commissioner Smart, of Ohio, has issued a call for a meeting of the National Teachers' Association at Washington, March 7 and 8, at which the following subjects have been arranged for consideration: "Organization of an educational museum and the provision of plans and means for its creation; further consideration of plans for publications connected with and growing out of the educational proposition of popular education in the South; proposed reduction of salaries and the relation of secondary instruction in the high schools to the public schools."

A statement was published in Washington on the 8th that Mrs. Mary S. Oliver had entered suit against the Chief Justice Cameron for breach of promise of marriage a year ago, laying her damages at $50,000. She is about thirty-five or forty years of age, and is said to be a widow from Pennsylvania. She is employed in the Treasury Department. The friends of the Senator were very much surprised to see this statement, and were not inclined to believe that he had conducted himself in a way to justify such legal proceedings. Mr. Cameron is nearly seventy-eight years of age.

The Boston dispatch of the 7th says D. L. Moody had published a card to the effect that the contributions for the family of F. F. Bliss had been so liberal that, with the addition to what he left, they were well provided for, and collections should now cease.

POLITICAL.

According to Columbia (S. C.) telegrams of the 7th, Judge Carpenter, who recently decided that Chamberlain was the Acting Governor of the State, had enjoined the National Bank of South Carolina from paying the checks of F. L. Cardoza, the Republican State Treasurer, and Cardoza from drawing checks to pay Republican Legislators.

CONGRESSIONAL.

In the Senate, on the 5th, the credentials of Senators Davis and Saunders, of West Virginia and Nebraska, were presented and filed The joint resolutions of the Minnesota Legislature in favor of a tax giving a bounty for the destruction of grasshoppers, and their eggs were referred. In the House, the Legislative, Judicial and Executive Appropriation bill was reported from Committee of the Whole, and amendments making the salaries of Senators and Representatives $5,000 were agreed to, and an amendment increasing the compensation of the President to $50,000 was defeated—yeas, 47; nays, 126—and the bill was then passed. The President's Message on the financial question was presented by the Speaker and referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

In the Senate, on the 5th, Mr. Howe stated that on the 4th the sub-Committee of the Committee on Privileges and Elections had examined J. P. Littlefield relative to Louisiana election matters, the examination not being concluded on that day he was told to return on the 5th. Instead of doing so, he said was evidently evading the committee, Mr Howe therefore submitted a new Bill on which was assigned, ordering his (Littlefield's) arrest by the Sergeant-at-Arms as soon as the canvass is over which is upon the floor, and bringing him before the bar of the Senate, the Senate also intends to the Fortifications Appropriation and the Military Academy bills were then considered. A petition was presented from twenty-eight leading Institutions of Connecticut asking for the repeal of the law taxing banks.

Bills were passed in the Senate, on the 6th—for the relief of settlers upon public lands under the Homestead laws, authorizing the survey of certain townships in Michigan and making appropriations thereof, to amend the act of Jan 8 1872 granting the district of Wyoming public lands to the Union Pacific Railroad Company, joint resolution to amend the joint resolution of July 3, 1876, authorizing the Secretary of War to loan arms to certain States and Territories so as to secure ammunition not to exceed fifty ball cartridges for each arm. The bill abolishing the Board of Metropolitan Police Commissioners of the District of Columbia failed to pass over the President's veto—yeas, 30; nays, 22—two-thirds not voting in the affirmative. In the House, the Legislative Appropriation bill ($14,000,000) was considered in Committee of the Whole. The bill as

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

The present financial and commercial condition of the country as reflected in the mirror of the metropolis is either good or bad, as one pleases to regard it. Trade is quiet, dull in fact, in spite of the most vigorous efforts of the press to galvanize it into brisk activity. People wont buy if they can help it and the merchants who have been watching these weary years and more, for a rebound into the driving times of before the panic, are still looking black as they see the season for its Spring rush of 1877 from which such great things were hoped, slipping away by without much, if any, change for the better from last year. That is the dark side. On the other hand the "good old ante war times" when "a dollar was a dollar," and when prices were down to a point which seemed almost incredible ten years afterward, are assuredly back again. All this time, while we have been fretting and complaining about the hard times the days of hard pan in currency and prices have been stealing upon us like a thief in the night. Gold has been quietly sinking down one scale, until here a week or so ago the little yellow dollar fairly reunited in the alliance with the big green dollar. So wonder the specie payment question has been brought up instead of late, for it looks very much as though the government would have to hurry up with its legislation if it wants to claim any of the credit of resumption. If things are left to themselves we shall have the Secretary of the Treasury, on Jan. 1st, 1879, handing round with a tantern to find that depreciated currency which the law directs him to redeem on that date.

And with a practically gold basis, the cost of living and doing business have shrunk, as well as the profits, so that there is not so much to complain about after all. The large and significant items of store and house rents are a good indication of the general tendency. These rents have not been so low in New York before in fifteen years and interviews with the leading brokers show that they are going to drop still lower this Spring. Labor has rarely been lower, clothing never, and the whole list of necessaries of life are arranged on a very moderate scale of prices. All of which goes to show that we are not so bad off after all, which is some comfort.

If anyone doubts my assertion that wages are low, I refer him to the record of the District Court for this week, where it is shown that several young girls employed in a large book bindery of this city, are suing their employer for wages due them at the rate of from three to six dollars a month. It is a satisfaction to add that they obtained prompt judgement in their favor, and that their liberal employer was with equal promptness put in jail for non-payment.

New Yorkers live all sorts of queer lives and die all sorts of queer deaths, in proof of the latter part of which assertion I instance the case of a young man who has just died in a well known boarding house after a strange and lingering sickness of many months. His first symptoms were slight pains in his stomach, which, however, kept increasing in spite of all medical treatment, till they incapacitated the sufferer for business and brought him to his death bed. After his demise the puzzled physicians made a post mortem search for the cause of this singular illness and found to their astonishment that a cherry stone swallowed last summer had sprouted in their patient's stomach and that it had been the progress and wide ramification of this fearfully abnormal growth which had occasioned his sufferings and death. The case is entirely unique, and is so nearly incredible that were it not strongly vouched for as genuine I would not venture to mention it.

As the English opera recedes the French advances, Mlle Almee having opened with a full troupe at the Eagle Theatre, where all sorts of "naughty but nice" musical titbits will be presented.

The other current successes are such as "Round the World in Eighty Days," which the Kiralfy's continue at Niblo's Garden, and "Our Boarding House," which continues to make fun for its audiences and money for its proprietors, at the Park, to the management of which theatre Mr. Charles Fulton has recently returned.

The Lederkranz fancy dress ball is another regular New York institution which was by no means slighted this year. On the evening of the 8th the old Academy was again crowded, but not this time with the decorous and doubtful dames of Murray Hill and Fifth Avenue. In place of the satins and regulation swallow tails of the Charity Ball, the floor was a tangle of ladies mythological dailies, Greek pirates, Libertynas, Flying Dutchmen, cowboys and historical personages, all having the rousing good time that is contemporaneous to chatter terms Carmen functions. Among other notables there was the Prince Carnival, to whom the throng paid due homage—a lineal descendant of the presiding genius of the Mardi Gras carnival, certain events on which are still being passed from mouth to mouth.

No mention of the Week's gayeties would be complete without some reference to the Chas. Wiggins ball which on Wednesday last endangered the supremacy of Every Ball. The crowd was very nearly as great as at the Lederkranz reception, if not so brilliant, and when the supper was announced at 1 o'clock the rush of enthusiastic revelers to the dining room threatened for a time to bring disaster to the whole affair. Dancing was resumed at 2 o'clock and kept up with unflagging spirit until 5 o'clock, when the last couple waltzed through the last quadrille and passed from the scene. Just imagine a description of the ball at "Chas Wiggins's Party."

"And every one had given a present."

The ball of the season, indeed!

The ball and ticket fiasco together netted 827 guests and after its fairy fountains had run dry over the gorgeous floor for three hours while its fairy lights lost some of their brilliancy, the whole assembled and sat down to supper, and made a small wreck around the tables of the most hardened reporter present.

An old wedding in high life has still further distinguished the past week. Miss Marcia Roosevelt, the sole and orphan millionairess of one of the old Knickerbocker families of New York, fell in love with the handsome and penniless son of the church, while she attended, and a brief courtship was crowned by the grand wedding of the other evening at St. Thomas'. The large church was crowded to suffocation with the cream of society driven thither perhaps not more by the high social rank of the bride than by curiosity to see what the undoubtable result on considering a notable sacrifice to mammon. The sacrifice may have been a very painful one, but that feature was not apparent. The net result may be very briefly summed up: St. Thomas has lost her Apollo-like tenor—a young man with no capital but a passable voice and a form like Adonis has exchanged a position worth $800 a year for another which will yield him at the very least $10,000, that annual income having been definitely settled on him by his doting spouse—and, lastly, Miss Roosevelt has obtained the husband of her choice. What more could be asked?

The leading event of the year in our musical world is the debut in her native land of Miss Emma Abbott the young American singer who after a severe and thorough musical education under the first masters of Italy, of Paris and of London, and a triumphant season of opera in the latter city, comes back to meet the hearty greetings of her own countrymen. Her opening concert at Chickering Hall was an ovation, her magnificent singing more than meeting the anxious expectations of her numerous friends and creating genuine enthusiasm. We shall have further opportunities of hearing this young lady after which I may have something to say of her history, her struggles and her triumphs.

At Booth's Geo. Fawcett Rowe's new play, "Fifth Avenue" is booked for a long run, its first performance having settled the question of its popularity. Mr. George Rignold, who was specially imported from London for which is appearance in New York is always the signal. At his first appearance on the opening night, an elegant solid silver boat loaded with flowers was handed onto the stage as a slight testimonial of the admiration of his fair friends. The scenery is of course local, and is surprisingly accurate.

Miss Lellogg's English Opera season proved such an unexpected success that it has been twice prolonged and now closes with its third week.

The Chicago Tribune says of the translation of the cipher dispatch from Cipher to Tilden in THE TRIBUNE of Wednesday:

"It shows that an understanding existed between Tilden and Gov. Grover in relation to the plot which found its fruition in the Cronin rascality. To relieve Tilden's anxiety Grover telegraphs him, on the 1st of December, five days before the day on which the electors were to meet and cast their votes, giving assurance that the job is fully put up, and that every point in the case of Watkins is to be decided in favor of the Tilden elector receiving the highest vote, and to whom the certificate is to be awarded. Being five days in advance of the date of the "decision," and before the form of hearing arguments was performed, it was essential that the telegram should be held as confidential, and communications to this effect were added. The transaction of the "Gobble" dispatch is the final link that completes the chain of fraud in the Oregon case."

The New York Tribune has an editorial upon Mr. Field's performances in Congress, in which, after commenting upon Mr. Tilden's blunder in sending the attorney of Tweed to Congress to manage his case for him, it thus characterizes the conduct of the Tammany lawyer:

"He has treated the grave controversy now going on at Washington as if it were one of his own law cases, in which he reached all his cunning to prevent his client from getting justice—justice being precisely the thing of which his client stood in liveliest dread. He runs the supreme Court room to the committee room, bullying, insulting and badgering the witnesses. He has not quite learned the distinction between the Capitol and the Court of Sessions, the Democratic candidate for the Presidency and the ex Boss, the tripartite commission and Judge Barnard. For two days Washington has been nauseated by the disgusting and imitated copies of certain portions of the testimony taken before the investigating committee—copies which suppress everything unfavorable to Mr. Tilden's side—have been secretly printed and sent forth in the guise of complete official reports, and it is upon Mr. Field that the action is charged. We shall not believe without proof that a man of M. Field's pretensions would be guilty of the offense of tampering with evidence, or of the alleged attempt to smuggle a spurious copy of the testimony before the Commission of Fifteen. But can anybody immagine it possible for Mr. O'Conor or Mr. Evarts to be suspected of such things? The fact that the dead lion has been laid at the door of Mr. Field shows how deeply he has injured his cause by bringing the tricks and manners of a police court into a more dignified tribunal than he has been accustomed to addressing."

DUTY DONE.

EARTH'S titles, honors, laurel wreaths,
All may not win and wear,
Some rest content in lowly grass
And only crosses bear.
Yet these may be more truly blest
Who fame and glory shun,
If each day's self-declining
Records a due duty done.

As the priest laid on the altar
The offering that was not,
And the grateful giver received aloud
And worshiped as his lot
So let us bring some simple token
Of a better life begun,
Some duty even the longer recked
May now at last be done.

But hence no regret no more return
At best, for is nothing,
Much less it is an altar
Of revelry and song
Those precious gifts shed in secret,
And gifted to our throne,
Therefore not for the selfish least and hard,
Therefore unless to be done.

The design are of lugubrious Fate
No thought have they nor care,
But wound to a noble type,
Inspired by truth and peace,
Seek out the spirit where the faint
Strong lies in crippled case,
Oh, then is done death with a cowards hue,
While crowns adorn the done.

This Heaven bestows a blessing rare
Of every gift and joy,
The fountains flow and fountains
Current with the love.
The thirsty soul may quench the boon
As sweet as the flower's scent,
And yet, as now we will, its crystal tide
Whose coolness shall know.

The wilting sorrow of sickness
And death we shun the scene,
And cruel hearts are whispering lies,
Health's angel guards right,
Then soon shall be lessening long for
When the thorn's sorry
The last hand caressed upon the breast
And all is done forever.

OF SELF-SACRIFICE.

I CHANCE there never existed a time when the spirit of self-sacrifice was so little amongst us as at present. It is a virtue not understood of many, so sparingly practiced that it seems—like many of the good old customs and fashions of our forefathers—to be dying out. Each for himself. Thus men argue, thus they act.

In seeking a reason, it may possibly be found—if, as some think, we have reached the beginning of the end—in the fulfillment of the prophecy which says that in the last few days men shall increase and iniquity shall abound. Or it may be the result of the progress of the age, an evil of which the food that nourishes it is daily gaining strength and growth. The world is so overpopulated—at least the world of our small island that men are jostling each other, treading upon each other's heels; wrestling for place and power; for wealth and the grandeur wealth brings. No matter what the cost to honor, to integrity; what the increasing honor of mankind body; still they wrestle.

I must climb the social ladder, must increase in riches and importance. My neighbor now rides the latest and best in being, simple skiff; shun. If each day's self-declining Records a due duty done.

Success itself is one of the greatest destroyers of self-sacrifice, unless the mind be noble and the heart large; just as wealth often closes its doors to the need of the world, because the thoughtless soul has come to be unable to realize in its fullness the need that exists. "I am rich, and lack naught; the distress and misery we hear of must be an idle tale; an overdrawn picture." Thus men cheat themselves. But, ye rich, believe it not. There is misery and wretchedness enough and to spare, in spite of the purple and fine linen that may rest from it; more of that is in your power to lessen. But siblings must not be given for pounds, or pounds where you should give tens or hundreds. Take, for example, the collections in our London churches, on behalf of some good and pressing objects, as an instance of what I mean by what might be done. But the amount of charity in the world is quite apart from the question of self-sacrifice. People give out of their abundance, and much of it is terribly misapplied. There is no system in distributing.

Take the great world of commerce. How many of its members will exercise, in even a small degree, the spirit of self-sacrifice? I am able to do this thing for A. He will be a thousand pounds the richer; I shall be minus the five hundred pounds it would put into my pocket, if I did it for myself. A wants the thousand; the five hundred to me is nothing. But it does not enter into the principle of business, and I cannot do it. No, I cannot. If I did do it, and the world knew, it would mock me." So A does not get his thousand pounds, and B pockets his five hundred. A is ruined, perhaps; possibly drags down with him a wife and children; and he never knows the loving hand that mercifully withheld from him the blow that would have been fatal to his prosperity.

The reader had need to steel his heart against sophistry so subtle, argument so ungenuine. It may cost a little self-sacrifice, but if the heart becomes warped, the mind narrowed and disordered, the conscience seared, the moral tone lowered, it will be a dear bargain. Be resting quietly in its last home. We all do take as a fact, so much for the world and the body only, but the good that men do lives after them, and the evil is never undone. Pause and turn back ere launching out upon that wide road whose return is so hard, which lays hold upon the soul with an iron grasp, to be loosened only by constant and painful struggles, enduring, let us hope, in victory; but a victory gained, it may be, only through death itself.

Not to the persistently selfish will the grave be without its victory, death without its terrors and its sting. As self-sacrifice is more or less in the reach of all, so all must seek to acquire it. Look to the heart; make it pure and keep it so; remember that your opportunities and your life will not last forever; you cannot live your life twice over; it will not return and enable you to redeem the days that have been misspent. Now or never must be said of the opportunities of to-day, for after to-day its opportunities, taken or neglected, have passed into the womb of time and the records of eternity.

And then, to go to the reverse side of the picture, self-sacrifice brings its own reward. It gives happiness far greater than any wealth or power can bestow. It is the latter case, every eyes close in their last sleep; one more life is over, for whose soul a world would bless ransom; and that be one restless hitherto, in the tomb has rest.

Not for this were we brought into the world. Each life has a distinct and separate purpose of its own. Each soul is created, not only to accomplish some great work—for even the humblest career carefully fulfilled will, when the life is laid aside, leave behind it an impression of completeness—but also to help on other souls through their pilgrimage of pain and travail. This cannot be done without an amount, more or less, of self-sacrifice.

It is terrible to contemplate the dearth of this spirit, arising in part from a lack of sympathy in the human heart—a want, hark you, that may be cultivated. Take, reader, a little of your own experience. Imagine yourself in great trouble, in sore need; be it that of pity, of disburdening your soul, or the strait of poverty. How many friends or acquaintances do you possess to whom you could confidently apply with a sure feeling of trust; of being fully heard and fully answered? Five? Four? Three? Nay. Two? Probably no. One? Even one is doubtful. And yet, inasmuch as every soul is born into the world with the impress of the divine image, so no soul need have a heart without sympathy and all those beauties of virtue which therefrom blossom into life.

Success itself is one of the greatest destroyers of self-sacrifice, unless the mind be noble and the heart large; just as wealth often closes its doors to the need of the world, because the thoughtless soul has come to be unable to realize in its fullness the need that exists. "I am rich, and lack naught; the distress and misery we hear of must be an idle tale; an overdrawn picture." Thus men cheat themselves. But, ye rich, believe it not. FOREIGN GOSSIP.

DRESDEN is called the Paris of broken-down American families—people of more name than bank notes.

TYPHOID and lung diseases are epidemic in Madrid. The drainage of the city is said to be the worst in all Europe.

IT is no secret that the Czar hates his English son-in-law, because of his shabby treatment of his wife in public on several occasions.

THERE were last year 7,759 deserters from the English army, and for some years past the desertions have averaged twenty a day. On the other hand, there has been for the past six months a marked improvement in the number as well as in the cases of recruits at the military stations throughout England.

RESIDENTS in the neighborhood of Mt. Vesuvius are apprehensive of trouble. The crater of the volcano has been choked up by an immense caving in of sand and scarlae, and the mountain is making an effort to force an opening in some direction. To do this an extraordinary eruptive force will be necessary, and the results will be correspondingly serious.

ONE of the latest Parisian toys is called the "Easter Question." It is a steel crescent, around which hang a certain number of rings strung together. The problem is to bring order out of confusion, but the more one tries to arrange them the greater is the confusion. In the end, the toy seller divides the crescent into several pieces, and the rings arrange themselves in the simplest way imaginable.

THE London papers record an extraordinary shooting feat performed recently by Chelmondeley Pennell. He had long odds that he could shoot consecutively ten pennies tossed in the air. He selected some of the old Georgian coins, as being heavier than the modern bronze pieces, and less likely, therefore, to be caught by the wind. An old soldier threw each penny up three feet above his head, and, as he threw, Mr. Pennell fired with small shot, and hit every one of the ten coins.

THE Pall Mall Gazette advises all travelers by rail to carry a red handkerchief, and assigns the following reason for so doing: A story is told which shows the value of these articles in moments of emergency. A collision which occurred at Wolverton, on the London & Northwestern Railway, short time since, the red lamps on the trains were smashed and rendered useless. The Scotch express was due in a few minutes at the scene of the disaster, and consequently a red light was urgently needed. Happily somebody present had a red pocket-handkerchief, which, being placed at a white light, answered the desired purpose, and the express was brought to a stand-still just in time to prevent a still more lamentable catastrophe.

A PARTY of young peasants were carousing in a loft in Vouvray, in France, when one of the hangers-on of the party offered to bet five francs that he would eat the nose and cheeks of the first person present. A companion, well endowed by nature, accepted the bet, and lay down to the sacrifice. The anthropophagist bit off his nose and ate it, but when he came to the cheeks of the obliging companion pond the bet, and, jumping up, tried to perform the same delicate operation on his rival, who declined to submit. A general fight closed the savage scene, and the penal party found themselves in the police-station the following morning, with the exception of the nameless man, who was taken to the hospital to have the stump of his prominent facial organ attended to.

Bonnets.

AS A rule, in bonnets, there is a general preference for the shapes following the contour of the head, and fitting close to it. The favorite model has an elevated front and surging crown, and the usual garniture is that of the past few years—a wreath or crown, or some other trimming that binds the crown firmly and close. Feather fringes thickly curled form a charming and coquettish edging for bonnets and hats. Plush is extremely admired and is much used for the soft crowns of bonnets, for which purpose it is well fitted. Chenille is excessively employed, and is a soft and most attractive trimming. A lovely evening bonnet is of white plush, of very fine mossy quality. The crown, not very high, is surmounted by two cerana tips, which are fastened under loops of white gros grain, bands of which encircle the crown. The brim in front, which is erect, is faced with full ruchings of white lace, and a garniture of roses with white satin leaves delicately veined with green. The lining is of white satin, and the strings are of white gros grain. Lace is no longer in use for trimming bonnets, and is very seldom seen. Vails dotted with chenille are considered quite stylish. Some are very pretty, others have dots of colored chenille on black, white and cream, and are not so pleasing, being rather too pronounce for thorough-bred taste. Among garnitures for evening or full-dress bonnets, was shown me a wreath of white satin bronze foliage mingled with white chenille, gold-tipped.

A lovely bonnet is the Hortense. A model is in pale green plush of an exquisite hot most "trying" shade, with feathers of the same line falling over the crown, and the face trimming frayed-out ruches of pale green and rose. These frayed-out ruchings are, by the way, a lovely and becoming trimming. When of two colors or two shades combined, the effect is highly satisfactory. A bonnet of white plush has around the crown three raveled quillings of soft-set pale rose silk. At the back is a bow, and long ends, also fringed out, come from it, pass forward, and are loosely knotted under the chin. Pale rose ruchings form the face trimming, and the result is delightful. Most of our foreign fashions—at least the handsomest and best—first see light on the Paris stage—a true, but rather mortifying, confession. Now that new play, soon to appear here, gives us a new bonnet, and the "Banchell" has already appeared with hosts of admirers. A handsome bonnet of this shape is of cream and red gold-colored satin. The bonnet proper is of velvet, the crown surrounded by folds of both materials. The brim is edged with a narrow satin fold, and the face garniture is bronze foliage, clusters of tips of both shades fall over the crown to the left, and a bow and long sash appear at the front. The turban is also a favorite shape, and is frequently selected by young ladies as a hat for evening and theater wear. The "Bebe" bonnet is in great favor, and one of the most admired styles for youthful beauty is the Hortense—a regal and elegant bonnet. The ever-popular Gainsborough is much worn in velvet, plush and felt. Of the latter, gray felt is considered the most fashionable, save where white can be worn in, of course, is preceded the placed bonnet.—N. Y. Cor. Chicago Tribune.

A Wonder-Working Remedy.

No remedy, great has ever been offered to the sick and afflicted at all comparable to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, in cases of nervous debility, dyspepsia, constipation, neuralgia, rheumatism and disorders involving constitutional weakness or impaired vitality. Its effects upon the blood, the kidneys, the liver, bowels and stomach are simply wonderful. The ingredients which its spotless bands hold in solution, act like a charm upon the stomach, and through the stomach upon the brain, liver, bowels and kidneys. There is nothing in its composition that is not salubrious. It contains none of the deleterious tonics of the vegetable kingdom and the juices of the best specifics and antidotes—roots and herbs, combined with a perfectly pure stimulating elements. The bitters are peculiarly adapted to the use of females, and in all the varied occupations, as by its use strength is sustained and the vitality of the system is rendered atmospheric and other influences prejudicial to health largely increased.

Wonders of Modern Science.

The perfect accuracy with which scientists are now able to predict the most minute particulars in their several departments, appears from a statement in a review in the light of the early ages. Take for example the ever-changing telegraphic—the greatest invention of the age—is it not a marvelous degree of accuracy which enables an operator in New York to talk over 16 a minute rate cable easily in a thousand miles long? Is not the "wonder of the world" how it becomes so instantly familiar with those distant points? Nothing is the composition test is not salubrious. It contains none of the deleterious tonics of the vegetable kingdom and the juices of the best specifics and antidotes—roots and herbs, combined with a perfectly pure stimulating elements. The bitters are peculiarly adapted to the use of females, and in all the varied occupations, as by its use strength is sustained and the vitality of the system is rendered atmospheric and other influences prejudicial to health largely increased.

INDUSTRIAL.

MANY sheep are dying in San Diego County, Cal., for want of feed. One farmer is said to have lost 2,000 within two weeks.

THE recent advance in boots and shoes is thirty per cent., and manufacturers have orders largely in excess of their capacity.

GOLD-MINING is having a marked effect on the physical features of California. The river bottoms are being gradually raised by the earth carried down in suspension, and it is estimated that, at the present rate of "sloaking," the Sacramento will be unnavigable in ten years.

THE Reading Railroad Company have a most thorough streak of economy. The manager discharged 150 wipers three months ago, and ceased to purchase cotton waste. After a trial of 2,500,000 miles, he finds his engines are in good working condition as usual, and he has saved $825 per day.

BUFFALOS seventeen and twenty thousand alligator hides are used annually, which are consumed in boot and shoe manufactures in every portion of the United States, as well as exported to Europe and Japan. The alligators formerly came almost entirely from Louisiana, and New Orleans was the great center of business. The Florida swamps and morasses are now the harvest fields, and Jacksonville, in that State, the great depot. The skins often attain a length of eighteen to twenty feet, and frequently live to a very old age. The hides are stripped off, and the belly and sides, the only portions fit for use, are packed in barrels, in strong brine, and shipped to the Northern tanner, who keeps them moistened with water, and for six to eight months, when they are ready to be cut up. So far, the leather has been mainly used in the manufacture of boots, and the chief and habit entrance to the house. There is where the trouble lies; and farmers should educate themselves out of the notion that they must eat and live in the kitchen and sleep near it. And here the influence of woman may be exerted in a most efficient manner for good.

She can open those "best rooms" and let in the sunlight of Heaven and of her own cheerful heart and presence, and compel her family to occupy them. Here, if anywhere in the house, are the best educating influences of home. The mothers and daughters should ever be found there after their household duties are over. Here is the place of the family altar, sacred to pure conversation, to gentle and cheerful manners, to loving courtesy between parents and children, to neatness, order and truth. Let no one ever appear here without a coat on, or with his pantaloons tucked into his boot-tops, or with a hat on—it is no place for such boorish habits and customs.

We have seen excellent, good-hearted people, who lived in the kitchen, and who did not once a year, perhaps, enter the "best room." They would do one a favor, and spring to the aid of distress, as readily as any one; but these are no reasons for neglecting the best advantages and the most sacred influences of home. If they have pure consciences and kind hearts, why not elevate them into a purer and kindlier atmosphere, where the surroundings are in better keeping with the spirit within.

How pleasant in the evening, when outdoor and in-door work is done, for the whole family to gather into the parlor and light up its cheerful walls brilliantly. Should some social neighbors call, they would be all no less to tell where the household is gathered, for the lights are not shut in behind closed shutters—and the lights gleam out as though some joyous event had happened. The table is in the middle of the room, with books and papers and abundance to suit the tastes and capacities of all.

This is home; and here a home influence is born and nurtured, which grows, and spreads, and works, until everything in and about home is transformed, and instead of weeds, and brush, and disorder without, grass, and flowers, and trees are found; instead of rough and awkward manners and slovenliness of dress on the part of the men, there is considerate courtesy, refinement of manners and address, and a quiet care for personal appearance, cleanliness and dress.—Detroit Tribune.

Effects of the Brooklyn Fire.

A GENTLEMAN, who was curious enough to investigate, tells me that nearly a thousand people used to come from Brooklyn to places of amusement in New York, before the great fire, who now remain at home, or congregate in the other side of the river since. This statement is confirmed both by the ferrymen and the proprietors of down-town places of amusement. The latter say that above a hundred persons were accustomed to stop in his place for lunch before going home, after they had been from the up-town theaters, whereas he now regards himself fortunate if half-a-dozen of this class of patrons present themselves in the same way the effects of the fire extend beyond theatrical interests to the workmen, horse-car companies and restaurants, and will be felt for a year to come.—Cor. Chicago Tribune.

COLLINS' VOLTAIC PLASTER
Cures Pains and Aches.

SWORN STATEMENT OF A BOSTON DRUGGIST.

GENTLEMEN,—I hereby certify that I have had occasion to use your Allcock's Porous Plasters in my family, and have rendered partially or entirely cured by their use. I have used them for Colds, Coughs, Weak and painful Backs, Kidneys and Stomach, and for Pain in the Chest, Side and Limbs, and in every instance they have given entire satisfaction. I have also used all the Plasters manufactured by other parties, but have found none to equal the Allcock's. Frequently at night I wonder by one of my children, and on the point of convulsions, which would then have terminated fatally, but on applying one of your Plasters to the pit of the stomach, or between the shoulders, the desired effect was produced, and the child was relieved in a few minutes. I have also used your Plasters for Rheumatism, and can say that they are the best I ever used. I have also used your Plasters for Rheumatism, and can say that they are the best I ever used. I have also used your Plasters for Rheumatism, and can say that they are the best I ever used.

Sold by all druggists. Price 25 cents. Beware of worthless imitations. Ask for ALLCOCK'S, and take no other. Sold by druggists throughout the United States and Canada.

The Social.—The Ladies A. I. Society held at Hon. John Nicholas's residence on Tuesday evening last was well attended, and was the best one of the season, and was a happy and joyous occasion. The net proceeds exceeded $17.

As efforts are being made by the residents thereof to induce the Legislature to organize into a new Township, the territory in township 33 and 34 Range 9 w in this county. The Board of Supervisors refused to organize it owing to some preliminary omissions.

Gov. Hayes, it is written, looks fresh, young, buoyant and brilliant. The campaign had not added a furrow to his ruddy cheeks, nor a shadow to his high and ruddy brow." He preserves great calmness and self-poise.

A Cincinnati (Ohio) letter to the Philadelphia Press says "No man watches the progress of political events as day by day, the great trial proceed with greater interest or more intelligently than Gov. Hayes. Yet he preserves his wonted marvelous calmness and self-poise. He does absolutely nothing—tries to do nothing—never tried to do anything to make himself President. He refused to vote for himself. He never alludes to himself. He is modest to a fault; if it can ever become a fault. No man is so unchainant about the thing as Hayes. He looks his true. He believes in God and the people, and, as he has never botthered himself to try to manipulate politics in his own behalf, he calmly awaits the verdict, and when it comes, whether it shall raise him to the Presidency or leave him in the Governor's office, he will still smile and be happy and contented."

Mr. Zachariah Chandler knows a good thing when he sees it. He has put up in his office a comic cartoon, representing him as holding a big elephant, labeled "The Republican Party," by the tail, as it was falling through a bridge into the chasm it was crossing. Those who study the illustrated papers will recollect that the saintly secretary, reminding the Cross with a colossal foot-plant, began rather timid, but gripping the tail of the elephant with both hands, while a bottle with a watch case resting upon it, says the accuracy. "Don't you let go!" Zach. that was ever published. I called the Pandora's attention to it, and encouraged him from my position and grip that, rather than cause me trouble, I would certainly hold the elephant. But the rising Democratic sun," he continued, "is to undoubtedly how in the world I could let go my grip long enough to get at that bottle?"

An unsuccessful attempt was made to assassinate Gov. Packard, on the 16th.

A Washington dispatch to the Cincinnati Commercial contains the following interesting speculations upon the future of politics:

"A prominent Democratic leader from the West, who has been here for the last two weeks watching the course of events, said to-day that nothing is clearer than that Hayes will be declared the duly elected President of the United States. He regarded the facts as too strong to be overthrown. He is in hearty support of the arbitration by means of the Electoral Commission, notwithstanding his belief that it will result as above stated, and says that he will not be dissatisfied with that result. He seems to feel that the inauguration of Hayes will bring about new political combinations, which will result in the disintegration and renovation of the two great parties, and this will be for the best interests of the country. As they are at present they do not meet the requirements of the hour, and it is time to take a new look. During a recent visit to New York he called upon Tilden, and was sadly disappointed in him. Instead of finding him a high-minded, patriotic statesman, he found him to be nothing more nor less than a shrewd politician, bent more upon furthering his personal ambition than the real good of the country, and really willing, if not anxious, to appeal his case to the arbitrament of war, rather than let a decision be given against him by a peaceful method of adjustment. Tilden's administration would be more offensive personally than Grant's has been, and would only unrel firmly solidify the two parties in their present attitude. He has greatly changed his opinion of Tilden since the campaign, and this is due to him to say that he had not, up to the time of his recent visit, any personal knowledge of Gov. Tilden."

Death.—It becomes our painful duty to announce the death of Freddy, the six year old son of our fellow-townsman O. S. Washburn, at Wauseka, Wis., last week. The bereaved parents have the tender sympathies of their neighbors living in their sore affliction. Mr Washburn and his family were visiting friends in Wisconsin.

Board Meeting Adjourned.—We unfortunately be put on who have failed to put in their notices in the ballot of bypass suggestions on Railroad Lands in this county in our advertising columns that it is expected by the Land Department that a thorough and more complete examination which the lands has been done, in many instances, has ruined the forest, and the Company will put a check upon it hereafter. Be on your guard.

Black Hills Cured In.—So long your boy goods notions clothing fancy goods, groceries hardware and every thing else at home at Fox, Rose & Buttars.

The Tannery Question.—With the inexhaustible stores of hemlock bark, its ready accessibility, and the superior transportation facilities here presented to public notice, it is somewhat strange that long ere this a tannery has not been located here. The thousands of cords of bark annually exported from this region to the tanneries of the Lake Michigan cities, is a standing argument powerfully suggestive of the wisdom of reversing the order of things. The loud supply of hides here would meet a considerable share of the demand, while, per contra, the entire supply of bark for the up lake tanneries comes from this and intermediate ports. In bark there is large shrinkage and waste in shipping; in hides there is not. We insist that Charlevoix is the best point in Northern Michigan for a tannery.

It is the edge of the woods at last, brethren. Let your roosters clear their throats!

Property Exempt From Taxation.

The Committee on Ways and Means [illegible] section 3, chapter 1, of the general tax law of 1851, entitled "An act for the assessment of property and [illegible] Section 3 reads as follows:

[illegible] shall be exempt from taxation, the following property, viz: First, household furniture, not exceeding in value three hundred dollars, owned and occupied by the person claiming the exemption; provided, that the exemption shall not extend to any property purchased or used for the purpose of evading the payment of taxes; second, all wearing apparel of every person or family, fourth the library and school books of every individual and family not exceeding in value $150, and all family pictures, fifth, to each householder 15 sheep, with their fleeces and the yarn and the cloth manufactured from the same, two cows, five swine, and provisions and fuel for the consumption of such householder and family for six months, and all seed grain kept for use not exceeding in value $100; sixth, all the property of the U. States and of this State, except lands held for the State at tax sales; seventh all public or corporated property of the several counties, cities, villages, townships and school districts in this State used or intended for corporate purposes; eighth, the personal property of all library, benevolent, charitable and scientific institutions incorporated within the State, ninth, all rights of burial and tombs while in use as repositories of the dead; tenth, the personal estate of persons who by reason of infirmity, age or poverty may, in the opinion of the Supervisors may be unable to contribute toward the public charges."

Michigan County Treasurers on the State Liquor Tax Law

The County Treasurers' Convention met at Lansing on the 13th. Mr. Hardee, of Kent, was chosen chairman, and Mr Gillett, of Jackson, secretary. George B. Smallwood, of Wayne, chairman of the committee on that subject, submitted an report on the liquor law taxes. This report was signed by every county treasurer at the convention. It considers that while a few amendments the present liquor law could be made most effective and satisfactory—much more so than any of the bills yet introduced.

The amendments proposed to the Legislature refer to sections 7, 12, 13 and 16 of the present law. The first provides, as collectors shall be sued upon his sureties. The second declares that a receipt for the tax shall cover the business done at a particular place for the entire year, exclusive of the many [illegible] may emerge therein, and permits the paying back of any pro rata part of the federal tax in cases where partnership ceases or discontinue business before the close of the year. The third fixes the time for the sheriff to make return of the collection warrant, which is thirty days after he receives the warrant and ten days after the same is collected. The fourth requires the annual published report to cover the business for the fiscal year, and excludes statements of business reaching over into the succeeding year but not finally adjusted.

A Republican State Convention, to nominate one Justice of the Supreme Court in place of the Hon. Thomas M. Cooley, and two Regents of the State University in place of Jr. H. McGowan and Joseph Estabrook, will be held at the Opera House, in the city of Lansing, Wednesday, March 7, 1877, at 11 o'clock a. m. In accordance with a resolution adopted at Grand Rapids, May 10, 1876, every county will be entitled to one delegate for each 800 of the total vote cast for Governor in 1876, and one additional delegate for every fraction of 300 votes; but each organized county will be entitled to at least one delegate. Under the resolution of 1868, no delegate will be entitled to a seat who does not reside in the county he represents.

A little gubernatorial work as to the Hayes cabinet is in order.

Hayes the Man.

By telegraphic means we this morning that the Oregon electoral vote has been counted for Hayes by the Electoral Commission, as we feared. The Democratic members of course could not have planned for their own action, and being defeated, why should they complain? The plan which Democratic orators have pictured so eminently wise and patriotic has ended Rutherford B. Hayes President of the United States. But the Democrats cannot that partisanship caused the decision. Is it not as fair to say that it was put upon that ground by the Commissioners? Remember, Democrats, there are two sides to every question. And think that the members of the Electoral Commission are as honest as you or we pretend to be. Suppose that three things were brought before the Justices, who do not say any one of those Justices would acknowledge than in the way he honestly believed to be correct under the law? The vote of Judge Bradley no more shielded the case than did the vote of either Judge Strong or Judge Miller, or any member of the Commission voting with the majority. The Democracy do not think of charging either Judge Clifford or Judge Field with partisanship, then why should they so charge the opposing Justices? We believe every member of the Commission, in the votes that he gives, has cast his vote conscientiously. It is just as it should be. It is a triumph of right over wrong—of justice over fraud. But the Democrats did it, and they should not swallow their mistake

The Charlevoix Sentinel has reduced its size a column on each page. Once, hard times. It will be just as good a paper as heretofore, however. A little less advertising, that's all.—Cheboygan Tribune.

—The Charlevoix Sentinel has been reduced one column in size on account of lack of support. It is the duty of the residents of that county to give friend Smith a liberal support as he publishes a good paper. We much regret the necessity of his reducing the size of his paper and hope the cause will soon be removed.—Northport Tribune.

The lengthy and graceful figure of D. H. Joslin, of Petoskey, was much in the district of Cheboygan this week. Somehow, the [illegible] a few years ago Mr. Joslin has made considerable reputation in the practice of his profession. It will be [illegible] "Beardie" the lion in his den" in behalf of his client before a justice in Little Traverse, and in language perhaps more expressive than elegant, said to Esq. "I will have fallen or break"—Cheboygan Tribune.

The game is up with Tilden. He sees the north coolest office of President of the United States, passing from his reach forever, and he's a dollies hungry Democrats who are almost dying for offices, are horrified by grief and [illegible] by disappointment.

The Democratic press is generally out on the disgraceful Oregon business. It cannot find words scathing enough for Justice Bradley, and the other Republican members of the Commission, but for Kelly, Grover and Tilden, it has no words of censure.

Jacobus, cashier of Tilden's bank, a witness, under contempt of the Senate, is allowed to stay at his hotel, and has the carriage of the Sergeant at Arms to ride in. The members of the Louisiana Board are thrust into a damp, dark hole in the cellar of the Capitol. Retaliation in the treatment of prisoners often secures decency on the part of those who otherwise do not know how to be decent. The Republicans of the Senate should not learn to [illegible] too far.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

FOREIGN.

It was reported from Belgrade on the 10th that the Servian Minister and the Turkish Envoy had agreed upon a basis of peace.

A London telegram of the 10th says forty Yarmouth and Lowestoft fishing vessels were missing, and it was feared had been wrecked. There were 230 persons on board.

It is stated in a report from Hong Kong dispatch that the Chinese Government had refused the further employment of Chinese Coolies in the Spanish Colonies. This decision threatens to disturb the amicable relations existing with Spain.

According to reports made in the Canadian Parliament, on the 10th, the trade with the United States during 1876 aggregated $76,000,000, the imports exceeding the exports by $16,000,000.

London telegrams of the 11th say the owners of British coal mines had arranged with the Chinese Ambassador for a full supply of cheap Coolie labor.

According to a Calcutta dispatch of a late date, a terrible gunpowder explosion had occurred at Allahabad, India, which killed fifty and wounded one hundred persons.

According to Belgrade telegrams of the 12th, a new insurrection had broken out in Bosnia. The Russian authorities in Poland had distributed printed notices, threatening with severe punishment all Poles who should join the Turkish Army.

A London dispatch of the 13th says the Roumanian papers again assert that a treaty had been signed to permit the passage of Russian troops through Roumania.

A terrible explosion occurred in the fireworks factory at Cuenca, on the 14th, causing the loss of fifteen lives.

Col. Gordon, the African explorer, has been appointed governor of the Egyptian Province of Soudan.

According to letters of an English physician with Mukhtar Pasha's army in Trans-Caucasia, received in London on the 14th, the Turkish troops were in a dreadful condition on account of the lack of hospital accommodations. From twenty to thirty soldiers were dying daily from dysentery and typhoid fever.

According to Kirchenzeit (Russia) dispatches of the 15th, 180,000 infantry, 20,000 cavalry and 1,128 pieces of artillery were concentrated at Bielitz and Odessa, ready to march upon Turkey at a moment's notice. A Belgrade telegram of the same date says it was reported that Russia had not dropped Servia, that being the price she paid to Austria for her concurrence in the Czar's Turkish plans.

Changarnier, the famous French General, died in Paris on the 15th. He was eighty-four years old.

DOMESTIC.

A New Haven (Conn.) telegram of the 11th says the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railroad Company had settled with the widow of L. C. Crain, killed at Ashtabula, for $5,175.

The Treasury Department of the United States has prohibited the importation of meat cattle and lifeboat meat cut from Germany, Austria and Belgium, consequent upon the rinderpest there.

The Acting Secretary of the Treasury on the 12th issued the Treasury call for the redemption of 5-20 bonds of 1865, May and November. The call is for $40,000,000, of which $20,000 are coupon and $39,980,000 registered bonds, the principal and interest to be paid at the Treasury on and after the 15th of May next, interest to cease on that day.

At Omaha, on the 12th, Catville Lambert, aged 101 years, while drinking a sorrel with a cowboy, spilled some of it upon his clothes, which she accidentally kissed. She was burned almost to a crisp, and died soon after the accident.

A Boston dispatch of the 12th says the dispatch to the fellow had been transmitted from that place. The former knew by the telephone, the Salem reporter's voice being easily recognized in the office in Boston. This is the first instance of a message ever peel being orally transmitted, and shows the uses to which this wonderful invention may in the future be put.

A Washington dispatch of the 14th says a bill had been drafted to meet substantially the recommendations of the President in his recent special message in regard to early specie payments, and submitted to him, as it probably would be to the Committee of Ways and Means. Its provisions differed in several respects from the suggestions of the President, but there was reason to believe that he would not seriously object to the changes.

On the morning of the 14th, an attempt was made to wreck a train on the Iron Mountain Railroad, at a point three miles east of Little Rock, Ark. Bolts were removed from the track, and an express train thrown down an embankment. The fireman was instantly killed, and the engineer fatally wounded. It is thought that the expectation of the wreckers was that the train would be thoroughly ironed up, and that in the confusion the passengers could be easily robbed. Such a result was not realized, and no outrage upon passengers was attempted.

On the night of the 15th, a special United States Treasury agent arrested in New York three parties charged in extensive smuggling operations from Canada. The goods were got across the border through the connivance of United States officials. The line to the revenue from these operations is estimated to be over a million of dollars.

In New York, on the night of the 15th, the wholesale store of William Sloan & Co. was robbed of $60,000 worth of laces.

PERSONAL.

The exceptions taken to the rulings and sentence of John D. Lee, the Mountain Meadow murderer, were overruled by the Supreme Court of the Territory on the 10th, and the Second District Court was ordered to fix another day for the execution. It was probable that an appeal would be taken to the United States Supreme Court.

POLITICAL.

The Michigan Republican State Convention, to nominate one candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court and two for Regents of the University, to be voted for at the State election in April, has been called to meet at Lansing on the 5th of March.

A few minutes before noon on the 15th a man, who gave his name as William H. Weldon, and claimed to be an attache of the Philadelphia Press, gained access to the room of Hon. Packard in New Orleans, and, after sitting a few moments, arose and presented a pistol at the Governor's head. The latter struck down the man's hand just as the pistol went off, and the ball struck the Governor's knee-pan, inflicting a slight wound. The Governor, who was not armed, caught the fellow by the throat and threw him against the wall before he had an opportunity to fire again, and struck him. There were several gentlemen in the room at the time, and during the excitement that followed the assassin was shot in the arm, and would have been killed had not the Governor interfered. Inquiries in Philadelphia developed the fact that no man by the name of Weldon was connected with that paper. Gov. Nicholls telegraphed to Washington that the circumstances, time, place, etc., pointed to the act of a lunatic, and that every effort should be made to probe the matter to the bottom. The dispatch says a comrade of the would-be assassin had been arrested, and another had escaped. Weldon had promised to make a confession.

CONGRESSIONAL.

In the Senate, on the 10th, the objection submitted by Mr. Field to the decisions of the Electoral Commission in the Florida case was read, and, after debate, an order that the Senate do not concur in such action was referred. Then, on motion, a resolution was introduced to the effect that Congress would adjourn on the 5th of March, notwithstanding the objections made thereto by the House, the resolutions made thereto by the House, the resolutions made thereto by the House, the resolutions

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

Many of your readers have been of late much concern from my non-appearance "among" to favor the result of the late election. They may be aware of the fact that Senator Zach Chandler was elected for President, Gen. Grant left town for Washington, and Mr. Abram S. Hewitt will appear in the Democratic Symposium. Give a ear to hear the spirit stirring reminiscences of veteran Tribune.

In order that the hospitality of the metropolis may not be left with the slur upon it which is supposed to have been cast upon the Great Duke Alexis a well selected list of the guests of the Russian Grand Duke Constantine for breakfast, on Tuesday, was as follows: Gen. Sheridan, Gen. Sherman, Gen. Meade, Gen. Hancock, Gen. Schofield, Gen. Rucker, Gen. Ingalls, Gen. Dodge, Gen. Porter, Gen. Badeau, Gen. Forsyth, Gen. Dent, Gen. Babcock, Gen. Comstock, Gen. Rawlins, Gen. Belknap, Gen. Delafield, Gen. Robert Ogden, Gen. Cullum, Gen. Wilson, Gen. Fish, Gen. Cadwalader, Gen. Hamilton, Gen. Wadsworth, Gen. Van Buren, Gen. Barry, Gen. Hunter, Gen. Ruggles, Gen. Sackett, Gen. Townsend, Gen. Van Vliet, Gen. Van Rensselaer, Gen. Van Cortlandt, Gen. Van Wyck, Gen. Van Alen, Gen. Van Ness, Gen. Van Horne, Gen. Van Dyke, Gen. Van Zandt, Gen. Van Brunt, Gen. Van Schaick, Gen. Van Valkenburgh, Gen. Van Buskirk, Gen. Van Dusen, Gen. Van Tassel, Gen. Van Deusen, Gen. Van Voorhis, Gen. Van Wagenen, Gen. Van Nostrand, Gen. Van Pelt, Gen. Van Cleve, Gen. Van Camp, Gen. Van Ness, Gen. Van Horne, Gen. Van Dyke, Gen. Van Zandt, Gen. Van Brunt, Gen. Van Schaick, Gen. Van Valkenburgh, Gen. Van Buskirk, Gen. Van Dusen, Gen. Van Tassel, Gen. Van Deusen, Gen. Van Voorhis, Gen. Van Wagenen, Gen. Van Nostrand, Gen. Van Pelt, Gen. Van Cleve, Gen. Van Camp.

Tweed continues his examination, but is not communicative.

Gen. Sherman has been invited to Washington to be present at the inauguration of Gen. Hayes

RELIGIOUS AND EDUCATIONAL.

"Watch-night" services, after the Methodist pattern, have been adopted by the Arminian churches of London known as "advanced." Mr. Spurgeon also held a watch-meeting in his tabernacle on New Year's Eve. It was attended by a great crowd.

Through the practice at Harvard College of lending money to students whose circumstances require it, and of taking notes in return, many of those notes are never paid. It is estimated that over $25,000 is now due to the college from students who have never repaid what they borrowed. In his last annual report, President Eliot states that the majority of these debtors are in the ministry, and takes strong ground against the extension of the beneficiary system.

The Congregationalist has an answer to the question often asked in a low antiphon, "Has he any soap in hog?" It thinks a candidate for a pulpit might well ask, "Have the people any soap in them? Have they soap enough to pay the minister's salary promptly? Have they soap enough to go to church for every service required of him as certainly as to their pleas of business weekdays, stormy or sunshine, which lacking not of soap? Have they soap enough, when there, to keep wide awake?"

—Jerusalem contains about 8,000 or 9,000 Jews; there are more in North Africa than elsewhere. In Italy and Spain there are very few. In Great Britain they are in the proportion of one to 1,000; in France, four to 1,000; in Switzerland there are 7,000; in Germany, including Alsace, Lorraine and the Polish Provinces, 512,000; in Austria, 1,576,000, one-third of them occupying Galicia, of whose population they will be a thirty-eighth during the present rate of increase; in Russia there are 1,820,000, in the old Kingdom of Poland Jews are thirteen per cent. of the population, and are over thirty-five per cent. in Warsaw.

The Philadelphia Times summarizes the work of the Young Men's Christian Association of that city during the past year. The Association found situations for 995 adults and 500 lads, and furnished lodgings for 2,100, and 1,950 meals. All this is in addition to the better known work of the Association, the numerous meetings of various kinds, the support of the reading-rooms, and so forth, and it should serve to quicken the public desire that this excellent Association may soon occupy the noble building prepared for it, where its usefulness can be so greatly extended. The building is finished, but the Association, which now has an aggregate membership of 3,458, very wisely refuses to occupy it until completely paid for. It has cost $670,000, all of which has now been paid but $70,000, a sum which, for such a purpose, this community ought to raise in a week.

—Dr. Charles Saffray, a learned Frenchman, who visited the Centennial Exposition, and carefully studied our school systems, thus embraces the position we accord the teachers: "That the first reform which the friends of education ought to desire to see realized in the United States, is the abandonment of a system which places the appointment of a teacher in the hands of men whose official career lasts only three years, and who are not competent, in spite of themselves, by the very circumstances to which they owe their election. The teacher should be chosen for his merit, proved by diplomas and serious examinations; he should feel sure of preserving his position as long as he remains worthy thereof; his salary should secure him a modest comfort, with the knowledge that after twenty-five years of zeal and service, he can count upon an old age not exposed to misery. As long as the United States do not assure to teachers impartially of all conditions, a standard of promotion, permanence of functions, and security for the future, they will, too often, have only inferior or mediocre teachers, and in spite of the most flattering pretensions, popular instruction will remain, in many districts, quite insufficient."

What the Sea Tells Us.

If the present crust of the earth did not afford, as it does, the clearest evidence of a time when the earth's whole frame glowed with intense heat; if we could not, as we can, derive from the movements of the celestial bodies, as well as from the telescopic appearance of surrounding bodies, the most certain assurance that all the planets, nay, the whole of the solar system itself, were once in this state of glowing vapor; the ocean brine—the mighty reservoir left after the earth had passed through its baptism of liquid fire—would leave us in utter doubt respecting the many features, at least, of the earth's past history. The seas could never have attained their present condition had not the earth which they encompassed when they were young been then an ark of fire. Every wave that pours its spoil on the shore seeks to us of to-day a point that all ordinary time-measures fail us in the attempt to measure the length to the vast intervals separating us from it. The saltness of the ocean is no minor feature or mere detail of our globe's economy, but has a significance truly colossal in its importance. Tremendous, indeed, must have been the activity of those primeval processes, hence the heat of those primeval fires, under whose action sixty thousand millions of millions of tons of soil were extracted from the cattle's subsistence and added to its envelope.—Cornhill Magazine.

Those Cipher Dispatches Translated.

It will be remembered that among the batch of dispatches passing to and from Democratic magnates and agents upon the Oregon question was the following, which has hitherto puzzled the wisest heads to unravel:

PORTLAND, OREGON, Dec. 1, 1876.
To the Hon. S. J. TILDEN, 15 Gramercy Park, New York:
Hold on until mails come; persecution bolkoms; garvey knows of counter-deal. Bolkoms overdrawn; cannot survive. Signed coming; satisfy chair galvanic survivor by assuming votes for two electors of Senator [illegible] confess.
GIBBS.

We have in our possession the translation of this message, and proud that it is correct, that responds to an absolute demonstration. The dispatch, deciphered, is from Gen. Garvey, of Oregon, to Mr. Tilden, and is as follows:

"I shall decide every point in the case of Bolkhuis Hixon in favor of the highest Democratic bidder and send the certificate according. Rest morning of 6th. Inconsequence confidential."

The cipher is arranged on the diction ary method. A small pocket English dictionary, of a peculiar edition owned and there are facts in our possession, which we are not at liberty to publish, which prove, beyond all doubt, that this secret particular book that was used, and show why it was chosen. We have seen the dictionary, and deciphered the entire dispatch by its use.

The dictionary has two columns on a page, and the plan was to locate the word desired, and then run back two pages, and the corresponding word in the same column of words, counting from the top of the page, was the one that was taken for use in the cipher dispatch. Accordingly, taking the bolkhuis dispatch and deciphering it word by word, the right word was looked for and found every time, two pages in advance of the word found in the dispatch, and at the same numbered line from the top of the column.

The demonstration is perfect. It would be utterly incomprehensible that the translation which we have given above, and which we have traced out word by word in this particular dictionary, could fit the political situation in Oregon as it does if it were not the correct and absolute key. The signature alone defies translation by the use of any known way and was evidently agreed upon beforehand and understood.

The same key reveals the fact that in some of the Patrick telegrams where the word "significance" was used the word "money" should be substituted to ascertain the real meaning.

There is no doubt of the authenticity of this key, and we could show still further, and as conclusively, how and why it came to us, but the public information is cannot now, probably, be of any consequence, and we do not therefore go into it.—Detroit Tribune, Feb. 7.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.

The Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections were in session until a late hour this evening occupied with the examination of Alfred B. Hannan and A. W. Shaw, of Detroit, before them. Hannan business transactions with J. H. N. Patrick, of Omaha, and who connected Patrick with him in telegraph in regard to some years past. The key to the cipher used in them is "The Household English Dictionary," and by the aid of this key the following translations of the cipher dispatches receive to the Oregon Electoral case were made:

PORTLAND, OREGON, Nov. 28, 1876.
W. T. Pelton, 15 Gramercy Park, New York:
Certificate will be issued to one Democrat. Must pay and Republican Elector forever. Democrat will with Democrat and secure vote and prevent trouble. Deposit $10,000 to my credit with Kountze Bros., Wall street. Answer.
J. H. PATRICK.

I fully indorse this. JAMES K. KELLY.

PORTLAND, OREGON, Nov. 30

The nomination of the Democracy ever Nasse knights is in a state of ecstasy.

A petition is in circulation favoring the grant of swamp lands to aid in the construction of a railroad from Alpena Southward and it formed a junction with the Jackson, Lansing and Saginaw Railroad.

A bill has passed both Houses of Congress, and now goes to the President, removing the political disabilities of Gen. Joseph E. Johnston.

Palestine is gradually undergoing a transformation, through the foreign colonists that are being planted in it. The German element is especially strong.

Gov HAYES' "luck" promises not to desert him. His record as a winner in close contests is unequaled in American politics.

The Danbury News naively remarks: "There is a thirty thousand dollar tomb in Greenwood. A stone mason made it. In the outskirts a pauper lies under a rose bush. God made it."

And still it looks to us as if Dr. Douglas was being badly worsted in the laboratory defalcation examination by the evidence being presented before the legislative investigating committee.

A bill is pending in Congress proposing to create a new Territory, out of the Black Hills country, to be called Lincoln.

It is reported that Senator Christiancy, of this State, was a prominent candidate for the Supreme Court vacancy occasioned by the election of Judge Davis to the Senate.

Here are some sample paragraphs from the Chicago Times, in regard to Judge Bradley.

"Judge Bradley's bread has a butter-ed side. His son is a clerk in Attorney General Taft's office, and Taft is taking good enough care of him."

"Judge Bradley's father was a charcoal burner, and Joseph carted the stuff to town. No doubt a very poor drayman spoiled to make an extremely good Republican."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

FOREIGN.

It was reported from Constantinople, on the 17th, that Montenegro had asked for two months' extension of the armistice for the consideration of propositions of peace, but Turkey had declined to accede to the request.

A London dispatch of the 18th says the manof-war Valorous had just returned after a week's futile search for the missing fishing fleet. Twenty-five vessels and 136 men were given up as lost.

According to Constantinople dispatches of the 18th, Ethem Pasha, lately appointed Grand Vizier, had been dismissed, and Mahmoud Damand, brother-in-law of the Sultan, named as his successor. It was understood that the policy of the latter would be the abrogation of the constitution.

According to Berlin specials of the 19th, peace had been substantially concluded between Turkey and Servia.

A Vienna dispatch of the 20th says the Roumanian representative had informed Count Andrassy, the Austrian Prime Minister, that Roumania would remain neutral in the event of war between Turkey and Russia.

A Belgrade telegram of the 20th says Russia had informed Servia that she would cross an army over the Pruth during the succeeding few days.

According to a Constantinople dispatch of the 20th, the Sultan was affected with a brain disease, and had been unable to serve his Ministers during the preceding three days.

A London special of the 21st says that thirty vessels, many of them with their entire crews, foundered in the gale along the British coast on the night of the 19th.

According to Constantinople dispatches of the 21st, anarchy prevailed in that city in consequence of alarming reports of the Sultan's illness. The Porte had declared that the Sultan was seriously indisposed.

St. Petersburg dispatches of the 21st say that the war party was in the ascendant throughout Russia, and that the date of the declaration of war and the advance into Turkey only depended upon the progress of events in that country.

Belgrade dispatches of the 21st state that the recent election of members of the Skupschtina showed a large majority of members favoring the policy of peace and reconciliation with Turkey.

On the 21st, the Canadian petroleum oil ring collapsed, and the price of kerosene fell forty cents in consequence.

According to a Dublin telegram of the 22d, Cardinal Cullen had refused to allow the remains of John Mahoney, who deceased Fenian Head Center, to lie in state in the Cathedral.

DOMESTIC.

Early on the morning of the 16th, Joe Coburn, the notorious pugilist, shot and dangerously wounded two police officers in New York City. Sergeant Collins of the 5th had ordered a hackman from in front of Coburn's saloon on Broadway, and was followed up by Coburn, who deliberately fired two shots, one taking effect in the breast and the other in the arm of the officer. Another police officer named Jeffries, hearing the firing, ran to the assistance of his comrade, when Coburn fired again, wounding the second officer in the side. Coburn was arrested.

At New Orleans, on the 16th, the City Recorder visited the wounded man Weldon at the room where he was lying, in the old St. Louis Hotel or State-House, and formally arraigned him on a charge of assaulting Gov. Packard with a deadly weapon, with intent to murder. To the formal question, "Are you guilty or not guilty of this charge?" the prisoner replied in a firm voice, "Guilty." An order of commitment was then made out directing the Chief of Police to retain him in custody until further notice.

The banking house of Klug & Son, New York City, was robbed on the afternoon of the 16th, of two fifty boxes, said to contain United States bonds, mortgages, securities, etc., valued at $150,000. The robbery occurred while a member of the firm was locking the safe to place the boxes therein.

A little before midnight on the night of the 16th, at East St. Louis, a fire broke out in a row of frame buildings on Bloody Island, a block north of the great bridge. A half hour later the flames had reached and set on fire the eastern approaches to that structure, causing a damage to the bridge alone of $100,000. Beside this, over 100 buildings were burned, and 150 families rendered homeless.

The Ohio State Grange assembled at Columbus on the 20th. About 200 delegates were present. The address of welcome was made by Mayor Johnson, and the remainder of the day was spent in the reception of reports and their reference to appropriate committees.

The boiler in the Clifton Barrel Works, at Pomeroy, O., exploded on the evening of the 21st, killing four persons and wounding twelve others.

The house of John Canoly, in Hazelton Township, Shiawassee County, Mich., was burned early on the morning of the 21st, and five children perished in the flames. There were eight persons in the house, only three escaping. Mr. Conoly and two sons were badly scorched in attempting to rescue the children.

The wool growers of Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, West Virginia and Pennsylvania held a meeting at Cincinnati, on the 22d, and decided to erect a reputable storehouse at Steubenville, Ohio, for the purpose of storing their product and assorting it before placing it upon the market. They are Grangers, and will dispose of their stock directly to manufacturers.

The Ohio State Grange on the 22d elected the following officers: R. H. Ellis, of Warren County, Master, re-elected; T. J. Joy, of Delaware, Overseer; J. W. Ogden, Lecturer; J. B. Gourly, of Morgan County, Steward; S. B. Baldwin, of Butler, Treasurer, R. Stevenson, Secretary.

PERSONAL.

Rear Admiral Charles H. Davis, Superintendent of the Naval Observatory in Washington, died on the morning of the 18th, of disease of the heart.

Fred S. Winslow, who was recently indicted for the larceny of the $12,000 package from the United States Treasury Department in Washington, has been sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment in the Albany Penitentiary.

Judge H. W. Williams, of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, died in Pittsburgh, on the 19th, of heart disease.

Rear Admiral Louis M. Goldsborough died in Washington on the morning of the 20th, of typhoid pneumonia. This is the 24th death among Rear Admirals within four or five weeks.

POLITICAL.

A dispatch was received at San Francisco, on the 12th, from ex-Gov. Grover, of Oregon, emphatically stating that he did not send the other telegram signed "Nobbler" to Gov. Tilden, and that all such pretended telegrams are forgeries.

A caucus of Democratic Senators and Representatives was held in Washington on the evening of the 17th, at which Mr. Thurman presided. After an animated discussion a resolution was adopted, by a vote of sixty-nine to forty, declaring that "the count of the Electoral vote shall proceed without obstruction or opposition, to the orderly execution of the act of Congress creating the Electoral Commission, whose decisions shall be received and acted upon in accordance with the provisions of said law." Incorporated with the resolution was "the solemn and earnest protest of the Democratic party against the gross and shameless stolen forms of law, justice and truth contained in the decisions of the majority who signed the same in the case of Florida and Louisiana."

At a caucus of Democratic Senators and Congressmen in Washington, on the evening of the 19th, resolutions were offered, but not voted on, denouncing the action of the Electoral Commission in the Louisiana case. A motion was finally adopted that the caucus should take a recess until the count of the Oregon vote in the joint meeting of the two houses. Those of the caucus who favored extreme measures did not, owing to the preponderance of the conservative element, ask for a rejection of the questions presented. The canvassing by their action of the night of the 17th.

A Washington Associated Press dispatch of the 20th states that, on that day, Congressman Ellis, Col. Burke and Contractor Greenman, of Louisiana, called on President Grant and explained to him the condition of affairs in that State. The President replied that he was satisfied the returning board was acting in good faith in preserving the status quo, and he therefore had no intention of changing his instructions to Gen. Angur. In the course of the conversation the President said that Nicholls should not be held responsible for the freak of the crazy man who shot Packard.

The election in Philadelphia on the 20th resulted in the re-election of Mayor Stokely (Rep.) by about 3,000 majority. On the same day the Democrats of Pittsburgh, Pa., elected Liddell and McCarthy for Mayor and Comptroller, and the Republicans elected Register Treasurer, over Cosgrove, Democrat.

Gov. Nicholls, of Louisiana, on the 20th, sent a dispatch to Maj. E. A. Burke, in Washington, stating that the people of that State not only refused to pay taxes to any Government but that of which he was Governor, but had authorized the appointment of Tax Collectors, and voluntarily paid to agents for the use of his Government the percentage deemed sufficient for immediate purposes.

The Grand Jury of the District of Columbia, on the 21st, found an indictment against Jason Fall, editor of the Washington Capital, for having, in his paper of the 18th, uttered seditious language, which was interpreted to suggest the assassination of Gov. Hayes, and of which the following is an extract: "If a man [Hayes] thus returned to power can ride in safety from the Executive Mansion to the Capitol to be inaugurated, we are fitted for the slavery that will follow the inauguration. We do not believe the people of the United States are quite so degraded as that. We do believe that they are prepared, without a blow, to part with their liberties, property, blood-stained possessions * * * If there is law for fraud, there is reason for violence, and to that we make our last appeal." Jason Fall published a card on the 20th, in which he stated that "nothing was further from my thought in penning the editorial of last Sunday than the horrible crime of assassination. Open resistance to revolutionary wrong, for which there seems no other resistance, is one thing, assassination is another." Fall was arrested on the afternoon of the 21st by the United States Marshal, and gave bail in the sum of $5,000.

On the 21st, United States Senator Kernan received a communication from Gov. Tilden, in which the latter repudiates the agreement entered into between the Senate and House Election Investigating Committees not to go into an examination of his (Tilden's) bank accounts on the one hand, or the accounts of the Chairman of the Republican National Committee on the other. He says he utterly rejects the false imputation that his private bank accounts contain anything whatever that needs to be concealed. He says, further, that he never made, authorized or knew of any expenditure in relation to the election in Oregon, or the resulting controversies, or any promise or obligation or negotiation on the subject.

The Ohio State Prohibition Convention met at Columbus, on the 22d, and adopted a platform—favoring the prohibition of the liquor traffic; against the employment in the public service of persons who sell liquor or are addicted to the habit of drinking liquor; demanding female suffrage and compulsory education; favoring the use of the Bible as a text book in the public schools, and the observance of the Christian Sabbath. The following ticket was nominated: For Governor, A. A. Thompson; Lieutenant Governor, George B. Jenkins; State Treasurer, Azra Alderman; Attorney General, B. W. Gay; Supreme Judge, B. C. Montgomery; Clerk of the Supreme Court, Hiram Dodd, Member of the Board of Public Works, Amos Miller.

CONGRESSIONAL.

In the Senate, on the 17th, it was agreed that the House be informed that the Senate was ready to proceed with the count of the Electoral votes, and a message was subsequently received in the House stating that the latter body would be prepared to proceed to the counting of the votes when it resume its session. Mr. Kelly, in a brief speech, moved to refer the credentials of Mr. Burnside, who represented that State in the Senate for the term beginning on March 4, 1875, to the Committee on Privileges and Elections, and to report by bill or otherwise. Mr. Burnside was a Republican, and the motion was agreed to. Mr. Kelly also introduced a bill to provide for the appointment of Commissioners to take depositions in contested election cases, which was referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections. Mr. Kelly explained that the object of the bill was to enable contestants to take depositions in other States than those in which the parties resided. The bill was reported back from the Committee on Privileges and Elections on the 18th, with a recommendation that it do not pass, and was indefinitely postponed. The Senate then proceeded to the consideration of the Louisiana case. Mr. Edmunds addressed the Senate in favor of the resolution declaring that the Senate was ready to proceed to the counting of the votes. Mr. Thurman followed in opposition to the resolution, and Mr. Conkling spoke in favor of it. Mr. Edmunds closed the debate, and the resolution was agreed to—yeas 36, nays 29. The House then proceeded to the consideration of the Louisiana case. Mr. Foster, of Ohio, moved that the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendment to the Louisiana bill, and concur therein. Mr. Foster's motion was agreed to—yeas 153, nays 91. The House then proceeded to the consideration of the Florida case. Mr. Foster moved that the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendment to the Florida bill, and concur therein. Mr. Foster's motion was agreed to—yeas 153, nays 91. The House then proceeded to the consideration of the Oregon case. Mr. Foster moved that the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendment to the Oregon bill, and concur therein. Mr. Foster's motion was agreed to—yeas 153, nays 91. The House then proceeded to the consideration of the Louisiana case. Mr. Foster moved that the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendment to the Louisiana bill, and concur therein. Mr. Foster's motion was agreed to—yeas 153, nays 91. The House then proceeded to the consideration of the Florida case. Mr. Foster moved that the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendment to the Florida bill, and concur therein. Mr. Foster's motion was agreed to—yeas 153, nays 91. The House then proceeded to the consideration of the Oregon case. Mr. Foster moved that the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendment to the Oregon bill, and concur therein. Mr. Foster's motion was agreed to—yeas 153, nays 91.

In the Senate, on the 21st, the Postoffice and the Legislative, Judicial and Executive Appropriation bills were amended and passed. The House amendments to the bill to ratify an agreement with certain bands of the Sioux Nation of Indians were agreed to. The Senate then took up the Louisiana case, and Mr. Edmunds addressed it in favor of the resolution declaring that the Senate was ready to proceed to the counting of the votes. Mr. Conkling followed in opposition to the resolution, and Mr. Edmunds closed the debate. The resolution was then agreed to—yeas 36, nays 29. The House bill to perfect the Revised Statutes of the United States and of the District of Columbia was then passed. The House bill to amend section 3,929 of the Revised Statutes was agreed to, and the Senate amendments to the House bill to authorize the issue of duplicate checks, drafts or certificates of deposit in lieu of those lost or destroyed while in the mail was concurred in. The House bill to amend section 4,078 of the Revised Statutes was then passed. The House bill to amend section 4,078 of the Revised Statutes was then passed. TUESDAY, MARCH 6, 1877.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

If the Father of his Country was able to look down from the abodes of bliss on Thursday last, and take a birds-eye view of the metropolis of his only child he must have been gratified to observe the extent and heartiness with which his birthday was celebrated. But our first President left behind him a reputation for considerable shrewdness, as well as goodness, and I doubt not, therefore, that he noticed, too, an obliviousness of himself almost as general as the demonstrations. The people love a holiday, and so long as Washington's birthday furnishes them the pretext for stopping work, putting on their best clothes and seeing processions so long will Washington's name be the motto of the festival; but so far as that is concerned I guess Julius Cæsar's Birthday would be kept with equal fervor if it afforded the same opportunity for holiday enjoyment.

But possibly I underestimate American patriotism; possibly the deepest feelings of reverence and gratitude underlie the pleasure seeking exterior of the multitude; so I will theorise no farther but will speak briefly of the principal features of the day in New York.

One of these was certainly the display of flags on land and water. From every flagstaff in the city, from every public building, and from the summits of both piers of the Brooklyn bridge floated the Stars and Stripes in all the brilliancy of a cloudless spring day. From every vessel in the docks, and from the cosmopolitan fleet scattered over the harbor streamed also the same emblem, surely the most glorious banner ever devised by man. On foreign craft the national colors of each were, moreover lavishly displayed.

On shore the programme of the day was quite various. On the chimes of Trinity and Grace churches long programmes of music were performed by their respective ringers, the audience in each case being the tens of thousands who live within earshot. In the early afternoon Union and Madison Square were filled to overflowing with people interestedly watching, in the first case a military review, and in the latter the placing in position upon its temporary pedestral of the gigantic hand of Bartholdi's "Liberty," of which I spoke last week. At one of the leading hotels a dinner was given by the proprietors to the veterans of 1812, of whom about thirty were present, white headed old fellows, bowed and infirm with years, the youngest being 75. "It was hard to realize," says the Tribune, speaking of this dinner, "that these old men, trembling with age, placing spectacles on their noses before painfully scratching their names upon the register, had once been doughty antagonists in battle." But so it was, and these relics of former days quavered out many a tale of their own deeds and during two-thirds of a century ago. Among the guests was a niece of Paul Jones, a lady of 75, sprightly, pleasant and extremely proud of her dashing ancestor.

She had in her possession Jones' sword and the first American ensign ever made.

In the evening was given, right in the solemn face of Lent, the grand ball of the season. If any of your readers read my letter one year ago this week, they may remember the account there given of the Martha Washington Reception and Tea Party at the Academy of Music on the last anniversary of the day. The one this year was quite similar in character; perhaps not quite as profitable, pecuniarily, but no less attractive. The same crush of elegance and beauty, the same gleam of satin and rustle of silk, the same array of stately dames and demure damsels with powdered hair and the costumes of past centuries, the same wealth of jewels and charms, the same multiplicity of young couples ostensibly drinking tea and really flirting desperately, the same profusion of flowers, flags and drapery—all this was there and more than all to feminine New York there, too was Alexis, and with him the rest of the noble Russians. Many and romantic are the stories told regarding the condition of this young man's affections, but whatever be the truth in the matter, those affections must be very firmly fixed indeed, if they escaped entanglement in the maze of admiring and coquettish glances from the bright eyes of America's fairest daughters, of which his august person was the centre throughout the evening. No other distinguished foreigner has ever touched so deeply the aggregate feminine heart of the metropolis as Alexis, and I shrewdly suspect that the number of them who could be induced to leave country and home, and even the brave the rigors to a Russian climate, to preside over the Grand Ducal establishment in St. Petersburg, exceeds the number who could not be so persuaded by a large majority. Alexis, however, takes all this adulation with great composure, and the prospect for an American Empress of all the Russias in case of his succession to the throne is depressingly poor as yet.

Revival work, which is at present almost at a standstill among the regular churches, is being vigorously pushed in the slums. One of the most singular incidents of the movement occurred one evening this week. A man arose in Sherry McAuley's Mission to ask for prayers, who said that he was just out of State Prison. He had planned to "crack" a store that night to steal $5,000, but an hour before coming to the mission he became troubled in his mind." He postponed the burglary to some other day and went to the mission, and while there conviction of sin came upon him. Before the meeting was over he said that he was converted and gave evidence of his new feeling before the congregation.

A strange sort of miser has just been discovered in one of our back streets in the shape of an old Irish rag-picker, seventy years old and almost an idiot to all appearance. Under some rags in his room were found bank books showing him to have a good many thousand dollar deposited in different places. He was taken in charge by the police, and on searching him nearly a hundred dollars in currency were found in his pockets. It may be inferred from this that rag picking is not such a poor business after all, especially in large cities, and indeed cases are plenty where the rummager in gutters, ash barrels and the like, has discovered money, jewelry and other valuables sufficient to repay him for weeks and months of unprofitable searching.

And now it seems that the vague threats made by disappointed bears at the time of the publication of Vanderbilt's will were meant in earnest. It is now formally announced by the representative or several of the children that they shall contest, and if possible break the Commodore's will, with a view of securing larger shares of his property than he himself awarded them. This is good for the lawyers, but won't hurt the will a bit.

The pleasure of an amateur theatrical performance in Brooklyn last week was somewhat marred by a performance not down on the bills. Two young bloods—for the company was made up of high society—got into a jealous quarrel behind the scenes, and one cowhided the other, creating intense excitement. The assailant was arrested, and in spite of strenuous efforts made by wealthy friends to shield him, goes to jail for two months, which will probably cure him of his belligerency.

A peculiar will is the latest town talk. The daughter and heiress of Matt. Duncer, years ago the "king bee" of New York gamblers, has just died and left over $500,000 in New York charities. Thirty-one different institutions benefit by this queer freak of the gambler's daughter from $5,000 to 20,000 each; and while modern Christianity cannot show itself sufficiently horrified at the vice of gaming, I have yet to hear that any one of the churches or missionary societies who are to share the wealth accumulated in the practice of this vice refuses to receive the tarnished gold. Probably "the end sanctifies the means."

RADIX.

Justice Bradley, it is suggested, strikingly resembles the late Andrew Johnson, especially in profile and he wears the same sharp-pointed shaddingcollar and black silk stock, while his iron-gray hair is brushed down smoothly after the manner of Mr. Johnson.

Cronin is filled with a sense of profound disgust, when he sees from the Patrick-Kelly-Petton-Tilden cipher dispatches, that the conspirators were willing to pay $5,000 for a Republican voter to act with him in the Oregon Electoral College, though voting for Hayes, and yet paid him only $3,000 for his Tilden vote, and compelled him to carry it to Washington besides.—*Springfield (Ill.) Personal and Political.

Sallie Holman, prima donna, is singing on crutches in Canada.

A brother of Fox, the clown, is a member of the Massachusetts Senate.

The salary of the President of Switzerland has been increased from $2,040 to $2,760 a year.

Mr. Edwin Adams is not at present able to endure the trip from San Francisco to the East. He suffers and is very weak.

There is at the present time in the Mexican treasury the sum of 17 cents in specie. It has slipped into a crevice, and cannot be got at.

All the Presidents elected by the Republican party were born within 175 miles of Cincinnati, two in Ohio and one in Kentucky.

Healy, the American artist, is about to paint a portrait of Gambetta, which, if finished in time, will be exhibited at the Salon.

There is a rumor that Mr. Tilden is about to take a trip to Europe. Mr. Tilden himself says that it is thirty-one years since he has taken any rest.

The Venerable Mrs. Charles Kean, in going down stairs not long ago, caught her foot in the carpet and fell headlong. After much suffering she is now getting on favorably.

One term in Congress, according to Grace Greenwood, is simply time given a man to realize what a fool he is. A second term is sometimes given to show what fools his constituents are.

Mr. Sothern is himself the author of the neat, expressive, and touching love-scene, at the piano, in the comedy of "Home," and also of the equally felicitous love-scene in the play of "A Hornet's Nest."

Cleavland Democratic editor is reported to have knocked down a wandering glazier for offering to put in some missing window panes in the sanctum, and asking if seven by eight would do.—Cincinnati Commercial.

The Graphic of last Friday contains a fac simile of the Oregon dispatch to Mr. Tilden. The signature seems to be "Gabbie" and not "Gobble" and (meanest of all) it was sent "Collect."

Dr. Babbington's church in Brooklyn has again refused to hold fellowship with Plymouth Church, the question to be considered being as unimportant a one as the dissolution of the pastor relation of the Church of the Puritans. Dr. Babington said his church could do as it pleased, but as for himself he must refuse if asked to attend the council. The church decided by a vote of 34 to 24 not to accept the invitation.

The New York Times has a funny paragrapher, Alden by name, who writes one paragraph a day, and makes it a column long. His humor is of the brightest and most cultivated description. It is a pity, therefore, to hear that he thinks of putting fifty of his articles into book-form. The publication of a book by one of the regular newspaper humorists has always heretofore been the signal for his retirement into the most hopeless obscurity.

The Crown Prince of Prussia the other day invested his eldest son, Prince William, with his own hand, with the star and blue ribbon of the Order of the Garter, sent to the boy by his Grandmother Victoria. The Crown Prince and his wife were deeply moved, and were apparently greatly delighted at this unexpected distinction bestowed upon their son at so tender an age. His Royal Highness remarked that this was the first time in the history of the order that three members of the same family were wearing this distinguished badge at the same time.

The Democrats are becoming apprehensive for their majority in the next house. The Cincinnati Enquirer sounds the alarm in its Washington dispatches. It says "If there is no session of the Forty-fifth Congress immediately following the 4th of March next, enough Democrats will be corrupted with patronage to wipe out the slim majority before December next. There is some talk of holding over one or two appropriation bills to force the calling of an extra session."

The Free press does not resume its labor of demonstration that the majority of the Electoral Commission are "partisan" because they did not determine a question of constitutional law as they would a question of procedure, solely with a view to the convenience of one of the contesting parties. We did not expect that it would put in any more time on that absurd proposition.

MECHANICAL AND SCIENTIFIC.

White is the prevailing color among flowers, and a larger proportion than of any other color smell sweetly. Only 8.2 per cent. of red flowers are fragrant, while 14.6 of white flowers are odoriferous.

The Scientific American has appeared as an opponent of the blue-glass theory. The conclusion of the critic is this: "The violet glass acts purely as a shade for decreasing the intensity of solar light, and to this simple fact lies the sole virtue of any theue bo of the glass."

The remains of a fossil elephant have been discovered in Washington Territory. The bones include a pelvis, jawbone, tusk and others. The pelvis measures five feet ten inches across the widest part, and the tusk is ten feet long. The jaw-bone is two feet wide, and has one tooth in a side, measuring at top ten inches by three. The discoverer thinks he has found portions of at least five animals.

Prof. Agassiz, who has been studying the collections made by the Challenger Expedition, reports that he has ever examined an absolutely pregnant mass of animal matter preserved or more carefully arranged. The whole amount of material is so extensive that to work it up properly would require the diligent labor of a single person for seventy or eighty years. It will be distributed to the Woodville Museum among abhospeciali-sts, who will classify the whole of it under his supervision.

In a recent lecture to an English audience, Mr. R. A. Proctor developed the novel idea that the earth is, has always been, and, so long as it shall exist as a part of our constituted system, must ever continue to be, growing in size. It is computed, and the lecturer, that thousands of thousands of cubic miles become incorporated with our globe every twenty-four hours, and increase in the course of each year. Dust may vary in weight between a few grains and a ton. Millions of years, however, would be required to add a single foot to the earth's quantity by those small accretions.

The mines of Laurium were worked by the ancient Greeks 1,500 years ago, but their processes were very crude. The immense beds of refuse which they left behind them contained considerable silver, which has been extracted by improved methods of mining. After the refuse had been carried to the furnaces below the copper spring up and blossomed on the level which had been cleared. A German scientist affirms that this peculiar phenomenon was caused by the presence of lead and bituminous matter in the refuse. This produces a full and graceful train. The little bias band is edged on either side by a scant ruffle of white Smyrna lace. The neck is cut open in a small point, and is trimmed with a pleating of cashmere edged with lace, which continues down the whole front. A deep Spanish flounce ornaments the bottom, and is itself trimmed with three narrow folds and edged with lace. The sleeves are edged with a cashmere pleating and an inner ruffle of lace. A fancy pocket completes the wrapper. An other much more elaborate robe de chambre is of the same cut as the former, with the fullness at the back concealed under a large bow. The material is an exquisite shade of pale buff cashmere. The front has a pointed vest of black satin reaching slightly below the waist. At the bottom of the skirt, running up the front, is a shell trimming of black satin, which edges each side of the vest and continues to the back, where it forms a point. The sides of the wrapper are of black satin, the seams where they are inserted being concealed under the shell trimming. The bottom of these sides are ornamented to four narrow pinse flounces of cashmere. A similar pleating edges the back of the wrapper. The sleeves are trimmed to correspond. This negligé is very love ly, and its "make up" is as noted as it is elegant. A "companion" dress is that is, a similar one of white and lilac or white and rose color would make a charming toilet, and one in which any lady need not hesitate to receive those who are priveleged to call at those hours when every lady can assume confession supposed to be unprepared for visitors. — *N. A Pennsylvania Fox-Hunt—Reynard's Continuacious Conduct.

A fox—solitare forlorn fox, with the fate for subject of hi-left fore-shoulder and a considerable part of one ear gone—barked and mourned in the stables of Colonel Ramsay's hotel, in this place, all of last night. Nobody could see him without knowing just what he was for. He was to be hunted. He was one of those scared foxes that, when liberated, will look business-by about him, wag his bushy tail, bark his own echo, cock one eye, and then back his ears, cock tape eye, and then walk deliberately through the front yard and straggle away. Nothing could have induced him to run; suddenly fear had nearly frightened him; so, for a modern fox hunt, he was just perfection.

But for all his broken-down look, he was no common fox. For him was reserved a rare distinction. He was to be the shovel of one of the greatest fox-hunts that ever made holes in a farmer's wheat-field. He was to be hunted by a Governor, a state Treasurer, Senators, Congressmen, railroad miners, Surgeons and countless blooded hounds. This was what made him bark so gallantly. This morning all was arranged for the hunt. The guests had arrived. They were a dozen fine-looking party. Gov. Hartranft, State Treasurer Hawle, Senator Cameron and Lawrence, George Hallock, Esq., of Conshohocken; Vice President Smith and Manager Thomson, of the Pennsylvania Railroad; Joseph Colladay, of Bryn Mawr, and Prof. Paarson Rogers were among them. Beside these were a large party of New Yorkers in full hunting costumes, riding stylish horses, and they were matched in costume by William Scott, Esq., of Philadelphia. George North wagon, Jr., Dr. Lewis, George North wagon, and Dr. Rowland, of Media, who were gorgeously attired. John J. Hughes was here, too, and James Rawle, of Bryn Mawr, who is Gov. Hartranft's host, and who supplied the spirited horse upon which rested the gubernatorial physique.

At half-past ten o'clock this morning Reynard was led out of the barn, coaxed over a low fence, and then brought up in an open field. Here the mobile hunters were assembled. The waiting on futures of the day's sport was now looking well. He seemed quite willing to sit down and let the dogs and there were a great many dogs come up and talk to him. The Governor was among the right hand side; Governors always dismount on the right hand side, took hold of the chain by which Reynard was secured.

"It all is ready, gentlemen," said he, "I will permit the fleet-footed quadruped to depart."

"Let him slide."

Somebody answered.

He slid, but not far. The fox was in no hurry. He took a few graceful steps sideways and looked at the hunters; stepped backward a little way and looked at the chained dogs; looked quietly around him for half a minute and—sat down.

"He's frightened," said the State Treasurer; "I'll wager my last bond he's frightened. Somebody restore his confidence."

A stable boy began to restore his confidence with a short stick. The fox moved deliberately out of the reach of the stick and sat down again.

"Urge him on; awake him in a sense of his duties: the track's clear, he has the right of way," said Frank P. R. R. Thomson.

An army of stable boys, with stones and clubs, made an onslaught. Reynard got up. They pelted him. He began to walk away. Hurrah! His spirit was conquered. He kept on walking very coolly and collectedly till he reached the edge of the field. Here he stopped before the fence and seemed to be deliberating whether he should climb over or let down the bars. He settled it by crawling under. Then he disappeared in a little ravine. Presently he came in sight again, trotting slowly up the side of a steep hill. Ever and anon he paused for breath.

"Guess he's going over the hill to the pen-house," said one of the stable boys. At length he was hidden by the brow of the hill.

Here twenty-five minutes elapsed, to give him what the hunters called "a decent start." It was a trifle foggy, and any chance to get your fill's dangerous to go out of mornings without something on the stomach. There was a gurgling and a popping and a sizzing, and hygeine was satisfied.

"Time's up," cries the master of the chase.

Mr. John J. Hughes had been appointed to take the lead. He had one hundred and twenty hounds. He freed them, and away they went, over the fences, through the ravine, over the hill, and Mr. Hughes after them as fast as his blooded horse could carry him. Then the other hunters started. There were about three hundred of them, and the dogs were beyond all counting. Away they all went, like mad.

In exactly eight minutes from the time of starting, the dogs stopped and began to paw the ground. The fox would go another step. The melancholy fact was only too plain—the fox had found one of his haunts, and was lost to sight, to the memory still so dear. To pursue him further would be folly, and the noble hunters knew it, so they gave him up and started for the Valley Hills, in the hope of starting another victim. It was high noon when they got under way, and now, when I have to close this letter for the mail, they are just in sight, galloping along the south hill, still hunting. Nothing could have been more successful. They started out for a hunt, and they've been hunting all day.

A single sad feature has somewhat marred the otherwise unclouded pleasure of the day. While the hunters were dying o'er hill and dale, and the dogs were thirsting for gore, the fox, all unconscious, was making over some of last winter's shellbarks, in his cosy nest. But they were dry eating, and the unwonted exercise of climbing the hill had given the poor fellow an unusual appetite. He suddenly determined that he must have a good square meal. Where so likely to get it as at the hospitable hotel, where he got a good tender chicken for supper only the night before? So, with unconscious ease, as foxes will, and slowly, but still he came, and as I hurriedly write these last lines, the train being nearly ready for another day's sport, — *Lancaster Morning Inn. A Venetian Funeral.

We turned a corner and came suddenly upon a festamento above a canal. Women and children knelt in a circle, on their knittting or strings of beads in their hands, and though they did not lift their seats in the doorways, stood about the narrow entrance of a house that faced the staircase of a palace. Their shrill voices were hushed, and a solemnness lay upon the faces of the children. Within the corridor of the house stood small boys in white, lace-edged garments, with mitre-like heads, grasping long white tapers by painted wooden banners that had the seal of Venice on them. The silence was broken but by the watch of the canal against the walls, and the low murmur of a chant that floated down the dingy stairway.

The sound of the voices grew plainer, as through a door I had been opened, as through a door I had been opened, and a flutter of white robes at the head of the stairway. The acolytes moved slowly down the steps, bearing their lighted tapers in their hands, and their comrades in the vestibule made way for them into the street. There was a long pause, and then the boys about three hundred of them, and the dogs were beyond all counting. Away they all went, like mad.

There was a silence of a moment in the corridor, and then down the stairs came a group of coarse-faced women, with eyes reddened by weeping. They were dark cotton dresses, from which the red shawls and kerchiefs and gold ear-rings had been banished—the nearest approach they could make to mourning for money was scarce and food dear, and the living had more need of care than the dead, who were in glory with the saints. Behind the women walked a young man with his eyes bent on the ground—slender and tall, and fair-haired, with the supple grace of the gondolier in his carriage. Behind us a girl's voice whispered:

"There is her lover, Giovanni."

The procession moved on across the bridge, the painted wooden standards borne aloft by the white-robed boys, the yellow garment of the priest flashing in the sunlight, the red robes of the bachini bright against the pale gray of the house-fronts and the serge leafage on the balconies. Beyond was a sweep of canal that curved into darkness about an overhanging portico, and was lost in the tawny side of a church. The bridge had an old escutcheon for its keystone, and a patch of green vine starting from the crevices threw a graceful arm about the old monster of the crest, and drooping against the darkness of the inner arch. The sunlight streamed through the water below, streaking it with gold, and over the great boat-stakes, striped serpent-fashion, black and white, with golden crowns on them, and a scarlet crest beneath.

We followed the train through a narrow passage to where the sunlight gleamed on the slimy steps of the canal-landing. A great black hulk lay against the wall, painted with emblems of death in ghastly white, and crowned by carmsen iridescence of shabby black. The bachini placed their poor load upon the black surface carefully, as though the pitiful memorials might not be shaken, and then turned away with a salute to the priest, stepping off their red garments as they went. The priest and two of the acolytes entered a shabby gondola. The women packed themselves closely in another, and the young man took off his patched jacket and grasped the rear oar, while a great sob burst from his throat. It was plain to see that the boat was his own, and that many a time the spare, who lay so white and cold under the pall-lities, had sat with him in triumph on the canal-day, graund in her gold necklace and the wealth of her young beauty. — Appleton's Journal for March.

Detroit's Mean Man.

A Detroit doctor yesterday met an ex-patient of his on State street and called the man's attention to the fact that he had a bill against him for total services.

"Can't pay," replied the man.

"Do you want to pay?" sternly demanded the physician.

"Of course I do, but I'd like a little time."

"How much?"

"About twenty years."

"I'll use this bill!" exclaimed the doctor.

"Go away, for I ain't worth but a shirt and a half, and am growing poorer every day.

"Well, sir, you are a thing I never met!" continued the doctor.

"How mean am I? Please study what grade of meanness you invent?"

"I mean that you are the most mean color in his ears. "I mean that you are mean enough to pretend to like me, so as to spite your creditors to do, so as to spite your creditors and make quite a wife trouble. You are mean enough to let them lazy on me for a time, and then come for you in the form. Then, if I came at night, dig you up and carry your corpse on my back for a mile and a half, you'd be mean enough to name to file, pick my pockets of a dime, and to hire out to fill up the grave again."

"Is that your candid opinion, doctor?"

"Yes, sir, it is!"

"Well, doctor you may now drive on. If you have time—here's the day pleasant write me out a bill for you. Your lawyer by a length and a half. Good-bye, doctor, seems like spring, doesn't it."—Detroit Free Press.

Moon Madness.

The popular belief that the moon's rays will cause madness in any person who sleeps exposed to them has long been felt to be absurd, and it is now supposed to have its source in undoubted facts. Some deleterious influence is experienced by those who rashly court slumber in full moonshine, and probably there is no superstition to which the well-to-do pay more attention. Windows are often carefully covered to keep the moonbeams from entering sleeping-rooms. A gentleman living in India furnishes the following as an explanation of this phenomenon which is at least plausible. He says: "It has often been observed that when the moon is full, or near its full time, there are rarely any clouds about; and if there be clouds before the full moon rises, they are soon dissipated; and therefore a perfectly clear sky with a bright full moon, is frequently observed

Mrs. Marian Harris.

Died, in Newton on the 27th of February last Mrs. Marian wife of William Harris, of Norwood aged 46 years.

Deceased was a daughter of Rustin and Caroline Angell, and a grandaughter of the late Andrew Ross. She was born in Battle Creek in 1831, which was the home of her childhood and of her early married life. In May, 1856, she was married to Mr. Harris and in the spring of 1866 the family home was changed to Norwood, Charlevoix county, a pleasant location on Lake Michigan at the mouth of Grand Traverse Bay. Here, during the remainder of her active life, amid much that was new in experience, she developed those qualities of mind and heart which gave her a warm place in the hearts of those who came within the circle of her acquaintance. The number of those whose circle of friendship in this world, by reason of her removal, is made smaller by one, and who will mingle their grief with the more immediate relatives, is very large, for she will benefit the friend of all, and her effects of kindness were removal to no narrow relationship. What she was to her family it is needless, if it were possible to say. None but those who dwell under the same roof can tell the secret of household comfort and happiness which Christian wife and mother can impart to the home circle.

Deceased was an earnest and devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal church from her girlhood days. The following words were spoken by her pastor at the funeral services which were held in the Norwood church on the afternoon of March 1st, and an appropriate discourse was preached by Rev. L. D. Palmer. Her remains were deposited in Norwood Cemetery, by the side of those of her father who was the second to find a resting place there, after the opening of those beautiful grounds. Her earthly remains, she is not buried, but has only gone forward to higher life.

So heaven is gathering, one by one,

A bill was introduced in the Michigan Legislature recently providing that laborers employed by lumbermen may attach any property of employers for wages. Heretofore they could only attach the logs.

Our State Legislature has a bill under consideration, designed to guard against fires like those so disastrous to Peshtigo. It makes it a misdemeanor to burn brush or log heaps between the first day of April and the first day of November, and if such fire escapes and does damage to another's property, and is proved to have been set by the owner of the land, or his agent, he is liable for the damage done. The bill ought to pass.

Marion, Mich. Mar. 6, 1877.

Mr. A. D. Brady has recently sold his fine farm near Ynon, and will leave next week with his family for New York City, where he takes a responsible position in a large wholesale clothing house. Mr. Brady moved to Charlevoix county from New York in 1866. At that time his new home was a wilderness, which he did much in the few following years to improve. During his seven years' residence in Charlevoix county he filled many offices of trust and responsibility, being for six years postmaster at Ballard, and at different times serving as justice of the peace, town clerk, superintendent of the poor, school director, etc, etc. He was largely engaged in building the Traverse City and Charlevoix State road. In 1874 he purchased the Antrim plats near Tuba, where he has since resided, and as in Charlevoix county so in East Jay he has been actively engaged in furthering the interests of the community in which he has lived, particularly those of the public schools.

Mr. Brady removes to New York [illegible] Charlevoix for [illegible] and we [illegible] Democratic friends here will [illegible] them to their new home.—Herald.

The Bannon Matter.—Advices from Washington state that the River and Harbor bill failed to pass the House before it adjourned, consequently there are no new appropriations. The statement is made that no money will be expended on harbors but the unexpended appropriations of last year. This includes Charlevoix, and there is no doubt that the preliminary steps will soon be taken by the Engineer in charge, to let the contract. It is to be hoped some one or more of our citizens will secure the contracts, thus, by keeping the money here render double benefit.

New stock of dry goods just received at Carpenter & Bartholomew's.

Charlevoix, on the Pine lake region, with an open harbor to navigable waters to its interior will present attraction to capitalists that cannot be excelled in the Northern part of Michigan. With returning confidence in business circles, and a revival of trade throughout the country we have good reason to expect rapid development in the Charlevoix region, among all its interests. We continue to insist that excellent openings here exist for the investment of capital. Wood-working industries, lumbered mills, tanneries, etc., can find here unsurpassed locations.

If, geographically, or naturally, Charlevoix had been designed for that especial purpose by the supreme architect, it could not have been made more adaptable to the requisits of a railroad terminus than it is by nature. Situated in close proximity to the iron region, of the Upper Peninsula being accessible by way of other fine natural points further south, being the outlet of a large an fertile tract of country in the interior, and being possessed of a fine harbor, its superiority asserts itself. We have always believed, and continue to believe, that its advantages will not be much longer overlooked.

The President's appointment of a Southern conservative Democrat as Postmaster General will have a very great weight in the future toward southern reconciliation, and we commend his wisdom. Mr. Key was a Confederate soldier, and has always been a new ranker with the Democratic party; but he has shown great independence and liberality, and is a fair-minded and honorable gentleman. President Hayes' other appointments have been made independent of any ring or clique, and his government will be of broad liberality and one wherein all parts of this country will be blest.

A First-Class Obituary Notice.

The Chicago Times—which vigorously supported Tilden and Hendricks through the Presidential campaign, and which has ever been [illegible] among the most virulent adversaries of the incendiary policy he now goes up the flue. It concedes that Hayes is elected, declares the Democratic party dead, and pronounces the following funeral oration over its remains:

"That heterogeneous combination of miscellaneous and peculiar ethics which called the progressive Democracy has gone off to [illegible]. In fact never, even if it was called up from the political grave yard by the schemers to make Sam Tilden the national spoils dispenser, has it ever been anything but a disjointed conglomerate of disjointed fragments—a collection of political dry bones of all extant party animals, out of which a complete skeleton of any kind could not be pieced up. Though assisting to leave a majority of nearly two votes in the national assembly, that majority was quite up of all the political orbits and ends of earth Bourbons Liberals, screamers, grangers, prosecutions, Pendletons, bull-moons, ragbaggers, Calhounists, nullarists, men of every sort and shade of political opinion, including utterly irreconcilable views, and agreeing upon nothing but the appetite for spoils, engendered the absurd combination of self styled party patriots that attempted to impose their [illegible] upon the country as the Democratic party come back from the other side of the Potomac river, with all the sins done in its badness burnt and purged away," having a new life, possessing a reformed character, and having a new claim (carefully concealed) to popular trust and confidence.

"Setting up enormous pretensions to superior political virtue, this combination of inconsistent political humbugs proceeded systematically in an attempt to hoodwink the country into the notion that they were come to rescue the nation from the vast army of official thieves that were devouring it. They held a convention at St. Louis, yelled "Reform is necessary"—selected a slippery New York politician to represent one kind of principles and six facing always Indiana dressing up to represent several other kinds of principles—tied two spavined political horses together by the tails and set them cantering in opposite directions across the split.

"The result rested to nobody's party [illegible] has gone to pieces for the simple reason that there was nothing to hold the ill-assorted party together. There was no bond of political cohesion; no common political purpose. There was only a common desire to turn out the vast army of office holders and put a new army in its place. That was in reality the only purpose upon which the Tilden managers were united. They were not agreed and never would have agreed upon any programme of governmental reform. The cry of reform was a mere blind. The spoils committee the only object of their combined effort. Sam Tilden gone, the spoils were gone. No spoils could be hoped for from Morton or any other president ad interim. When, therefore, Sam Tilden dropped out of the possible result, the concentrated fragments of the putrid combination fell asunder. When the prospect of official plunder disappeared with the last hope of Tilden's inauguration, nothing was left to hold the conflicting spoil-seekers together. * * *

"The true course of political wisdom for the again shipwrecked spoils Democracy is, to go, to immediately disband its organization, which no longer exists as a means to any political end, but only as an instrumentality of futile and useless contest against the official class for the possession of the spoils."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

FOREIGN.

Gen. Cortina was arrested at Matamoras, on the 24th, and placed in the military prison. It was thought he would be entertained and shot for failing to report to President Diaz, at the City of Mexico, as he had been directed.

The Berlin correspondent of the London Times stated, on the 26th, that the Russian Government was giving most pacific assurances, which, it would appear, were credited everywhere except in Vienna. Russia frankly intimated that she had no wish to make war, and would be happy to desist from hostilities were some regard paid to her feelings and to the position in which she was placed.

A special dispatch received in London, on the 26th, from Bucharest, says the Roumania railways had been instructed to prepare, within a few days, to carry large transports of Russian troops to the Danube.

A recent Halifax dispatch announces the greatest consternation in Nova Scotia over the discovery of the fact that through the use of a wrong seal all acts since 1869 are void. There is no Parliament—no Government—all marriages and couvictions, etc., are said to be illegal.

Spain and China have entirely broken off diplomatic intercourse. The trouble arises from disputes over the Cuban Coolie question.

Announcement was made from London, on the 26th, that King Alfonso, of Spain, would marry the daughter of the Duke de Montpensier during the latter part of April.

According to Berlin dispatches to the London Times, published on the 28th, the sentiment of the better class of Russians was decidedly opposed to the immediate commencement of hostilities with Turkey.

A St. Petersburg dispatch of the 1st says a report telegraphed from Berlin that Russia had decided to demobilize her army, when peace is declared between Turkey and Servia and Montenegro, was untrue.

A Ragusa telegram of the 1st says the Mirdites had risen against Turkey, and were fighting the Kuks, a Turkish fortress near Prizrendi.

DOMESTIC.

The Iowa State Deaf and Dumb Asylum, at Council Bluffs, was burned on the 24th by fire, the damages being placed at $100,000.

The United States Treasurer on the 27th ult. destroyed $745,328 legal-tenders, being eighty per cent. of the National Bank-notes issued during February. This leaves outstanding legal-tenders $364,239,484.

On the 28th ult., the Acting Secretary of the Treasury issued the fortieth call for the redemption of 5-20 bonds of 1865, as and November. The call is for $20,000,000, of which $7,000,000 are coupon and $5,000,000 registered bonds. Thirty days' interest will be paid at the Treasury on and after the 28th of May next, and the interest will cease on that day.

The public debt statement for February shows the following: Coin bonds outstanding, $1,697,997,500; total debt, $2,232,612,787; cash in Treasury, $103,281,287; decrease of cash in the Treasury, $3,088,281,142; decrease during February, $2,050,429.

PERSONAL.

Postmaster McArthur, of Chicago, filed a petition in bankruptcy, on the 24th. He is said to be a defaulter to the Government in the sum of about $40,000.

Frank W. Palmer, formerly editor of the Inter-Ocean, was, on the 26th, appointed and confirmed Postmaster at Chicago, to succeed Gen. McArthur.

The will of the late Com. Vanderbilt was offered for probate on the 27th, in the Surrogate's Court, at New York, and protests were entered by Cornelius J. Vanderbilt and four other heirs. The hearing was set down for two weeks from that date.

President-elect and Mrs. Hayes met with a grand reception and ovation at the State House, in Columbus, Ohio, on the 28th ult. Among the thousands who assembled to offer their congratulations were many prominent citizens of both political parties from all parts of the State, who expressed their wishes for a prosperous administration of the affairs of the Nation. The two houses of the Legislature met in joint session, and Mr. Hayes was addressed by them from the Speaker's stand, briefly returning thanks for the expressions of good will tendered himself and wife. After the joint session had been dissolved, the Legislators paid their respects to the illustrious guests, and William Leonard, Chief Clerk of the House, on behalf of the ladies, presented Mrs. Hayes with an elegant crystal and bronze vase filled with choice flowers.

President-elect Hayes and party left Columbus, Ohio, on the afternoon of the 1st, for Washington, by way of Pittsburgh and Harrisburg. His departure was made the occasion of a civic and military ovation.

The steel leading from the Governor's residence to the Capitol was gaily decorated with flags, and crowds lined the sidewalks.

Jack McCall, who, several months ago, murdered "Wild Bill" at Deadwood, Black Hills, was hanged at Yankton, D. T., on the 1st.

POLITICAL.

In the Nicholls Louisiana Legislature, on the 24th, a resolution was unanimously adopted declaring that under no circumstances would the people of the State pay tribute to any other than the Nicholls State Government, which, the resolution asserts, is the choice of the people of the State; and further declaring the utter inapplicability of gathering taxes by any other authority, and that any attempt to gather them by any other authority than the Nicholls Government would not only prove abortive but lead to lamentable civil strife, if not to bloodshed and actual war.

A Washington dispatch of the 25th says President Grant had stated that neither of the State Governments in Louisiana or South Carolina would be recognized by him, as he thought it would be improper for him to fix a Southern policy for his successor, and thus embarrass him. If he were to recognize the Republican Governors they would have to be sustained by military force, and he thinks the entire people are tired of the military being called upon to sustain a State Government. He says: "If a Republican State Government cannot sustain itself then it will have to give way. If a remedy is required, let Congress and not the President provide it."

A telegram from New Iberia, La., to Gov. Packard, on the 26th, says a collision between whites and blacks took place the day before at Jeanerett. Both parties were under arms, and great excitement prevailed.

The Governor of Pennsylvania has appointed James P. Sterrit, of Allegheny County, to fill the vacancy on the Supreme Bench of that State, caused by the death of Judge Williams.

The Judiciary Committee finished the counting of the Electoral votes on the 1st, and at 4 15 on the morning of the 2d, Acting Vice President Ferry declared Messrs. Hayes and Wheeler elected President and Vice-President of the United States, and then dissolved the Joint Convention of Congress.

In the United States Supreme Court, at Washington, on the 1st, the Chief-Justice read an opinion of the Court in the case of Munn & Scott against the People of the State of Illinois—the principal Granger case—affirming the right of the State to fix by law the maximum of charges for the storage of grain in warehouses at Chicago and other places in the State having not less than 100,000 inhabitants in which grain is stored in bulk, and in which grain of different owners is mixed together, or in which the grain is stored in such a manner that the identity of different lots or parcels cannot be accurately preserved, as provided by the Legislature. Decisions were also rendered at the same time sustaining the Wisconsin, Iowa and Minnesota Railroad laws.

CONGRESSIONAL.

The credentials of Mr. Ferry, of Michigan, re-elected Senator, were filed in the Senate on the 24th. After debate, a resolution was agreed to sustaining the decision of the Commission upon the Electoral vote of the State of Oregon. The objection to the Electoral vote of Mr. Morrill, of Pennsylvania, was overruled as invalid. The Army Appropriation bill was reported in the House. Conference Committees were ordered on the non-agreements to the footings; the Sundry Civil, the Naval and Legislative Appropriation bills. The Post-House bill was passed, as was also the Senate bill authorizing the appointment of a Commissioner to prepare for the publication of a new edition of the Revised Statutes. Senate resolutions were received that the Electoral Commission had come to a decision in the case of Oregon, a seat to which was adopted—35 to 30—notwithstanding the pending fraud charges made thereto; at 2 a. m. OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

The completion of a passage way, albeit a rather slender one, between the piers of the great Brooklyn bridge, marks an important era in the progress of this important work. For months past there have been quite a number of small cables drooping from one to the other and lying like graceful spider threads against the sky; but now they have completed a foot bridge the whole distance from the New York anchorage to that of Brooklyn. This bridge is an unenclosed pathway of oak slats, in all somethree or four feet wide, and slung along two thread like wire ropes, which serve as handrails during the passage. From below, the bridge with a man traveling on it has very much the effect of a fly crawling along a narrow ribbon and merely to look up at it and realize the stretch of vacancy between its frail structure and the river is enough to make any ordinary stomach turn a complete somersault. What then must be the sensations in the digestive apparatus of the human fly way up there as he glances from his swaying, sideless foothold, down through the yawning gulf to the black waters below, is something that I don't care to immagine.

The foot bridge is of course intended only for the use of the workmen employed upon the permanent structure but on its completion there were the usual number of reporters and of the adventurous spirits who are always fascinated by danger, importuning the authorities for permission to make the perilous trip. Such applicants were at first uniformly refused. But who can permanently withstand the all-conquering newspaper man when, in full war paint and feathers, he gets fairly on the scent of his prey? The unfortunate superintendent stood the strain for a few days and then "caved" with the remark "that he supposed some half dozen of these blank idiots had got to kill themselves before the rest would let him alone." Permits were therefore issued to several men, and, I believe to one woman, who made the passage and have recorded their impressions in the various journals to which they belong.

I myself became somewhat fired by emulation and a sense of my duty to your readers, and for a short time entertained a serious idea of distinguishing myself in like manner. I even went down to the spot to survey the prospect and see how I thought I should like the trip. One glance was sufficient. The sarobatic tendencies of my interior, above referred to, were a warning reminder of a vow I made some years ago, when clinging to the stee work at the very apex of the spire of the Strasburg Cathedral, four hundred and odd feet above the ground, to the effect that if I were only permitted to get safely to mother earth once more, I never would leave her again. The unpleasantly suggestive words of the superintendent about "idiots" come back to me, and I gave it up. The world, I felt, could hardly spare me yet, and even if the reverse were true, I certainly couldn't spare the world. Besides, if I should chance to take my tumble from the bridge at a point where a ferry boat or other craft was passing below, I might knock a hole in it or do some other damage. So on the whole I decided I wouldn't take any trapeze performance in mine, preferring to forego the opportunity of making a sensation rather than risk having my caress of usefulness brought to a sudden and untimely end.

I must therefore leave your readers to imagin the thrilling account they would have had, if my head had been a little steadier, the glowing description of the vast panorama spread out before the aerial pedestrian; the swaying plank, the wind whistling among the network of ropes—all the horrors and delights of the situation they can picture to themselves, and, when the grand work is completed, can enjoy the latter without the former whenever they happen to be in the city.

A young news dealer on one of the steamboat wharves of the East River has just been presented with a silver medal for having during the past year saved five persons from drowning, who had fallen from the dock where he plies his calling. Obscure heroes like this young man seldom receive due appreciation, and it is very satifactory to see this recognition of his bravery in five times risking his life to save utter strangers, and that without expectation of hope of reward.

Joe Coburn the ex-puglist is not the sweetest tempered man in the world, and having of late years devoted his talents to keeping a saloon in this city, has made "the best police in the world" a good deal of trouble first and last—especially last. A few nights ago into a row and shot two policemen, not fatally to be sure, but sufficiently to excite a pretty general prejudice against him. He was arrested, examined, indicted and locked up, all within twenty-four hours, and the present prospect is that the big fisted hero of the prize ring will get up his muscle breaking stones for his adopted state during the next ten or twenty years.

The latest important addition to the charms of our Aquarium is a cargo of alligators, handsome creatures, with fine open countenances, but somewhat inclined to both treachery and contention. On the day of their reception they were placed, a dozen of them, in the mammoth tank made vacant by the demise of the late lamented white whale. For a while the monsters were partly torpid with cold, but soon got warmed up, and then there was a first class circus in that tank. The biggest Saurian, an unregenerate looking old reptile over twelve feet long, happening to tread on the tale of a little brother, nine or ten feet in length, the latter took the accident as an attempt to bulldoze him, and demonstrated the fact that he wasn't that kind of a crocodile by turning upon the aggressor and displaying several yards of teeth. The disturdance seemed to be infectious, and in a few seconds the tank looked like a session of the Electoral Commission. Its inmates could hardly have acted worse if they had been alligators instead of alligators; and so heated at last became the debate that it was found necessary to call the meeting to order by a stream of ice water from the fire hose. This vigorous treatment eventually restored quiet, and the regular order of business (eating and sleeping) was again taken up.

A ripple of excitement, which has not yet entirely subsided, was caused by the announcement some days ago that Adelaide Neilson, the beautiful Shakesperian actress had procured a divorce from her husband in our courts, as did Pauline Lucca a few years since. The proceedings in Miss Neilson's case were kept as much a secret as possible, but eventually became known, and have stimulated public interest to see the charming "star," who, however, has already left New York to fulfill distant engagements. The proverbial conjugal infelicity in the dramatic and lyric professions receives further proof from this case and the one simultaneously reported of the world's favorite songstress, Adalian Patti, who is at this moment seeking in Paris a legal separation from the titled but worthless husband whom she was induced to accept through the urgent solicitation of the Emperor and Empress of the French. This high and mighty pair are said to have turned matchmakers for the nonce, and to have interested themselves so deeply in his behalf that la diva overcame her natural repugnance to the Imperial favorite and married him; only, as it turns out, to support and be abused by him.

Apart from the Neilson-Lee episode the amusement world is quite and steadily prosperous. No changes in programme have recently been made at the leading theatres, a fact which speaks well for their success.

The Grand Duke Alexis, who has just left us, made business good for the Opera Bouffe season, which still continues, by his admiration for Mlle. Aimee, whose preformances he lost no opportunity to see. Of course his presence largely increased the houses, and thus helped to fill the coffers of the object of his admiration. On Saturday evening there was an extra performance by the French troupe at the Academy of Music in aid of some French charity, and Alexis was in his place as usual, the box which he occupied being draped with American, French and Russian flags. The Russian national hymn was played by the orchestra, the audience and royal party all standing in honor of it. Both the Grand Duke and his brother Constantine frequently applauded Aimee's singing, and apparently enjoyed the opera throughout. Alexis has grown visibly older and stouter since his former visit, but is thoroughly princely in looks and bearing.

Susan B. Anthony says she hates a liar, but when an Ohio railroad conductor was overheard saying that Susie had the smallest feet and loviest mouth he ever saw the old girl was so flattered that she couldn't sit still.—Enquirer.

The Indiana Legislature, by a non-partisan vote, has decided to give colored children an equal chance with white children in the public schools.

"Yes," said Mrs. Binuk, as she sat gossiping with her sister, "you have no idea how much my Jack thinks of you. Only this morning, as I went to wake him, I heard him calling out in his sleep, "Oh, come, aisie, will you?"

Mrs. Samuel Allen, of Hamden, Conn. celebrated her eighty-fourth birthday recently by participating in a coasting party with her children, grandchildren and her youngest great-grandchild, she and the latter little one sliding down side by side.

A new glove has been brought out in Paris, called le gant Heatrice, which says the inventor, "is warranted not to retain any marks of straining or pressure on being taken off the hand." This is the kind of glove that would suit bundling flirts of either sex.

Julia Ward Howe preached in Robert Collyer's church, Chicago, recently. She said that when philosophy undertook to say what is "the Kingdom of God," it reminded her of a boy who would take to pieces a watch and explain each bit and its uses, but who could not put it together again for his life.

Mrs. Russell Stebbins, of Ridgefield, Conn., once known as a literary lady, has written a private letter speaking kindly of Edgar Allan Poe, and giving as a reason of Dr. Griswold's enmity toward him, the attachment of both men to the same woman—an attachment completely hopeless on the part of both.

A Washington letter says Mrs. Belknap is now in mourning for her sister, and the dull black of crape and bombazine brings out her beauty in all its brilliancy. Mrs. Marsh would be more savagely jealous than ever could she see how much more fascinating than ever she is now, but her enemy will give her the Scripural consolation of writing a book.

A finely dress lady and very intellectual looking, slipped on a piece of orange peel on Fifth avenue and sat down awfully hard. "My!" she exclaimed, "the velocity of that descent nonerves me!" "I beg pardon," said the gentleman who assisted her to rise, you are a Bostonian I fancy." And she was.

A Sterling Vegetable Remedy

DISEASES OF THE THROAT AND LUNGS, DYSPEPSIA, GRAVEL, PILES, URINARY TROUBLES, NERVOUS DEBILITY, PALPITATION OF THE HEART, TORPIDITY OF THE LIVER, CONSTIPATION, SCROFULOUS AFFECTIONS, AND FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

For nearly a quarter of a century this sterling preparation has been effecting cures of the various diseases to which it is adapted, and thousands of persons, of perfect reliability, in all classes of society have borne evidence to its wondrous remedial efficacy.

As a remedy for diseases of the Throat and Lungs it has achieved a popularity rivalled by that of few proprietary remedies. Experience has shown that for those who are troubled with weakness of the Lungs it is the best possible protective against Consumption, and it may be relied on with certainty to eradicate Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup, Diptheria, and Soreness of the Chest.

Coughs of the most obstinate kind are speedily overcome by it, and since a simple cough is very prone to develop into serious Inflammation of the Lungs, the early use of Dr. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial is earnestly recommended, as it invariably prevents the farther progress of the disease.

Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Torpidity of the Liver and of the Kidneys are promptly overcome by this superb vegetable corrective, which not only regulates but strengthens the organs of digestion, as well as those of the urinary and biliary secretions. It imparts unwonted relish for the food, and, by promoting digestion and assimilation, enriches the blood, which is the natural motor of vital energy and nutriment to the system.

Dr. L. O. C. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial thoroughly regulates the Bowels, removes Blind and Bleeding Piles, banishes from the circulation dropsical and all other impurities, and effectually counteracts a tendency to Gravel. It also entirely obviates the weaknesses incident to females.

Dr. L. O. C. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial is no mere placebo. It is a standard medicine, and has been repeatedly recognized as such by the press and members of the medical profession, who emphatically endorse the popular verdict long since rendered in its favor.

Sold by Druggists everywhere.

THE LION'S BRIDE.

[The poem from which Gabriel Max painted his large picture of the same name.]

Adorned with myrtle and bridal jewels,
The keeper's daughter, a maiden fair,
Went into the cage of the jellad lion,
Who crouched at her feet in humility rare.

The powerful beast of the forest, deep forced,
In native majesty free and wild,
Looked up with an instinct rare and courtly,
And his cruel eyes grew soft and mild.

The delicate girl, with face so winsome,
Stroked the lion's mane in a loving way,
And went such tasks as to do at parties,
As thus to him she did sadly say.

In days long past, when we were children,
And played together or fled and free,
We dearly loved and caressed each other,
And do so still—both frankls are we.

Thou greatest noble, grand, majestic,
Wouldst roar and shake thy kingly head,
When I have arrived at woman's stature,
And, darling, am soon to be wed.

Dost quite understand? thou glarest fiercely!
But I am composed; so then mind be.
There! he is coming whom I must follow;
So, friend, good by! I ask kiss for thee.

Then, when the maiden had kissed the lion,
His loud roar I never spread far and wide;
And, soon as the lover approached the railing,
A tear I composed the timorous bride.

Into the cage of the cage the lion
Then placed himself, with defiant roar;
And the maid in vain implored and threatened,
Commanded the beast to leave the door.

Outside were shrieks and dire confusion.
"Bring arms!" the lover cried to a page;
"The monster dies!" and he aimed the weapon
At the jealous lion, who roamed with rage.

Then quick the unhappy girl, affrighted,
Sprang in front of the door; but the savage beast
His mistress seized, when torn disfigured,
Her lifeblood flowed and the tumult ceased.

And the lion laid him down by the body,
With gloomy outrage and saddened eye;
Reluctant and sorrow filled for the moment,
But the lover's bullet took him die.

"TRAMP, TRAMP, TRAMP."

A lonely country road, with the night closing upon it; the sun set and the sky black and white streaks where he had been; the color gone from all the earth, even from the many-tinted maples and sumacs that an hour before had flamed in their October brilliancy; the air frosty and fresh,—just the night to go bowling swiftly home in a light wagon over a well-graded road, with the prospect of a bright fire and hot supper at the end of the journey.

Mrs. Cuthbert wished that her husband would come "bowling home," as she lighted the lamp and placed it in the center of the pretty tea-table so daintily set forth with her wedding glass and silver; the supper would not be fit to eat if he were much later, and Mrs. Cuthbert was too conscientious a housewife not to feel alarmed at the idea of her good things being spoiled; but, like the even-tempered little woman she was, she only put an extra stick on the wood-fire crackling on the hearth, and settled down in her favorite arm-chair, with her sewing to keep her hands busy, while her ears were on the alert for her husband's step, or a cry from the baby up-stairs.

She was getting tired, in her head as well as her feet, so often befall American housekeepers, when the "help" has taken it into her head to depart without waiting for a successor to be appointed.

The fire snapped and blazed, the clock ticked on, and all was quiet. Until Mrs. Cuthbert had chanced to look up, she might have seen a face pressed close against the window-pane—an ugly face with a rough beard and tangled hair, a broken nose that looked most unprepossessing flattened on the glass, and eyes glared greedily at the silver on the table—but she did not, and all was quiet.

The clock struck seven, and Mrs. Cuthbert started, surprised and distressed. She forgot about the supper frizzling away to nothing in the oven, and began to worry about her husband—it was such a lonely walk; it was only two miles, and she did wish he would come.

Footsteps on the front porch sent her fears to the winds, and a spirit of mischief took possession of her in their stead; the door was locked, and she would make him wait a few minutes to pay him out for making her wait so long.

She bent her head and pretended not to notice, even when she heard the steps descend from the porch and tramp over the grass to the window.

The sash was violently thrown up, and the ugly face that had been garding her a short time before was thrust into the room, and then a fierce voice demanded:

"Why don't yer come and open the door for me?"

Mrs. Cuthbert nodded her pretty head, and, without turning round, answered, saucily:

"No, sir, I don't mean to let you in to-night."

The ugly face looked thunder-strike, then frightened, and finally two grimy jaws clutched the window, shutting it with a crash that made the glasses quiver, and the ugly face was gone.

"Oh, dear! now he's angry—I always do carry my fun too f—" cried Mrs. Cuthbert, springing from her chair and rushing into the hall.

"George! George!"

She turned the key back.

"George!"

The porch was empty, but she caught sight of a dark figure hurrying up the path to the barn.

"Oh, you're not going to hide from me in that way, sir," she called out, running down the steps and on toward the barn.

The dark figure was swallowed up in the great black doorway before she reached it.

"Oh, you great goose!" she said, standing on the threshold, "don't you suppose I can find you? You had better give yourself up at once."

Then she waited. The dark figure crowded still closer behind the old carriage, and there was no answer.

"I shall find you, sir; I know every corner," she gave warning; then, with arms stretched out before her, commenced the search. In and out among the barrels and boxes she went in the utter blackness, calling out merrily now and then that she would find him and punish him for giving her so much trouble. Once she almost touched the shrinking figure; but it held its breath, and she passed on.

It was a weird game of hide-and-seek: the dark figure with the ugly face cowering among the wheels, listening with a strange kind of savage fear to the light footsteps that sounded now here, now there; he heard them climb the ladder and patter about in the loft overhead, then come down again, and the voice—not so merry now—repeat her assurance of finding the truant, and a sudden desire entered his brain to spring upon her and choke her. It would not be the first time he had done such a deed, but her perfect audacity seemed to paralyze him, and again she passed him all unconscious. He saw her pause in the doorway, dimly outlined against the sky, and then disappeared down the path.

"If she ain't the pluckiest 'un!" he growled, as he crept from behind the carriage. "Hanged if she ain't a ghost or sinthin." And with this peculiar comment on Mrs. Cuthbert's bravery, he shook himself and made his way out of the barn with a subdued long gait, as if he was used to stalking in and out of places.

Mrs. Cuthbert meanwhile sped on to the house, her steps hastened by the idea that her husband might be there—perhaps he had slipped out of the barn while she was up in the loft, or perhaps he had not gone into the barn at all.

Alas for her hopes! The sitting-room was empty, and just as she had left it.

Not despairing yet, she snatched up the lamp, and determined to search the house. From room to room she went, calling upon George, and looking into every closet and behind and under every article of furniture, but not a glimpse of her husband gladdened her eyes, and at last she sat down by the baby's cradle and burst into tears.

"Oh, how can he be so cruel!" she sobbed, "and for such a little thing. He might have known I was only in fun; but maybe he's only in fun himself, and will come in soon."

Cheered by this last reflection, she trotted briskly down-stairs, stirred the fire into a blaze, and stood watching the door.

When Mrs. Cuthbert laid the baby in his cradle, after singing him back to the invisible mouthfuls, the clock struck two, and Mrs. Cuthbert looked hopelessness in the face.

George was never coming home, she decided. It was no use watching; he was never coming home any more. Then, as the next gust of wind sent a twig rattling on the gravel, she was at the window, straining her eyes as she had been doing all the evening.

How strange every familiar object in the house seemed!—the lights burned so whitely, and the sitting-room looked so uncanny, with the tea table spread, and the hands of the clock marking the small hours. An unreasonable moth went banging about the ceiling with what sounded a tremendous noise in that dead silence, and the fire refused point-blank to be cheerful, despite the armfuls of wood piled on it.

How the hours dragged! She seemed to have lived years since she heard those footsteps on the porch. Why had she been such a fool?

It was five o'clock now, and the roosters far and near began to herald the approach of dawn. The sky turned from black to gray, and a whitish smudge in the east announced the rise of the glorious sun.

Mrs. Cuthbert put out the lights and went to the front-door. A drizzling rain had set in, and the damp raw air made her shudder. She went back to the sitting-room, and, in a dreary, semi-unconscious kind of way, sat at the fire there and in the little kitchen; then brought baby down-stairs, washed and dressed him as usual, and put him on the floor to play while she prepared his bread and milk.

Her baby was not destined to get breakfast just yet, for at that moment a light step was heard in the entry, and a tall young man walked into the room. The bread and milk were dropped anywhere, and Mrs. Cuthbert flung herself into his arms, sobbing, crying, and begging his pardon all in a breath.

"I'll never do it again. Won't you forgive me, George?"

"Forgive what? I haven't any thing to forgive," said the astonished George.

"Oh yes, you have. I know it was dreadfully wicked of me; but I'll never do it again."

"What on earth is the matter?"

"Won't you forgive me?" was all Mrs. Cuthbert's answer.

"Eleanor, what is the matter?" demanded the distracted young man, all the more awfully awestruck by this strange fun; but maybe he's only in fun himself, and will come in soon."

Cheered by this last reflection, she trotted briskly down-stairs, stirred the fire into a blaze, and stood watching the door.

Then when the maiden had kissed the lion,
His loud roar I never spread far and wide;

"Why, I didn't let you in when you came home last night. I only meant to keep you waiting a little while."

"When I came home last night? Why, I haven't been within fifteen miles of the house since seven o'clock yesterday morning. We just came down on the 4:30 train."

"Didn't you come home last night?" gasped Mrs. Cuthbert.

"Of course not. No, of course didn't; I been working at the office half the night. Didn't you receive my letter? I supposed I should be detained in the city all night?"

"No; I haven't received any. What does it all mean?"

And then she told him all about it—in rather an incoherent style to be sure; but she made him understand, and he was greatly puzzled as to who it could have been.

Mrs. Cuthbert, now that her mind was relieved, began to remember that she had quite forgotten getting supper the day before, and was soon living about broiling ham and poaching eggs, scrambling eggs and making coffee; the charred remains of her husband's supper, which she took from the oven. Then they sat down to the tea table, baby and all, and ate their breakfast.

That afternoon the village youth who did their "chores" was unusually late in coming. And when he did arrive it was with such a budget of news that its tardiness was forgiven.

He had been an eye-witness to the capture of two burglars at Squire Jones': they had been discovered in the very act of carrying off the silver, when Squire Jones, who never goes to bed without his shot-gun, "let fly" at the two.

"They smashed Bill Williams' head in with the plate basket, an' came 'most near hittin' me, an' when we had 'em caught tight, how they did talk! They cussed an' swore, an' one on 'em—a teller with a powerful ugly face—said as how they wouldn't 've been nabbed if they hedn't been foolin' round another house all the evenin'; an' he sez: 'There's one of the plucksest women there,' sez he; 'why, when I hollered into the winder at her, she didn't mind it no more than nothin', sez he, 'an' hanged if she didn't foller me out to the barn, an' go pokin' 'round after me in the dark?'"

Mrs. Cuthbert clung to her husband, and shuddered at this part of the narration.

"An' he sez," the boy went on—"he sez, sez he, I should hev knocked her on the head in case she'd been a man, but the blamed pluck of such a little thing just completely halergasted me'—that's jist his words; an' he sez that she come out after him again, when he an' his pal was hiding under some bushes, an' they was afraid to tech her, 'cause they seen suthin' shinin' in her hand, an didn't know but it might be a six-shooter."

"My scissors, I suppose," faintly murmured Mrs. Cuthbert; her husband only heard her.

"Wal'al, they're safe enough now—an' I guess I'll fetch the coal," said the boy, with the stolidity of a true son of the soil, seizing the coal-scuttle, but dropping it again to rummage in the inner pocket of his jacket. "Here's a letter for you, sir—the man said I might as well bring it 'long, as he'dn't couldn't get up this way 'fore tomorrer mornin', an' you might be in a hurry."

"My telegram," said Mr. Cuthbert, handing it to his wife. "What a convenience these modern scientific discoveries are!"—Harper's Bazar.

RELIGIOUS AND EDUCATIONAL.

Brooklyn has dismissed $13,000 worth of music-teachers.

—The Alabama House of Representatives has adopted an amendment to the Senate bill appropriating $100,000 per annum for the schools from the treasury in addition to the trust funds.

—Six universities in Germany have more than one thousand students each. Leipzig and Berlin take the lead, having respectively 2,730 and 1,977. In the twenty-one universities of the country there are now 17,143 students and 1,827 teachers.

—The Unitarians have arranged a series of Sunday-school lessons for their schools. It is divided into three departments—primary, junior and senior. The course of study includes general church history. The last year of the senior department will be devoted to "Religion as Affected by Modern Science."

—The Moravian Provincial Elders' Conference makes an appeal to the churches under its care to contribute liberally to the support of the retired ministers and ministers' widows. The circular says that never was assistance more necessary for this purpose than now, the income of the sustentation fund having been cut down several thousand dollars by the hard times.

—A "Teachers' Parlor" has been opened in the new building of the Baptist Publication Society, which stands on Chestnut street, Philadelphia. It is handsomely carpeted, and furnished with chairs, tables, books and maps, and is free to all persons. The beginnings of a complete library are also to be found there. On Tuesday evening of each week the Sunday-School lesson for the succeeding Sunday is taught.

—The venerable Dr. Lovick Pierce, now in his ninety-third year, is writing a series of reminiscences of the century. He is the oldest Methodist minister living on this continent, and probably the oldest of any denomination. He is also the great-grandfather of the present Bishop Pierce, of Georgia. He points to the great difference that exists between Methodism as it was in the days of his youth and now, and concludes that either primitive Methodists were more religious than was needful, or else modern Methodists are cold.

—The British Sanitary Record objects to the long hours of school study, the numerous subjects taught and the slight attention paid to the laws of physiology and hygiene in the physical training of pupils. It advises a more careful attention to the relation existing between a pupil's physical wellbeing and his mental activity, and says: "There is a serious danger of permanently injuring the health of pupils unnaturally crammed, and a closer examination of the physical condition of a pupil should be far oftener taken as a guide to the amount of time to be spent in study than is now done.

—The committee appointed by the Presbyterian General Assembly of 1870 to mature a plan of representation, have published their report. The committee assume that synodical representation has been rejected. They express the opinion also that a large Assembly is not necessarily an evil. The Free Church of Scotland had 474 Commissioners in its last Assembly; the Established Church about 700. The following suggestions are therefore made: 1. That the number necessary to constitute a Presbytery from five to ten. 2. To require of each Presbytery to send—the same as now—its own Commissioners, or to arrange the mileage fund on a basis which will pay one-half the expenses of the contributing Presbyteries. 3. To increase the contingent fund, and pay from it part of the expense of entertaining the Assembly.

Spring Fashion in Bonnets and Hats.

The capote-shaped bonnet is likely to be the most favored in the coming season, with certain modifications from the shape now worn in silk and velvet. The brims of straw bonnets are narrower, allowing room for a velvet or ribbon trimming next to the face; the crowns are lower and broader every broad, in fact—doing away with the Tyrolean point, and little capes of straw are set on at the back, which are entirely hidden by bows, flowers or drooping feathers. Wreaths, mostly of leaves, with pendent buds or blossoms interspersed, and falling on a fringe at the back and on the sides of the crown, will still continue in favor, and imposters of flowers have all the new shades in flowers. Although nature is beautiful! and closely imitated, does not at all prevent designers from indulging in flights of the imagination whenever it seems necessary to make a flower or a leaf which is not included in nature's category; or, "when the shape of some known flower is preserved, it is often disguised in the borrowed shade which fashion has made the favorite of the hour. This has been the case in the rich designs in flowers for winter evening dresses, and just now the call for sulphur roses and light-green buds is allowing necessity to be the mother of invention. Yellow is the color at present in the ascendant, and so cases of light-yellow flowers are the most prominent, although the pale shades, in all other colors are equally beautiful. There are many spring flowers which are yellow, and so this fashion is perhaps not very much out of the way.

Round hats' shapes have scarcely been decided upon; these come later in the season, although it is certain that they are to be much smaller than last year, and that the reign of the wide-brimmed coaching hats is at an end. The shapes point to a new fashion now much in vogue in Paris, the copying of the Henry III. and Valois dress; the toque, or small round hat, is copied, and may be seen in the old pictures of that time; and the recent dinner and evening dresses carry out the new idea by the close-fitting bodice, tightly fitted with whalebone, and finished with square neck and high-standing "frise" or ruche, three inches in depth. The skirts are modified into the square or cut-away coat, with inside vest of some brilliant shade of satin, worn also square, and filled in with ruches and falls of rich lace; embroideries, consisting of pearl, gold, silver and steel, and set thickly on the fronts of the vests, are much in favor. As being reproduced most frequently in all possible combinations.

Chenille will, of course, enter largely into the trimming of spring bonnets; scarfs and laces in tulle embroidered with chenille in all colors, sometimes thickly mixed with small gilt or steel beads, the same lace having been used this winter in trimming evening dresses. Clusters of chenille will be used, and the brims of round hats and edges of bonnets come already worked in patterns of chenille on the straw.—N. Y. Evening Post.

Breathing Miasma Without Injury.

There is no exaggeration in the statement that thousands of persons residing from one year's end to another in fever and ague regions on this Continent and elsewhere, breathe air more or less impregnated with miasma, without incurring the disease, simply and only because they are in the habit of using Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a preventive. It has frequently happened, and the fact has been amply attested by the parties themselves, that persons surrounded on all sides by neighbors suffering the horrors of this shivering and burning plague, have enjoyed absolute immunity from it, thanks to the protective influence of the Bitters. Nor is that standard anti-febrile cordial less efficacious in remedying than in preventing chills and fever, bilious remittents, and disorders of a kindred type. Taken between the paroxysms, it speedily and effectually and permanently prevents their recurrence. These facts, conclusively established by evidence, appeal with peculiar force to travelers and sojourners in malarious districts.

Prof. Tyndall's Warning.

In concluding an address to the students of University College, London, Prof. Tyndall, who is unquestionably one of the most brilliant men living, said to the young people: "Take care of your health. Imagine not that science is curious in a matter that can be do there but by the very force of his stroke expatiate the coils of his craft. Take care of the health of your head. The distinguished scientist's advice is equally applicable to ladies. We are apt to devote all our energies to wielding the carpet-beating machine, but the time of us examine or even think of the condition of our boots until the broken or rotten timbers suddenly give way, and we find ourselves the victims of a calamity which could have been easily avoided by a little forethought. What began with a slight fracture, or perhaps a bruise, exposure to damp, or going into influenza, ends in the complete wreck of the life-boat. The disease which began with a cough, ended in the most agonizing and terrible diseases and General Debility; and CAUTION acts directly upon the cause of these complaints. It invigorates and strengthens the entire system, and thoroughly purifies the blood, inflammation, cures ulceration and regulates digestion.

Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Habitual Constipation, Palpitation of the Heart, Headache, Piles, Nervousness and General Prostration of the Nervous System, no medicine has given such perfect satisfaction in all these cases as CAUTION. It purifies the blood, cleanses all of its organs, and possesses a controlling power over the nervous system.

The remarkable cures effected by VEGETINE have induced many physicians to prescribe it, and when we know to prescribe and use it in their own families.

In fact, VEGETINE is the best remedy yet discovered, and is the only one that can be relied upon in the severe forms of disease.

THE BEST EVIDENCE.

The following letter from Rev. E. S. Best, Pastor of M. E. Church, Natick, Mass., will be read with interest by many physicians. Also, those suffering from the same disease as effected by one of the Rev. E. S. Best. No person can doubt this statement, as Rev. E. S. Best is known as the extreme powers of VEGETINE:

NATICK, MASS., Feb. 1, 1875.

MR. H. R. STEVENS, Dear Sir:—We have good reason to believe that VEGETINE is a medicine of great value. We feel assured that it has been the means in the hands of God of saving the life of our son Frank, and that too after he had suffered from an affection of the throat and lungs for two years, which physicians had pronounced incurable. A council of physicians had been called, and had decided that he could live but a few days. Under this state of affairs application was made for VEGETINE, and from that time he began to mend. He has been perfectly restored to health, and is now able to perform the labors of his profession. We have given VEGETINE to the present to have been instrumental in saving our son's life, and we feel that we cannot say too much in its praise. Yours truly,

REV. E. S. BEST,
MRS. C. C. BEST.

All Diseases of the Blood.

If VEGETINE will relieve pain, cleanse purify and save such diseases, restore health and perfect health after using different physicians, many remedies, suffering for years, is not evidence sufficient to prove to you that VEGETINE is the great blood purifier, and will cure all diseases in the blood, and all complaints arising therefrom, then we do not know what will. It can truly be called the great blood purifier of the day. It cures sores of diseases of the blood, and all complaints arising therefrom, and we defy anyone to purify and renovate the blood as VEGETINE does. Try it and be convinced. Send for our extra circular containing a full description of the work. All sold by druggists. Price $1.00 per bottle.

CAUTION.—Counterfeits and worthless imitations of VEGETINE are being offered to the public because of the great success which has attended the use of this medicine. Be sure you get the genuine. Do not be persuaded to buy any other preparation that may be recommended as "just as good as VEGETINE." Ask your druggist for it, and he will get it for you.

AGRICULTURAL AND DOMESTIC.

—Ivy keeps a house warm in winter and cool in summer.

—There is no dish for the farmer's breakfast-table in the winter which is so healthful and nourishing as a porridge made of corn and oat-meal equal quantities, and eaten with milk. It is food and drink.—Iowa State Register.

—All sorts of animals delight in a dust bath. Chickens who have easy and continued access to it will never be troubled with vermin, either in their houses or on their bodies. Cattle delight to stand in a dusty road scraping it up with their fore feet and flinging it all over their backs. The cheapest and most effectual cure for lice on cattle is to scatter a quart of dry dust along the spine from the horns to the tail. In winter, when they cannot get it, many animals become covered with vermin.—N. Y. Herald.

—To make mock-sweetbreads, take three-quarters of a pound of veal well beaten in a pestle mortar, a little suet or lard, the yolks of two eggs and a spoonful (scant) of bread-crumbs. Mix all well together, season with pepper, a very little mace and salt; add a great spoonful of cream. Roll up like a pound in the shape of sweetbreads, and brown before the fire or in the oven. Serve with a gravy of brown flour, wet up with cream; stir into the gravy in the bake-pan till smooth, then let it boil up once. If too thick add more cream, or a little boiling water.—Christian Union.

—Has it ever occurred to our readers that it is easier to take the milk away from the cream than to skim the cream off the milk? The former process insures a better result in quantity of unbroken cream, in facilitying of handling and in saving of time. To take the milk from the cream requires the pans to be made smaller at the bottom than at the top, and to have a hole made in the bottom, with a piece of zinc pipe, an inch or two long, soldered into it, of such a diameter that a common-sized cork would fit into it. The pans may rest on frames, or on small stands, elevated from the floor to a sufficient height to admit of placing skim milk cans underneath. This process is simple, effective and worthy of a trial.—American Cultivator.

—A useful hint may occasionally be derived from humble sources, and we lately noticed a plan, in a cottager's dwelling, of keeping small seeds which is not known or practiced by every gardener in the three kingdoms. The owner of the cottage was desirous of having cauliflowers for Christmas, and five weeks ago cut some close heads, and while one was fresh and firm as ever. These are suspended in a cool pantry, with their stalks or cut parts upward. The stalks are hollowed out by scooping out the pith, and the cavity in each is filled with water. As this is absorbed or evaporated it is replenished, and the result is that the heads remain as fresh and firm as when cut from the garden. The owner says he has thus preserved cauliflowers for months, but for us one examine or even think of the condition of our boots until the broken or rotten timbers suddenly give way, and we find ourselves the victims of a calamity which could have been easily avoided by a little forethought. What began with a slight fracture, or perhaps a bruise, exposure to damp, or going into influenza, ends in the complete wreck of the life-boat. The disease which began with a cough, ended in the most agonizing and terrible diseases and General Debility; and CAUTION acts directly upon the cause of these complaints. DONALDSON BARNELL, the murderer of Ira Hodge Swan, was sentenced on the 24th inst. by Judge Whitbeck to seven years imprisonment for burglary at Manistee a few weeks ago. His companions in crime, Henry Tompkinson, Chas Smith and Thos. Long were sentenced 10, 12, and 7 year respectively to the same institution. Each of the prisoners plead extenuating circumstances, Barnell saying that he had been cheated out of $100 earned last winter, was hard up and his object in committing the robbery was to obtain food for his family. He is sick, and also suffers from heart disease. His mother, now 70 years old, is lying at the point of death, says the Manistee Advocate, and Barnell will have a wife and near child to struggle with the world during his seven years retirement. Surely the way of the transgressor is hard.

SPRING HARROW ITEMS.—Our citizens are busy at present getting out their wood on the beach, and business has resumed it former activity since the last fall of snow.

Andrew Archibald on his return from Charlevoix, last Monday, when near Advance had his team to break through the ice and come very near drowning, but by manly exertions from the brave woman they they escaped them.

Health is good in this place, as we have but one death to chronicle. The eldest son (boy) Jim, passed in his checks last week he has hauled his last load of wood, his funeral was preached by the usual one, his text taken from the two good chapter of the one apostolic. He was hauled to his last resting place over the lots and buried in the beautiful snow.

We have two singing schools in the neighborhood which are doing splendid, as the majority of the scholars are learning very rapidly, and I trust say we have spoken music in our midst here if we only cultivate it properly.

Our town enemas is high the 11th to nominate parties for our spring election. No buildjeering.

THE Senate has confirmed the Cabinet and the Government is in working order.

THE carpenters have about completed the window frames of the new M. E. Church edifice.

A NEW CITY.—A bill incorporating Clam Lake into the city of Cadillac, has passed the Senate.

THE Van Raalte is getting ready to resume business on her old route, as soon as navigation opens.

O. D. WOOD, of Norwood, and E. H. Green of Charlevoix have been reappointed Notaries public.

D. H. PIERCE has been nominated for Supervisor in the new Township of Hayes.

THE Building Committee have decided to put the spire of the new church upon the corner, according to the original plan.

A bill has passed the Senate and will undoubtedly pass the House, fixing the fees of witnesses in justice courts at 75 cents per day.

Only a few days after election last fall, the following telegram flashed over the country: "Hayes has 185 votes, and is elected. Z. Chandler.' Was he mistaken?

SAM RAMSDELL has gone Republican by 5,500, every Republican candidate being elected.

ABOUT 50 citizens of Charlevoix surprised Hon. W. L. Tibbits, at his residence, one night last week and left about $25 worth of good things.

REGULAR communication of Charlevoix Lodge, F. & A. M., on Tuesday evening, March 27. A general attendance desired.

ENTERPRISE.—We hear that Peter Loutlare contemplates erecting a $4,000 brick block at Kalkaska, next summer He has been playing his vocation at a jeweler at that place.

Under Hayes' administration, the Northern South are already getting better acquainted, and each is finding out that the other isn't so bad a fellow after all.

President Hayes announces it as his intention to regard Vice President Wheeler as one of his advisers, the same as a member of his Cabinet.

Carpenter & Bartholomew have been working up their entire stock and are offering goods at their popular prices give them a call.

Marquette now receives her supply of water from Lake Superior by means of a pipe which has been run outside of the break water.

It is predicted by many that within six months, Byron will be almost populous President the country has had during the last quarter of a century, excepting Lincoln. Everything seems to indicate it now.

At the Township Meeting to be held in this village Monday in April, three justices of the peace are to be elected in Charlevoix Township, in place of Messrs. Bartholomew, Cooper and Wheelock.

Violins, violin strings, bows, pegs, full guarantee bridges, tools, etc., also guitar strings at Carpenter & Bartholomew's.

THE DAVIES.—The fair at the month of this river can only be said to be in a very bad condition. It extends out about 300 feet and has lost about four feet of water. Dredging will be found necessary, if not to meet the requirements of the spring trade.

At the Republican state convention held at Lansing on the 7th Judge Cooley was re-nominated by acclamation for justice of the Supreme Court, and V. B. Collier and Gov. L. Baker were nominated for Regents of the University.

THE PROSPECT.—Indications point to an unusually brisk season for the Charlevoix region. More wood than has been got out any season before has been purchased by our dealers this winter, and the bark trade will be larger than ever.

M. M. Pomeroy, (Brick) has sold his paper, Pomeroy's Democrat, to a joint stock association, to be known as "The Legal Tender Publishing Co. of Cheboygan" "Brick" Pomeroy is the Editor in Chief and business manager.

CITIZENS' meetings are already being held all over the country to sustain President Hayes's policy of peace. The action of the New York Union League on Thursday evening is significant of the general sentiment of the Republicans of the country. President Hayes may be assured that his policy meets the approval of the nation.

If you want something nice and reviving this hot weather go to Carpenter & Bartholomew's and get some oranges, they got 'em.

THE STEAMER ANNIE.—Capt. Mees writes to a friend in this village that he will bring his steamer here as soon as navigation opens. The Annie has received a new and larger engine, moved the boiler and machinery amidships, thus creating a forward and after cabin. Thus arranged the Annie will be better than ever fitted for this route.

SMALL POX AT PETOSKEY.—A man died of Small Pox at Petoskey on Sunday.

A few pieces of remnant prints for sale at cost at See & Washburn's.

WHITE wheat is reported to be badly damaged in some parts of Wisconsin.

Every member of the President's Cabinet, except Schurz, is a lawyer by profession. Mr. Schurz is a journalist, and at one time edited the Detroit Post.

HON. SIMON CAMERON resigned his seat in the United State Senate a few days ago, the resignation to take effect when his successor is elected and qualified. Mr. Cameron has been in the Senate since 1845. Don Cameron, the son, is likely to succeed him.

President Hayes' Cabinet appears to give very general satisfaction. There was a disposition to find fault with some of the selections at first, but on second thought, the wisdom of the President becomes apparent, and all agree that he is starting right.

Plenty of canned goods at See & Washburn's.

Chicago may soon boast of being the wickedest city in the country. Last summer, one Sullivan coolly and deliberately murdered one Hanford, a school teacher, at his own door. Sullivan was tried and acquitted last week, and now walks the streets as free as any man.

New lot of seal brown, navy blue, plain and plaid water proofs, just received at Fox, Rose & Buttars.

Judge David Davis, United State Senator from Illinois, has declared his intention to vote with the Republicans, and has been put on the Judiciary Committee of the Senate as a Republican. The Democrats don't admire him as much as they did a short time ago. They have evidently caught another Christiancy.

Post Master General Key is already swamped with letters from Democrats all over the country, asking application for Post Office appointments. He announces that no attention will be paid to them, as no changes will be made except for cause and for the good of the service.

For good time go to See & Washburn for your goods.

Brigham Young, Jr., is organizing in Salt Lake City a company of 500 Mormon families which will colonize in Sonora, Mexico. The Mexican authorities have promised perfect religious toleration, and large tracts of land. The launch to the new land of promise will commence about April 10th.

Judge Davis cast his politicel vote in favor of the confirmation of John Sherman, against the united vote of the Democratic Senators. It is further stated that President Hayes has signified his intention to consult with both Senators Davis and Oglesby in regard to Illinois appointments. In addition, amongst those calling at the White House to see the President the other day was Judge Davis. All of which is gall and wormwood to the Democracy.

Call and see those new jet black fine pure Mohair lasters, will make up as nice as any black silk. Fox, Rose & Buttars.

There is a feeling of great and growing confidence in the plans and abilities of the new President throughout the country, and particularly in commercial circles. Mr. Hayes is in daily receipt of enthusiastic indorsement and "God speeds," which are rained in upon him from every section. These are by no means party utterances. They are usually sent by men of all parties, who desire to encourage and sustain the President in his earnest and patriotic intentions. It looks, now, as if the new President would become very popular before the first year of his term of office expires.

Ladies will find at our store a fine lot of Hamburg edgings, insertion, crochet edgings, wash blonde and lace footing. Fox, Rose & Buttars.

SCHOOL MATTERS.—We have heretofore mentioned the need of a third department to our public school, and we again revert to the subject. Our school building was erected with the ultimate end in view of building up a school here which should be academic in its nature. The growth and development of our county and region bring with them the growth and intellectual developement of our young people, and the average educational advantages of the district school are insufficient. Recognizing these facts, the more thrifty and well-to-do farmers of the region begin to look about them for an advanced school in which to give their sons and daughters a winter's schooling. Charlevoix by virtue of its locality is the point for such a school and we already have a building with a large room yet unfinished. We deem it wise and expedient that the district should take the necessary steps to complete this room, and prepare for the establishment of a higher grade in the school. It will at last be self sustaining, and place Charlevoix, where she can safely lay claim to being the educational centre of Grand Traverse.

THE ENTERPRISE.—Conrad Starkey, of the firm of Starkey Brothers, tug and vessel owners of Milwaukee, was in town Saturday, and the SENTINEL'S reporter interviewed him. Mr. Starkey has been casting a wistful eye upon Charlevoix as a business point, for some time, having been impressed with the idea that with its extensive business resources, many of them yet undeveloped, a trade must build itself up here which will constitute an important feeder to the great lake commerce to Chicago and her sister cities. As a means for future investments the firm propose, upon the opening of navigation to send the tug Starkey Brothers to this point, where she will be stationed during the season for towing. The Starkey Brothers is of 75 feet keel and staunch in every way, and will be supplied with a steam pump for wrecking purposes. The firm will also put the schooner Starkey in the work and bark trade between the point and Milwaukee.

I see now the Progress dont know whether to join the gratified wing of the Democracy or continue to train with the Great American-Proud-Perpatrati branch of that party, and the result is we have a continuation of the political nothingness which has always characterized that paper, only a little more of it. With a mere system saturated with a cringing fear of results, and such a childish or send feminine desire to ride straddle, the amateur editor of the Progress, has by faithful service earned himself the title of "nondescript" If it be true as he says, that we, through necessary motives, are trying to conciliate the "rebel" element of the cabinet, we only differ from the Progress man in the fact that his short journalistic life has been spent in vain efforts to convince everybody who had political tendencies either way. Because you happen to be a turnip, brother G, dont think that everybody else is crazy.

A burglar broke into the unoccupied residence of Hon. F. R. Williams last week, and was helping himself when the night watchman discovered him, and, calling to his assistance John Dunsky, they repaired to the house and captured the gentleman, after a brief but spirited fight. He was examined and bound over under $1,000. He gave his name as John Allen and claimed to have a wife and child in the vicinity of South Arm.—Progress.

REPUBLICAN CAUCUS.—The Republicans of the township of Charlevoix are hereby notified that a caucus will be held in the Town Hall on Saturday evening, March 24, 1877 at seven o'clock p. m., for the purpose of nominating township officers to be supported at the coming spring election, and to transact such other business as may be deemed advisable.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

FOREIGN.

Hon. Mrs. Norton, the well-known British poet and novelist, now an old woman of seventy years, and enshrined to her chair by chronic rheumatism, was married on the 2d to Sir William Maxwell, a Member of the British Parliament. The groom is fifty-nine years old.

J. T. Hart, the American sculptor, died at Florence, Italy, on the 4d.

The funeral of John O'Mahoney occurred at Dublin, on the 4th. About 6,000 persons participated.

A London dispatch of the 3d says that all accounts received from Constantinople represented the condition of the Turkish Empire as very desperate. In some portions the scarcity of provisions had assumed the proportions of a veritable famine.

According to Belgrade telegrams of the 30th, in anticipation of Russian invasion, Turkey had decided to arm the entire Mohammedan population of Bosnia, and 15,000 breech-loading rifles had already been distributed.

The London Times of the 5th says United States bonds were almost the only legitimate objects of investment in European markets.

Marigale de Compegien, the distinguished African traveler, was killed in a duel at Cairo, Egypt, on the 5th.

The Servian official statement shows that she had 8,000 killed and 20,000 wounded during her recent troubles with Turkey.

The German Postmaster-General has proposed to the international Postal Union the introduction of a postal-card which shall be available in all the countries belonging to the Union, and furnished at a uniform rate of one copper each.

The Matamoras Military Court, before which Gen. Cortina was tried, have found him guilty of kidnapping, the penalty attached to which in Mexico is death.

Telegrams from Constantinople, on the 7th, say that in the face of steps taken to induce the Porte to modify the attitude which it assumed at the Conference, the Ottoman Government firmly maintained its determination to make no concession which would directly or indirectly interfere with its integrity and independence, but would carry out of its own accord larger reforms throughout the Empire than the powers demanded for certain Provinces. It was authoritatively added that the Porte would go to war rather than submit to an indefinite prolongation of the suspense. Turkey had forwarded a circular to its representatives abroad, declaring that Russia had been all the while directly waging war against her, and was fomenting insurrection in Bosnia.

An explosion took place in the Worcester Colliery, near Swans, England, on the 8th. At last accounts, sixteen dead bodies had been recovered.

The Khedive of Egypt has tendered 30,000 men and four men-of-war to the Sultan in case of war with Russia.

A London telegram of the 8th says Lord Derby, the British Minister of Foreign Affairs, had declared that, in the event of war, Turkey need expect no help from Great Britain.

DOMESTIC.

Fires occurred in St. Louis on the 4th, which destroyed property valued at over $1,000,000.

On the 2d the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury issued the forty-first call for the redemption of 5-20 bonds. The call is for $10,050,000, principal and interest to be paid on and after June 8.

The Belmont Hotel, at Karns City, Pa., was burned, early on the morning of the 5th. The fire was discovered in the office of the hotel by the proprietor of the building—Mr. Bateman—before it had made much headway. He ran for water, and, returning, found the whole room in flames, cutting off all escape by the stairway and the rooms above. Mr. Bateman rushed through the flames and succeeded in returning with his son. They were badly burned, the son fatally. The building was completely and fearful rapidity, and in less than half an hour was totally destroyed. In search for the charred bodies of Mrs. Bateman, her daughters Minnie, Lou, Bella and Winnie, were found burned beyond recognition.

N. Brown, of the firm of Spraehl & Co., of New York, was found almost consumed. Thirty boarders were in the hotel at the time, all of whom were injured by jumping from the windows. Money loss about $10,000.

A young man, a stranger, with light-red hair, deliberately walked into the rapids above Niagara Falls, on the 5th, and was swept over the cataract.

The Waltham Building, a large business structure in Bond street, New York City, was totally turned on the night of the 6th. Considerable damage was done to adjoining buildings and their contents, and the entire loss was estimated at nearly of quite $2,000,000. Robbins & Appleton, representing the American Watch Company; the Gorham Silverware Manufacturing Company; Taylor & Bro., and the Adams & Shaw Company were the heaviest losers. Many other firms suffered losse.

A directory in the interest of Jay Gould and the Union Pacific Railroad has been elected for the Chicago & Northwestern and the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroads.

Because his mother wouldn't give him an apple, a nine year-old boy at Owensboro, Ky., committed suicide by hanging, a few days ago.

A wealthy citizen of Hoboken, N. J., named John H. Lewis, died a few days ago, and by his will leaves his entire estate (more than $1,000,000) to the Government to help pay the National debt. He was eighty-eight years of age.

A panic was caused by a false alarm of fire in the St. Francis Xavier Roman Catholic Church, New York City, on the night of the 8th, and in the stampede which ensued from the galleries six women and one boy were trampled to death.

A Winnipeg (Manitoba) special to the St. Paul Pioneer-Press of the 8th says information had been received there of the arrival of Sitting Bull at Wood Mountains, British Possessions. He had 1,035 horses and lodges, captured from United States forces. A force of mounted police had been sent out to interview him.

On the 8th, the Coroner's Jury which, for some weeks, had been investigating the Ashtabula disaster, rendered their verdict. They held the Railway Company responsible for the disaster, and say the bridge fell in consequence of defects and errors in design and construction.

PERSONAL.

The Louisiana Returning Board were released from custody on the 3d, and the House agreed to drop the pending investigations.

Joe Coburn, the New York pugilist, convicted of shooting and attempting to kill policemen, has been sentenced to ten years in State's Prison.

Chief Justice Moses, of the South Carolina State Supreme Court, died at Columbia on the 6th.

Secretary of State—William M. Evarts, of of New York.

Secretary of the Treasury—John Sherman, of Ohio.

John D. Lee, the Mountain Meadows murderer, has been sentenced to be shot on the 23d of March. He seemed unmoved when this sentence was pronounced (for the second time), but his wife was quite feeble.

A delegation of colored ministers called at the Executive Mansion in Washington, on the 8th, to pay their respects to the President, and were admitted to his office, where they congratulated him and bade him God-speed in the work before him.

The National Butter, Egg and Cheese Association recently held a Convention in Chicago. Geo. E. Crook was re-elected President, and Col. R. M. Sittler, Secretary, of the Association.

POLITICAL.

A Columbia (S. C.) telegram of the 2d states that, in the Tida Norris habeas corpus case, brought before the Supreme Court of that State, and in which a decision discharging the prisoner would be considered as recognizing the validity of the Hamptom Government, Justice Wright (colored) had stated that he was intimidated and coerced, by threats of his personal safety, into the decision of the order discharging the prisoner. The Justice had subsequently revoked his signature, giving his reasons therefor in a published statement. The Supreme Court-room was crowded, on the afternoon of the 5th, to hear the final decision in the case. Associate Justice Willard appeared on the bench, but colored Justice Wright was absent. The Sheriff was sent to look for Wright, and returned with the information that he had not been seen since the previous morning. Owing to the lack of a full bench, Justice Willard adjourned court till the 9th.

The Democratic members of the National House of Representatives held a caucus, on the night of the 5d, and adopted an address to the country, prepared for the signatures of the Democratic members. The address protests against the declaration of the election of Hayes and Wheeler, criticises the action of the Electoral Commission; asserts that the rights of Congress have been invaded, that crime and fraud have received judicial sanction, and that republican institutions have been imperiled.

To avoid an interregnum, President Hayes was sworn in on Saturday evening, the 3d instant, Chief-Justice Waite administering the oath of office.

On the evening of the 4th, Hon. Abram S. Hewitt resigned his position as Chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

The Democrats of the Senate of the Forty-fifth Congress held a meeting on the 5th, and unanimously elected Senator Wallace, of Pennsylvania, to be Chairman of the Senate Democratic Caucus.

The colored members of the Republican Legislature of Louisiana have issued an address to the people of the United States, setting forth their belief that President Hayes was rightly as well as lawfully accorded the Electoral vote of their State, and that thereby (or, Packard's title to the Governorship is proved beyond question. They ask for the recognition by the General Government of the Packard State Government.

Senator Wm. H. Barnum, of Connecticut, has been appointed Chairman of the National Democratic Committee, in place of Mr. Hewitt, resigned.

The Recent Democratic State Convention of Rhode Island nominated J. R. Bursuty for Governor; Dr. A. Ballou for Lieutenant Governor; W. B. H. Hallett for Secretary of State; W. R. Pierce for Attorney General, and W. F. Congdon for Treasurer.

The Michigan Republican State Convention held at Lansing, on the 7th, renominated Judge Thomas M. Cooley for Judge of the Superior Court and George L. Maltz for University Regent. Resolutions were adopted approving the course indicated by President Hayes.

The Rhode Island Republican State Convention was held at Providence, on the 8th, and nominated Gen. Van Zandt for Governor. Albert C. Howard was nominated for Lieutenant-Governor, and the present incumbents were nominated for Secretary of State, Attorney-General and Treasurer.

CONGRESSIONAL.

All the Appropriation bills, except the Army and the River and Harbor, were passed before the close, by limitation, of the Forty-fourth Congress, on the 4th. By provisions of the Pre-emption bill, public documents are to come through the mails free. The President's salary remains at $50,000. In the Senate on the 4th the House amendments to the legislative bill were all concurred in, and the bill was passed. The bill to aid in the completion of certain Ship Canals was read at length, and it was finally agreed—47 to 20—that further consideration of the subject should be postponed until the first Wednesday in December next. The House bill to equalize the bounties of soldiers who served in the late war in the Union was considered, and was finally indefinitely postponed—31 to 25. Several private bills were passed. At twelve o'clock noon on the 4th, Vice President Ferry declared, after a few remarks, that the last session of the Forty-fourth Congress was at an end.....In the House, immediately after the morning call, the Sergeant-at-Arms to discharge all persons in his custody, as all investigations had ceased. A clerk—1 to 90—the Samuel J. Tilden and Thomas A. Hendricks received the Electoral votes of the Electoral vote and Vice-Tilden-ally appointed, and were the only duly elected President and Vice President of the United States, declaring that it is the right and duty of Congress and of the House to inquire into the election of both Presidential Electors, and to the existence of forgery, fabrication or fraud in any certificate of any Governor of Louisiana. Several amendments were offered to the Legislative bill, and after some discussion the bill was passed. At twelve o'clock noon, on the 4th the Speaker delivered a short valedictory and declared that the House stood adjourned without day.

SENATE—EXTRA SESSION.

The Senate of the Forty-fifth Congress convened in extra session on the 5th, and re-elected Mr. Ferry, of Michigan, as President pro tem. The roll of the newly elected Senators was called, and Messrs Anthony Beck, Blaine, Bogy, David Davis, H. G. Davis, Kernan, McPherson, Plumb, Rollins, Saulsbury, Teller, Windom, Cook, Garrett, Harris, Hill, Jones and Lamar were sworn in. A resolution was adopted that the credentials of Senators-elect in all disputed or contested States should be open to inspection and examination by the Senate. By this resolution Messrs. Kellogg of Louisiana; Mitchell, of Oregon, and Spencer, of Alabama; Lamar, of Mississippi; Corbin and Butler (contested), of South Carolina, were not sworn in, objections being made thereto. Lafayette Grover, of Oregon, did not respond to his name, and no objection was made to his being sworn in. Vice-President Wheeler was escorted into the Chamber, and Mr. Ferry presented him to the Senate and administered to him the oath of office. After the usual congratulatory ceremonies, an adjournment was had to the 6th.

A lengthy discussion occurred on the 6th over a motion that L. Q. C. Lamar be sworn in as Senator from Mississippi. Mr. Blaine, among others arguing that his (Lamar's) credentials being entirely regular in the form in which they and any question as to the legality of the Legislature which elected him should be a matter for subsequent inquiry by the Senate. After debate, the resolution that Mr. Lamar be sworn in was adopted—35 to 19. Mr. Wadleigh voting in the negative. Mr. Morrison, of Illinois, would not have voted in the negative, was paired with Mr. Blaine. Mr. Lamar was then sworn in. Mr. Saulsbury, of Delaware, offered a resolution declaring that the Senate was not bound to count the votes for President and Vice President except in those States which were duly certified by the Governor of the State. Mr. Blaine moved to lay the resolution on the table, and the motion was agreed to—yeas 37, nays 23. Mr. Saulsbury then moved that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business, but withdrew the motion at the request of Mr. Conkling, who moved that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business. The motion was agreed to, and the Senate went into executive session. After a short session the doors were opened, and the Senate adjourned.

—The Evangelist announces that an important meeting of the Presbyterian Alliance will be held in the city of Edinburgh, Scotland, on the 17th of July. The same general plan will be pursued as in the General Conference of the Evangelical Alliance in 1873. Delegates will be present from all the countries where the Presbyterian Church has organizations, and particularly from Great Germany, Italy, Spain, Oriental countries and the American States. They will be received with appropriate ceremonies on Monday evening. On Tuesday morning the Alliance will be organized after the sermon, and the first public meeting for reports, addresses and papers will be held in the evening of that day. The sessions will be held daily for one week; it being expected that on Saturday excursions will be made to places of historic interest, and on Sunday churches in Scotland will be supplied by delegates from foreign lands. Arrangements are also making for public meetings after the adjournment of the Alliance, to be held in Glasgow and other parts of the country.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

THE following is a statement of receipts and disbursements at the State Treasurer's office for February: Balance Jan. 31, 1876, $72,822; receipts, $430,152.48; disbursements, $441,265.54; balance Feb. 28, $8,886,401.26.

QUITE a flutter was caused in Detroit financial circles, a few days ago, by the sudden dissolution of an old-established banking institutions. He had been in the employ of the bank for a number of years, and was prompt, regular and efficient in the discharge of his duties. The clerk in question was formerly a banker in a thriving town in the interior of Michigan, but met with business reverses which compelled him to work for others for a livelihood. He was well connected, and, being naturally of a proud spirit, did not care to remain in comparative poverty where he had once lived in affluence, so he removed to Detroit. His reputation as an experienced and honest man stood him for his good positions, a responsible place in the bank being one of them. His conduct was such as to win for him the esteem of his associates and the confidence of his employers. About two years ago he became acquainted with an attractive young widow, and soon became infatuated with her. The time not required of him at the bank was passed in her society, to the neglect of his own family and his pile of money was spent largely by the interest of this female, and his hours of leisure were given up to carousal and dissipation. The bank clerk soon found that the demands of the siren were too importunate, and that, like a daughter of the horse-leech, she continually leant him to give, even when his purse had been stripped of the last dollar. So great was his infatuation and so weak his power to resist temptation, that he did what many others have done before him, borrowed from the bank with the intention of repaying it. Having in his custody the notes of the concern, he abstracted one for a small amount, and sold it to a street broker. When that came due he took one for a larger amount, sold that and paid the other. Soon the investment became safe with standing from the bank, and with standing from which he was defrauded, disgraced and dismissed, and granted immunity from arrest and punishment only on account of his family.

THE Democratic State Convention for the nomination of Regents of the University and a Justice of the Supreme Court will be held at Lansing, on the 15th.

THE Detroit, Grand Haven and Rapids Railroad Company, has made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors.

THE residence of D. W. Washer, at Grand Rapids, was burned, on the morning of the 3d. Loss not stated.

BIGELOW, FOX & Co.'s mills, at Culver Station, on the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw Railroad, were burned on the night of the 1st. The property destroyed consisted of a shingle-mill, circular saw-mill, machinery for the manufacture of wooden hubs, 250,000 feet of lumber and two freight cars. The origin of the fire was in the shaving-room of the shingle-mill. Total loss, about $25,000, of which Bogue, Fox & Co lose $20,000 on the mill, no insurance. Burdick & Stone $2,000 on lumber.

ALEXANDER MCKINLEY was crushed by a falling tree at Wilder's Camp, in Clare County, on the 1st, and died an hour after the accident. He was a Canadian.

DISPATCHES from ten points in the lumber region in this State and Wisconsin report that from one inches of snow fell on the night of the 1st. At Bay City, and at some other points, rain followed, but this afternoon turned again to snow, and it is probable that the running of logging operations, after five weeks' suspension, Lumber men are delighted.

WM. BROWN-HOUSE, of Hillsdale, was fatally burned, a few mornings ago, by melted pitch taking fire on the stove and communicating to her clothing. The old dress was made of the cotton of Mexico.

A YOUNG MAN, named Louis Wilson, shot himself with a revolver, at the foot of his dining-room, in Hudson, on the afternoon of the 28th ult., and died instantly.

MEN are returning from the woods and lumber camps in large numbers, the mild weather having interrupted the logging season to a close prematurely.

THE foundry of Little Bros., at Grand Rapids, was damaged by fire to the extent of $5,000 on the morning of the 3d.

THE Spiritualists of Michigan will celebrate the thirtieth anniversary of modern spiritualism in Battle Creek on March 31. Speakers of national reputation will be present, and the occasion is expected to be a grand one.

THE Alpena railroad project is meeting with opposition in the legislature from the towns along the route, who are seeking for a road from Bay City north.

MRS. OATMAN, seventy-two years old, fell down stairs, at Bay City, the other night, striking her face on a jar, and sustained fatal injuries.

HORACE BEVERLY, was thrown upon a circular saw, at Mill Grove, the other day, while adjusting a belt. One leg was cut off and he was otherwise fatally injured.

MARY COLEMAN, the daughter of a wealthy Tuscawara County farmer, was engaged by her father from a Detroit house of questionable repute, a few days ago. At the sight of her father's gray locks and tears she refused to go home with him. They started for the depot, but, upon passing the Postoffice, Miss Coleman said, "Wait a minute father, till I go in and see if there are any letters for me." He waited about fifteen minutes, and still she did not reappear, and he has not been able to find her since. After several days' inquiry, without discovering her hiding-place, the father returned home broken hearted.

THE balance of cash in the State Treasury, Feb. 28, was $867,386.56; receipts during the week ending March 3 were $10,376.80; payments during the same time were $48,804.84; balance in treasury March 3, 1877, 828,958.52; decrease for the week, $38,518.04.

FRANK KONKER's residence at Grand Rapids was entered by burglars, on the night of the 5th, and $130 in cash, a gold watch and chain worth $250, and $20 worth of jewelry stolen. The burglar, in escaping, tipped over a lighted lamp standing on a table, and a fire ensued, which would have burned the building had not been promptly discovered. No clew to the villain.

THE Menominee Herald says that the saw mills on Menominee River were never in better shape to give a good account of themselves than they are this spring.

THE engine house at the McComber mine, Negaunee, was burned Feb. 28. Loss on building and damage to machinery about $5,000.

THE Republican State Convention met at the Opera House, in Lansing, on the 7th, and was called to order by S. B. Bingham, chairman of the State Central Committee. Permanent organization was effected by the choice of Col. H. M. Duffield, as President, with one Vice President from each Congressional District, and James H. Stone, as Secretary, with assistant from each of his. Hon. Judge Thomas M. Cooley, the present incumbent, was nominated for Supreme Judge by acclamation, and, on the first ballot, T. F. Collier and Capt. Geo. L. Maltz were nominated for University Regents. The following resolutions were reported and unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That this Convention congratulates the country upon the peaceful settlement of the Presidential contest, by which the important Constitutional principle of the right of States to appoint Presidential Electors without Congressional interference was authoritatively affirmed, and a result reached consonant with exact justice.

Resolved, That we regard with satisfaction the line of policy marked out by the new Administration, as promising equal rights, and healing peace and general prosperity.

Resolved, That we heartily favor, and hereby pledge our support to, such a policy of reconciliation in the South as will promote a fraternal feeling between all classes, and, at the same time, guarantee to every citizen the full enjoyment of all his political and civil rights.

Resolved, That we point with pride to the success which has attended the Administration of our State affairs, by the ability and purity of our Judiciary, and to the remarkable growth in usefulness and reputation of our University, under the following care of the Republican party of Michigan.

A SHORT time ago Mrs. Isabella Richards, of Detroit, began a suit for a divorce from her husband, Amos W. Richards. On the 5th Mr. Richards was sent to jail for non-payment of alimony and solicitor's fee, as ordered by the court. On the 6th, Michael Hinane, solicitor for the unhappy Richards, applied to Judge Brent for a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that his incarceration was imprisonment for debt, and therefore a violation of the State Constitution, Sec. 28, Art. 6, of which instrument provides that "no person shall be imprisoned for debt arising out of, or founded, on a contract, express or implied, except in case of fraud or breach of trust," etc. Judge Reilly took Mr. Finane's view of the case and ordered the discharge of Mr. Richards.

THE SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor and Proprietor.

TUESDAY, MARCH 20, - - 1877

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

The week has been filled with interest and excitement. The peaceful outcome of the long crisis in Washington, the imposing ceremonies of a presidential inauguration held at a time and under circumstances which rendered them the most impressive in half a life time, the baltial struggles of our new and strangely conditioned administration—all these events, though transpiring outside of New York are of as vital and intense interest to the city as though the City Hall were the national Capitol, while besides this grand train of occurences, we have had enough local happenings to keep our eyes and ears well occupied.

On Thursday night a fire broke out in the large building on the corner of Broad street and Broadway, owned and occupied by Robbins & Appleton, agents of the Waltham Watch Co., and by the next morning it was level with the ground. The completeness of its destruction was, queerly enough 'the result of the thoroughness of its protection, the building being closed so firmly with bolts, bars and shutters that it was almost as hard to get into as an iron safe. The firemen were thus kept out for so long a time that when at last their streams could be brought to bear the flames had acquired irresistible headway. The building burned was a regular Aladdin's palace, a sort of a mine of gold, silver and precious stones, being occupied from roof to cellar by ten firms dealing in watches and jewelry. Over forty iron safes full of these valuables were exposed to the fiery furnace, and many of them are yet too hot to be opened to see what proportion of the $2,000,000 which their contents represented has got to be replaced by the insurance companies. Robbins & Appleton and the Gotham Silver Company had the most at stake in this disaster but are not only well insured but are too large concerns to be seriously affected by the occurence in any case.

Our next largest sensation is the panic at the immense Church of St. Xavier on Thursday night, which lacked not much of repeating the Brooklyn catastrophe. 4,000 persons packed the church whose pastor was drawing a highly colored picture of the pains and horrors of the lower regions when a woman overcome with nervousness and fear fainted away, thereby alarming some person in her neighborhood, more excitable than logical, into crying "Fire!" The effect was electrical. The audience already wrought up to a high pitch by the discourse, and having the Brooklyn Theatre vividly in mind, caught the infection of terror and in an instant the attentive quiet of the place was changed into such a Pandemonium as only similar circumstances can create. All thought of spiritual things were suddenly dissipated, and the instinct of the body for its own preservation ruled supreme. A pell-mell rush for the doors was made, despite the splendid efforts of the officiating clergy first to prevent and afterwards to quell the disturbance. Whatever may be thought of their doctrines, it can rarely be said of the Catholic priests that they fail of their duty in an emergency. While the tumult was at its highest one of them called to the choir to go on with the music, while others performed the rites of benediction at the alter in so calm and regular a manner as would have reassured any audience not thoroughly panic stricken. Others still mingled with the crowd, and by command, entreaty and persuasion sought to check the fatal stampede. For several awful minutes all efforts were unavailing, but finally the police, who meanwhile had worked manfully from the outside forced a passage through the shrieking mass and ultimately restored a degree of order which permitted the clearing of the house; not, however, until six persons had been crushed and trampled into eternity. I suppose the time will come when public buildings will be so constructed that these fatal jams in narrow entrances will be unknown: but we are a long way from it yet and, I fear, have got to be shocked in this way a good many more times before legislation regulating buildings will be had of sufficiently radical character to effect the neccessary reforms.

Almost at the moment of this startling episode, a large five story building in the lower part of the city gave way under the weight of a heavy stock of goods, and came down with a rumbling crash that shook the earth for blocks around, and frightened a large neighborhood who must have thought the end of all things had come at last. Fortunately no one is known to have been killed, though a large amount of property was distroyed.

In the death of Miss Matilda Heron, which occurred here this week, the stage and the public lose another of the few remaining veterans of the sock and buskin who delighted the fathers and grandfathers of this generation by their thrilling performances. Miss Heron was of Irish birth, but came to this country when very young She has been on the stage since about 1850, and has made hits in a variety of parts. Her one great success, however, was "Camille," with which role she became as much identified as is Jefferson with "Rip Van Winkle" or Maggie Mitchell with "Fanchon." This emotional character suited her to perfection, and no one of the hundreds of thousands who have witnessed her rendition of it will ever forget its power. The life of this lady, like that of most of her profession was a checkered one. She was twice married, but was separated from both husbands. By the second union she had one child, the young girl now known as Bijou Heron, who has adopted her mother's profession and is playing here in New York. The funeral takes place from Dr. Houghton's "Little Church Arond the Corner," beloved of the dramatic profession since the death of poor Holland years ago.

New York justice has taken a long step toward retrieving its reputation by its action in the case of Joe Coburn, the the notorious prize fighter, whose arrest and indictment I noticed last week As things have been for years in the courts of Gotham, influential roughs and ploughlies like the above named rascal could almost always get off scot free in some mysterious way or other. As a rule this class are too valuable around the polls on election day to have their sphere of usefulness restricted by prison walls, and usually, whenever one of them in a moment of emotional insanity has broken into a citizen's house or broken a citizen's head, there has been no lack of dirty little politicians to tid the shyster lawyers in prostituting the ballot-heated scoundrel. This time the little game didn't work. Mr. Coburn, with the confidence born of frequent success, indulged one night in the pastime of shooting policemen, and now, only a little more than a week thereafter, finds himself, to his unutterable surprise, disgust and indignation, with cropped head and striped garments, settling down for a ten years laborious residence at Sing Sing.

When he was sentenced, a day or two ago, Coburn was cross but had little idea that he was really going to be "put through." When therefore, on Thursday morning he was roused from his cell at an early hour and told to make ready to go up to the musical town just mentioned, he was included to treat the summons as a joke, intimating that he was going to have a new trial and get off. When at length he found that the officers failed to recognize any joke, but persisted in their intention to ship him up the river at once, their wasn't a mellder man in the city than Joe. His last hope was that some of his ruffian gang would rescue him on the way to the train; but the authorities had provided against that contingency by making the transfer unexpectedly and at an early hour, and there was no help for him.

How deeply his noble soul will revolt against doing the useful work which will be required of him in his new quarters may be inferred from his past career, which has been mainly one of strutting up and down the earth, drinking whiskey, and making no other use of his big fists than to pummell his fellows. And how much good the promptness and mode of his punishment will do the rest of his kind, may be imagined from the natural aversion which blackguards have for hard work. Give us two or three more such sudden convictions, and we should have quite a rest from the pistol practice and other illegal eccentricities of these gentry.

The wife of the British forger Wimbow resides in Whitehall, N. Y., and supports herself at her needle.

Tilden? Tilden? Who's he? Oh yes, he used to be Governor of New York. Yes, yes, we recollect now.

Tilden may wiggle over the cipher dispatches as he will. It is a matter of no consequence. He's nothing but a cipher himself now.

The vote by which the House bill for the equalization of bounties was postponed by the Senate, on Saturday, consisted of 22 Democrats and 9 Republicans in the affirmative, and 25 Republicans in the negative.

The vote in the Senate postponing till December the bill to aid the resumption of specie payments stood as follows: Ayes, 17 Democrats and 10 Republicans; noes 13 Republicans and 4 Democrats.

Governor Hayes took the oath of office as President of the United States on Saturday night at the Executive Mansion. It was administered in the red parlor about 7 o'clock in the evening by the Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court.

Mr. Wm. Denham, Grand Master of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Michigan, received an invitation from the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts to attend the Centennial anniversary of that body which was the first Grand Lodge formed in America. The occasion took place on the 8th of March at the Masonic Temple in Boston.

Solomon Allen died suddenly at the State Prison, Jackson, on Monday, from rupture or aneurism in the chest. He was serving a fifteen years term for burning a church in Marshall six years ago. It was his third term, all for arson. He was over sixty years of age, and began serving the State twenty-five years ago.

The Legislature of Maine has voted to make religious lotteries, gift-enterprises, etc, punishable misdemeanors, the same as common gambling.

The president of the New Jersey Central says he knows the perils that thereat a railroad as well as any living American. He is like the Irish priest who, being asked if he knew the rocks in the harbor, replied with confidence, I do, yer honor, ivry wan of thim. That's wan," he added calmly, as the ship struck it, filled and sunk.

Tilden may wiggle over the cipher dispatches as he will. It is a matter of no consequence. He's nothing but a cipher himself now.

It would seem as if "reform is" still "necessary" among the "Reformers." On the 3d, in the Capitol, Reformer Douglas nearly induced Reformer Lamar to shoot him by his drunken antics Reformer Glover came to blows with a reporter on the floor of the House, and Reformer Morrison undertook to throttle Reformer Payne in front of the Speaker's desk. The bull-dozers were indeed ably represented in the closing hours of the Forty-fourth Congress.

The House on the 3d solemnly declared that Mr. Tilden had 196 electoral votes and was elected President. In so doing the Democratic majority endorse the Cronin fraud in Oregon, with its scandalous circumstances. And that was the only significant feature of the performance. Of course this declaration amounts to no more than would a similar one from a Second ward Democratic caucus, because neither one nor the other has any jurisdiction. In exact accordance with the provisions of a law supported by nine-tenths of the Democrats in Congress, it has been decided and declared that Hayes and Wheeler have been duly elected. The action of the House does not effect their title in the slightest; it only demonstrates that the Democratic party cannot be trusted to abide by its own agreements.

Hayes's history has been a series of successes wone by the narrowest margins. He was three times elected governor of Ohio, once by 7,000 majority, once by 5,500, and once by 2,800. Now he has been elected President by one majority of the electoral vote, under rulings made by one majority of the Electoral Commission, and the result was declared only two days before the time for the inauguration. Moreover, the majority of one of his electors was less than one hundred. "'Tis not as deep as a well, nor so wide as a church door, but 'tis enough—'twill serve."

WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL

DISEASES OF THE THROAT AND LUNGS, DYSPEPSIA, GRAVEL, PILES, URINARY TROUBLES, NERVOUS DEBILITY, PALPITATION OF THE HEART, TORPIDITY OF THE LIVER, CONSTIPATION, SCROFULOUS AFFECTIONS, AND FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

For nearly a quarter of a century this sterling preparation has been effecting cures of the various diseases to which it is adapted, and thousands of persons, of perfect reliability, in all classes of society have borne evidence to its wondrous remedial efficacy.

As a remedy for diseases of the Throat and Lungs it has achieved a popularity rivalled by that of few proprietary remedies. Experience has shown that for those who are troubled with weakness of the Lungs it is the best possible protective against Consumption, and it may be relied on with certainty to eradicate Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup, Diptheria, and Soreness of the Chest.

Coughs of the most obstinate kind are speedily overcome by it, and since a simple cough is very prone to develop into serious inflammation of the Lungs, the early use of Dr. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL is earnestly recommended, as it favorably prevents the further progress of the disease.

Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Torpidity of the Liver and of the Kidneys are promptly overcome by this superb vegetable corrective, which not only regulates but strengthens the organs of digestion, as well as those of the urinary and biliary secretions. It imparts unwonted relish for the food, and, by promoting digestion and assimilation, enriches the blood, which is the natural motor of vital energy and nutriment to the system.

Dr. L. O. C. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial thoroughly regulates the Bowels, removes Blind and Bleeding Piles, banishes from the circulation dropsical and all other impurities, and effectually counteracts a tendency to Gravel. It also entirely obviates the weaknesses incident to females.

Dr. L. O. C. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial is no mere placebo. It is a standard medicine, and has been repeatedly recognized as such by the press and members of the medical profession, who emphatically endorse the popular verdict long since rendered in its favor.

Sold by Druggists everywhere.

PATTERNS DOMESTIC

INAUGURAL.

President Hayes Finally Inducted Into Office—An Immense Crowd in Attendance—A Fine Display and a Brilliant Assemblage at the Capitol—The Inaugural Address in Full.

The inauguration of President Hayes was accomplished at the National Capitol on the 5th. The procession was an imposing one. The ride from the White House to the Capitol was an ovation, the assembled multitude cheering in the most enthusiastic manner, and the President responding by frequently lifting his hat and bowing. The inaugural address was delivered from the eastern front of the Capitol building in the presence of an immense concourse of people. A space of ground 1,000 feet long by 700 wide was thoroughly packed. The following is the President's inaugural:

FELLOW-CITIZENS:—We have assembled to repeat the public ceremonial begun in Washington, observed in all my predecessors, and now a time honored custom, which marks the commencement of a new term in the Presidential office. Called to the office of the great trust, I proceed, in compliance with usage, to address some of the leading thoughts that now chiefly engage public attention, to which it is my desire to be guided in the discharge of those duties. I shall not undertake to lay down irrevocably principles or measures of Administration, but rather to speak of the motives which should animate me and to suggest certain important ends to be attained in accordance with or institutions and essential to the welfare of our country.

ITS LETTER OF ACCEPTANCE.

At the out set of the discussions which preceded the recent Presidential election, it seemed to me fitting that I should fully make known my sentiments in regard to several of the important questions which then appeared to be unsettled. Accordingly, in a letter of acceptance of the nomination declared in substance my approval of the Constitution as it is, of the Union of the States, and of the permanency of both as they are, and in my judgment it is desirable that the powers granted by the Constitution to the General Government, the limitations of those powers, and the manner in which they should be exercised, should be clearly defined by an amendment. It must be regarded as the expression of the settled views and will of the country upon questions subject, and both political parties are virtually pledged to give it their unreserved support.

The President of the United States, of necessity, occupies a large space in the public mind. Platforms are read and declared to be binding upon him as the representative of a political party. The mottoes of political hosts of earnest workers, and regard as of controlling power, the principles of their party organization. But he serves one constituency, the whole people, who have chosen him as their guide in the path of duty, as they understand it, for the whole term for which he is elected. He is thenceforward to be the representative of no party, but of the entire country. Nor is he to be unmindful of the fact that the effectual support of the policy of his Administration depends upon co-operation of those who may not have favored his election. In these circumstances, and remembering that one of the greatest dangers of our free institutions is the violence of political contests, and intensity of partisan animosities, I am disposed to make the occasion of this my first official appearance before you my declaration of principles which will govern me in the discharge of official duties. I shall not undertake to lay down irrevocably principles or measures of Administration, but rather to speak of the motives which should animate me and to suggest certain important ends to be attained in accordance with or institutions and essential to the welfare of our country.

THE LETTER OF ACCEPTANCE.

At the out set of the discussions which preceded the recent Presidential election, it seemed to me fitting that I should fully make known my sentiments in regard to several of the important questions which then appeared to be unsettled. Accordingly, in a letter of acceptance of the nomination declared in substance my approval of the Constitution as it is, of the Union of the States, and of the permanency of both as they are, and in my judgment it is desirable that the powers granted by the Constitution to the General Government, the limitations of those powers, and the manner in which they should be exercised, should be clearly defined by an amendment. It must be regarded as the expression of the settled views and will of the country upon questions subject, and both political parties are virtually pledged to give it their unreserved support.

The President of the United States, of necessity, occupies a large space in the public mind. Platforms are read and declared to be binding upon him as the representative of a political party. The mottoes of which clerks with zeal and regard as of controlling power, the principles of their party organization. But he serves one constituency, the whole people, who have chosen him as their guide in the path of duty, as they understand it, for the whole term for which he is elected. He is thenceforward to be the representative of no party, but of the entire country. Nor is he to be unmindful of the fact that the effectual support of the policy of his Administration depends upon co-operation of those who may not have favored his election. In these circumstances, and remembering that one of the greatest dangers of our free institutions is the violence of political contests, and intensity of partisan animosities, I am disposed to make the occasion of this my first official appearance before you my declaration of principles which will govern me in the discharge of official duties. I shall not undertake to lay down irrevocably principles or measures of Administration, but rather to speak of the motives which should animate me and to suggest certain important ends to be attained in accordance with or institutions and essential to the welfare of our country.

THE SECRET POLITICAL CONTEST.

Fellow-citizens, we have reached the close of a political contest marked with the excitement which usually attends the contests between great political parties, whose members espouse and advocate with earnest faith their respective creeds. The circumstances were, perhaps, in no respect extraordinary save in the closeness and the consequent uncertainty of the result.

THE SUPREME TRIBUNAL AND THE PRESIDENCY.

For the first time in the history of the country, it has been deemed best, in view of the peculiar circumstances of the case, that all questions and questions in dispute with reference to the counting of the Electoral votes should be referred to the decision of a tribunal appointed for this purpose. That tribunal, established by law for this sole purpose, its members, all of them, of long established reputation for integrity and for impartiality, and with the exception of those who are also members of the Supreme Judiciary, occupying seats on the bench of that judiciary, its deliberations enlightened by the research and the arguments of able counsel, was entitled to the fullest confidence of the American people. Its decisions have been patiently waited for and accepted as legally conclusive by the general judgment of the public. For the present, opinion will widely vary as to the wisdom of the several conclusions announced by that tribunal. This is to be anticipated in every instance where matters of dispute are made the subject of arbitration under the form of law. Human judgment is never unerring, and is rarely regarded as otherwise than wrong by the unsuccessful party to the contest. The fact that two great political parties have in this way settled a dispute in regard to which good men differ as to the law so leaves as to the proper course to be pursued in solving the question in controversy, is an occasion for general rejoicing. Upon one point there is entire unanimity of public sentiment—that conflicting claims to the Presidency must be amicably and peaceably adjusted, and that when so adjusted the general acquiescence of the Nation ought surely to follow.

It has been reserved for a Government of the people, where the right of suffrage is universal, to give to the world the first example in history of a great Nation in the midst of a struggle of opposing parties for power, hushing its party tumults to yield the issue of the contest to adjustment according to the forms of law.

CONCILIATION.

Looking for lie guidance of that Divine Hand by which the destinies of Nations and individuals are shaped, I call upon you, Senators, Representatives, Judges, fellow-citizens, here and everywhere, to unite with me in an earnest effort to secure to our country the blessing not only of material prosperity, but of justice, peace and union.

—a Union depending not upon the constraints of force, but upon the loving devotion of a free people, and that all things may be so ordered and settled upon the best and surest foundation, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and liberty, may be established among us for all generations.

VICE PRESIDENT WHEELER'S REMARKS.

The following remarks were made by Vice President Wheeler before taking the oath of office in the Senate Chamber:

SENATORS: Official station now brings with it the oath I am about to take will impose on me. As President of the Senate, it is my duty to preside over your deliberations, and in an official capacity, and the oath which the oath I am about to take will impose on me. As President of the Senate, it is my duty to preside over your deliberations, and in an official capacity, and the personal character remained untarnished and the performance of his duties was satisfactory. They held that appointments to office were not to be made or expected merely as a reward for partisan services, nor merely on the nomination of Members of Congress as being entitled in any respect to the control of such appointments. The fact that both political parties are virtually pledged to give it their unreserved support.

The President of the United States, of necessity, occupies a large space in the public mind. Platforms are read and declared to be binding upon him as the representative of a political party. part of the country, for the improvement of the intellectual and moral condition of the people. Universal suffrage should rest upon universal education. To this end a liberal and permanent provision should be made for the support of free schools by State governments, and, if need be, supplemented by legitimate aid from the National authority.

Let me assure my countrymen of the Southern States that it is my earnest desire to regard and promote their truest interests—the interests of the white and of the colored people, both equally and unselfishly, and my best efforts in behalf of a civil policy which will forever wipe out in our political affairs the color line and the distinction between the North and South, to the end that we may have not merely a united North or a united South, but a united country.

CIVIL-SERVICE REFORM.

I ask the attention of the public to the paramount necessity of reform in our civil service, a reform not merely as to certain abuses and practices of so-called official patronage, which have come to have the sanction of usage in several departments of our Government, but a change of the system of appointment itself—a reform that shall be thorough, radical and complete. This is the pledge and the practice of the founders of the Government. They neither expected nor desired from public officers any partisan service; they meant that public offices should be the reward for fidelity and service to the Government and to the people; they meant that the officer should be secure in the tenure of office who was not to be made or expected merely as a reward for partisan services, nor merely on the nomination of Members of Congress as being entitled in any respect to the control of such appointments. The fact that both political parties are virtually pledged to give it their unreserved support.

The President of the United States, of necessity, occupies a large space in the public mind. Platforms are read and declared to be binding upon him as the representative of a political party. Report of the Congressional Committee on Chinese Immigration.

The report of the Joint Special Committee to investigate Chinese immigration, after referring to the resolution creating it, says:

In conducting the investigation required by the resolutions, the Joint Committee visited the Pacific Coast and examined the witnesses. In conducting this examination the Committee divided their work so as to deal first with persons opposed to the unlimited introduction of Chinese, and to this branch of the subject a limited time was given. They then heard the testimony of persons favorable to such introduction, and extended the hearings during four for witnesses is colonial. In the opinion of the Committee, it may be said that the resources of California and the Pacific Coast have been more rapidly developed with the employment under labor of Chinese than they would have been without their presence. So far as material prosperity is concerned, it cannot be doubted that the Pacific Coast has been a prodigious gainer by the influx of the capitalist classes. If the inquiry should stop there, it should be satisfied by the certainty that the money is made out of the present condition of things, and look to the property of future moral or political welfare of our Pacific States, it must be considered, in the light of the testimony and their fixed habit in Chinese immigration, and the general sentiment of the Pacific States being largely developed by means of Chinese labor.

The Committee are of opinion, including men and women, without exception, were opposed to the influx of Chinese, on the ground of their moral and social habits, and they are thereby thrown out of employment, and the masses of decent Hoodlumism and prostitution.

But the opposition to the introduction of Chinese immigration was not confined to labouring and mechanic classes. In the testimony will be found that of lawyers, doctors, merchants, manufacturers, and others in large numbers, speaking of their own observation and belief, that the apparent prosperity derived from the presence of Chinese is deceptive and unwholesome in its influences upon the material interests of the country, promotive of caste, and dangerous in its institutions to the general welfare. In their investigations the Committee called before them the municipal authorities of San Francisco, including the Mayor, Superintendent of Public Schools, Health and Police Departments, to ascertain the numbers, habits and condition of the Chinese in that city. The chief of Police, who has been in office for several years, stated in reply to the question that during a year, about as many Chinese left San Francisco as arrived there. The testimony of the Superintendent of Public Schools was to the effect that the Chinese population was rapidly increasing, and that the children of the Chinese were not received together in the public schools with white children. The Health Officer testified that the Chinese were filthy in their habits and personal appearance, and that they were a source of disease and contagion. The Committee also examined the Chief Justice of the State, the prosecuting officer of the county, and the Judge of the Police Court, and examined his testimony. In considering

INAUGURAL.

President Hayes Finally Inducted into Office An Immense Crowd in Attendance—A Fine Display and a Brilliant Assemblage at the Capitol The Inaugural Address in Full.

The inauguration of President Hayes was accomplished at the National Capitol on the 5th. The procession was an imposing one. The ride from the White House to the Capitol was an ovation, the assembled multitude cheering in the most enthusiastic manner, and the President responding by frequently lifting his hat and bowing. The inaugural address was delivered from the eastern front of the Capitol building in the presence of an immense concourse of people. A space of ground 1,000 feet long by 300 wide was thoroughly packed. The following is the President's inaugural:

FELLOW-CITIZENS: We have assembled to repeat the public ceremonial begun in Washington, observed by all my predecessors, and now a time-honored custom, which marks anew a fine historical epoch. It is the manifest duty of the President-elect, before the duties of the great trust I proceed, in compliance with usage, to announce some of the leading principles on the subjects that now chiefly engage public attention, by which it is my purpose to be guided in the discharge of those duties. I shall not undertake to lay down irrevocably principles or measure of Administration, but rather to speak of the motives which should influence, and to suggest certain important ends to be attained in accordance with our institutions and essential for the welfare of our country.

DUTIES AND SPIRIT OF ACCEPTANCE.

At the end of this long contest, which preceded the recent Presidential election, it seemed to me fitting that I should fully make known my sentiments in regard to several of the important questions which then appeared to demand the consideration of the country. Following the example, and in part the language, of the most distinguished of my predecessors, I declare, when every motive for misrepresentation has passed away, in regard to what was said in the excited meeting that my countrymen will candidly weigh the statements which I then made, and the motives and circumstances in the midst of which I spoke. I repeat my belief that the right of each State to order and control its own domestic affairs, including the regulation of its elective franchise, is complete and perfect, and that any violation of this right is a flagrant wrong. With respect to the two distinct recognitions of particular questions to each other here to-night I have only to say that while the difficulties which exist in those States, it must be a grave error with any who love their country's welfare to make them the occasion of new discord and division by mingling with them any appeals to passion or prejudice. Finally, I deem it proper to say that if it shall be my duty to assume the Executive office of the United States, I shall do so unpledged to any policy except that which I shall believe to be required by the Constitution, enlightened by the experience of the Administrations that have gone before me, and guided by the fresh counsels of the future. Nor shall I be disposed to shrink from any responsibility which may be fairly devolved upon me by the choice of my fellow-citizens.

THE SOUTH.

Many of the calamitous effects of the tremendous revolution which has passed over the Southern States still remain. The immeasurable benefits which will surely follow, sooner or later, the hearty and generous acceptance of the legitimate results of that revolution have not yet been realized. Difficult and embarrassing questions meet us at the very threshold of this subject. The people of these States are still impoverished, and the inestimable blessing of wise, honest, and peaceful local self-government is not fully enjoyed. Whatever differences of opinion may exist as to the cause of this condition of things, the fact is undoubted, as the progress of armies, the ravages of war, and the waste of labor and property incident to such a condition of affairs

By Southern press, with the exception [illegible] speak favorably of Rutherford B. Hayes' Inaugural as [illegible] in a promise of better things [illegible] section. If we have an accurate conception of the Southern policy of the new Administration, of paramount importance to ignore and destroy the "bloody line" which so long has been the bane of politics in the South, giving vent to nearly all the difficulties in that section since the close of the war.

False Impression.

It is generally supposed by a certain class of citizens, who are not practical or experienced, that Dyspepsia can not invariably be cured, but we are pleased to say that GREEN'S August Flower has never, to our knowledge, failed to cure Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint in all its forms, such as Sour Stomach, Costiveness, Sick Headache, palpitation of the Heart, low spirits, &c., &c. Out of 30,000 dozen bottles sold last year, not a single failure was reported, but thousands of complimentary letters received from Druggists of wonderful cures. Three doses will relieve any case. Try it. Sample Bottles 10 cents. Regular Size 75 cents. For sale by Good Advice.

Now is the time of year for Pneumonia, Lung Fever, &c. Every family should have a bott e of Boerike's German Syrup. Don't allow for one moment that cough to take hold of your child, your family or yourself. Consumption, Asthma, Pneumonia, Croup, Hemorrhages, and other fatal diseases may set in. Although it is true German Syrup is curing thousands of these dreaded diseases, yet it is much better to have it on hand when three doses will cure you. One Bottle will last your whole family a winter and keep you safe from danger. If you are consumptive, do not rest until you have tried this remedy. Sample Bottles 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. Sold by your Druggist.

POLITICAL.

The Rhode Island Democratic State Convention was held at Providence on the 9th, Charles H. Van Zandt was chosen as Chairman; Albert C. Howard, for Lieutenant Governor; J. H. Adams, as for secretary of State; Warren R. Carter, for Attorney-General, and Robert Grieve, for General Treasurer. With the exception of Treasurer, the nominations are the same as the Republican ticket. Mr. Perry is on the Democratic ticket.

It was announced in Washington on the 13th inst. at the Cabinet meeting just due, a committee of two candidates, Messrs. Foster and Sherman, was appointed to report to-morrow upon the adoption of the different Departments.

The Nebraska Legislature, on the 12th, adopted a resolution accepting the Thirteenth section of the Statutes as a happy augury for the future," and declaring that "this Legislature will earnestly co-operate with President Hayes in every effort to restore confidence and fraternal relations among the whole people of this great country." Gov. Dorkard approved concurrently at the State House attending to such business as may before him. He stated to a reporter on the 12th, that he had no fault confidence so very in the final success of his Government, but that he was "annoyed at the persistency with which the most glaring misstatements are repeated, even by journals well informed."

The majority of the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections—Mr. Morton, Chairman—have decided to make a report favorable to the claims of Wm. Pitt Kellogg to the Senatorship from Louisiana, but it was thought on the 13th, that the report would not be made at the present session of the Senate.

The election in New Hampshire, on the 13th, resulted in the re-election of Prescott Bigelow, for Governor by about 3,000 majority. The returns received up to the morning of the 14th indicated that two of the three Congressmen elected were Republicans, with the third in doubt.

At a caucus of the Republican members of the Pennsylvania Legislature, on the 13th, ex-Secretary of War Cameron was nominated for United States Senate, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of his father, Simon Cameron.

Reports on the morning of the 14th from the election in the Ninth Georgia Congressional district, to succeed a successor to Mr. Hill, who had been elected to the United States Senate, were meager, but the indications were that Bell, regular Democratic nominee, was elected by a fair majority over Slaton, Independent Democrat, and Archer, regular Republican.

A Charleston (S. C.) telegram says the question of the conflicting claims of Hampton and Chamberlain to the Governorship came up in the Circuit Court, on the 15th, as involving the invalidity of a commitment by a Trial Justice appointed by Gov. Hampton. Judge Reed decided that the authority of the Trial Justice must be respected as that of a de facto and de jure officer of State. This decision invalidates the legality of the Hampton Government as to the Charleston Circuit. The other Circuit Judges throughout the state had already made similar decisions.

A Washington dispatch of the 14th says that, owing to the pressure of applicants for office at the White House and the Departments, several Secretaries were already exhausted. Postmaster-General Key had issued a circular to be prepared for transmission to every applicant in his Department to the effect that the application would be considered under the rules of the civil service, when vacancies should occur, but no vacancies exist at present.

Ex-Senator Patterson of South Carolina accompanied his ex-Congressman Wallace, called on President Hayes on the 14th, and protested against Senator Patterson's proposition for a new election, on the ground that the substantial or influential citizens of South Carolina would be materially damaged by such election. It was further stated by the President that none of the Republican members of that State had been consulted on the subject, and therefore, it was in the nature of an ex-parte proposition on the part of Senator Patterson, stimulated, perhaps, by Gov. Chamberlain. It was stated in Washington on the 14th, that the Democratic members of Congress from Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Florida and South Carolina were opposed to a new Congressional election, and that the President would not encourage such action unless both parties favored the proposition. The Administration had not matured any plan. It was further stated that it seemed to be agreed by conservative men that the action of Governor Chamberlain should go over without discussion to the next session of Congress.

Judge Bayley of South Carolina had a brief interview with President Hayes on the 15th and read him a telegram from Gov. Hampton in which the Governor said the president would not be embarrassed by the action of the State and its counsel. The governor stated that he did not wish to be misquoted, now he desired was that the President should not be misled. Judge Bayley then left the White House. The impression was that the Democratic people of the State would be content to let matters remain as they are.

The session of Hon. John Sherman as United States Senator from Ohio was received by the Governor of that State, and sent to the General Assembly, on the 19th.

The election in Rhode Island, on the 14th, resulted in the re-election of Presidential Elector by about 2,000 majority. The returns received up to the morning of the 15th indicated that two of the three Congressmen elected were Republicans, with the third in doubt.

Advices from Indiana, state of carnage with President Hayes announced the defeat of Democratic.

Among the nominations sent to the Senate on the 16th by President Hayes were that of Postmaster Pendleton to be United States Marshal of the District of Columbia.

A STAR BEHIND THE CLOUD.

No matter how dark the night,
No matter how black the clouds may be,
Up in the eternal sky
Hidden from watchful eye,
A many the starring silence bright,
Gladdens a star for me.

Silvery bright and clear,
Cool as its faithful fashion blue,
Heralding cloud and storm,
Instinct of safety and peace,
Golden source of their every splendor
Inside and from for you.

A SHREWD DETECTIVE.

"I'll bet we'll eat, some time, sure!" ex-claimed Daniel Wonder to a fast lumber as he laid down a paper from which he had just been reading about a case of mysterious murder, the particulars of which had been discovered after years of mistrust and confusion. "I have been a time no-tonic in it. It is according to the laws of Nature, and must be so, it not right or, they be said to; it can't be that, be-hapless, and they, then a year, ten, fifty, perhaps a hundred years hence. For minute and the murderer are sure to come out. If I was on a plank above with a man in the middle of the ocean, and was to murder him and sink him, well, no ship in sight—I don't—I'd safe! Some time or other something would bring me out. If I did a bad of myself, asleep or awake, I believe I would rise, or—"

"Or the spirit?" suggested some-body.

"No. I don't believe in spirits—but in no sense. Bodies on the plank or it in no-ght be somebody was looking at me from a ship out of sight, through a powerful spyglass, or perhaps from an-other plank, or perhaps happening to pass by overhead in a silk balloon, and so me be it—and so I should feel sure I was not safe until at last I was led out to be hung. You see there is al-ways a chain of evidence between the murderer and the murdered. It may have a link or two lost, it may be broken into many separate links; but in time man picks up one link here, an-other link there, another, another, and soon, until all the links are found and put together, and they are strong enough to hang the man."

"It does seem so," said one of the listeners, in thoughtful awe.

"Seems so! It is so! I always know that murder will out, and have seen many singular cases of it. But the most singular case I ever heard of was the fate of Paul Piera, of Mossrock, a clerk in a dry goods store, and so covered up, according to the report, that no evidence was supposed to be left of it. He was unexpectedly missed one day, and his body was not found till three years afterward. Peo-ple gave up all hopes of hearing about the poor fellow, how he came to his death, or where, or what for, or who or where his murderer was, until a traveler came to Mossrock, and hear-ing of the murder of Paul Piera, he undertook to find the body, or at least the real criminal, and bring him to justice. This traveler's name was Solomon Foxpaw, and he prided him-self on his detective powers—his pen-etration and perseverance—and he had a restless, rolling, staring, snappy kind of eye that seemed to take in every-thing about him at a glance. People-wished him success, but they didn't expect it. Yet he didn't care for what they expected. He set to work to find some links for a chain of evidence."

"But I don't see——"

"You can't see anything yet. You must wait and see. Solomon Foxpaw made inquiries for a month, and ascer-tained just about nothing which would lead to the first link. He then sat down and reflected alone for three days, and finally said to himself: 'Here is a piece of wonder-ful news, and Paul Piera was said to be poorly. What more likely than he should walk in the woods for his health—and there be murdered?'"

"To be sure! What, indeed?"

"With this idea, Sol, without say-ing a word to anybody—because in-terested interruption as bad as I do—walks out alone into the woods, and kicks about among the dry leaves, and examines the ground, and the rocks and the trees, with strong sus-picion."

"To find a clew?"

"Why, of course, to find a clew."

"But I don't see——"

"You never will see, if you don't wait and follow its idea. He pretty soon found various letters, carved on various trees—initials of names, per-haps—and among them all at last he discovered, on a tree by themselves, the letters 'I. F.'"

"Perilous Place, I suppose."

"Perilous Place, you suppose! No, Paul Piera he supposed; for he knew what to suppose. 'He certainly cut those letters,' Foxpaw felt convinced, 'and he put down 'P. P.' as his first link.

"Now,' says he, 'I've got some-thing to work on, and he fell energe-tically. Looking about him a little sharper, as if Providence had directed him, he found a rusty jackknife, which had had ten blades. It had three now; had had ten blades. It had three now; a big one, a little one, and a saw blade. The horn was gone; but he felt a conviction that this knife was a second link, and he put it in his pocket. Looking about still further he saw a crack.

"Heard a crack."

"No! Saw a crack—a wide crack between some rocks. Something sud-denly told him there was a cave there, and that he would find the body of Paul Piera in that cave, a very cavern-ous cave—and he went and borrowed a spade, entered, and dug for several hours, till he struck something hard."

"A bar, containing the bones of Paul."

"No. It thoughtless, at first; but a pause it to be nothing but solid rock. It had here and he dug there—but all was rock, and now, being much tired, he paused, and began to suspect he was on the wrong scent. A less reso-lute man would have despaired, but Solomon Foxpaw, all day in an-other direction, and began to search for a new clew."

"But I don't see——"

"You can't see anything yet. You must wait and see. Solomon Foxpaw made inquiries for a month, and ascer-tained just about nothing which would lead to the first link. He then sat down and reflected alone for three days, and finally said to himself: 'Here is a piece of wonder-ful news, and Paul Piera was said to be poorly. NEWS OF THE WEEK.

FOREIGN.

In London on the 15th, Sir Lingard Belcher died and was buried below. He recommended the last expedition sent out in search of Sir John Franklin in 1850.

According to a Peru telegram of the 19th an obstinate battle had taken place between the municipal garrisons and the Turks near Huancayo in which both sides suffered heavily. The Turks were finally compelled to retire.

The Turkish Parliament met at Constantinople on the 19th. The Sultan opened its session in person, and a speech was read from the throne.

Five companies of Turkish troops under arms, according to late investigations, in Bulgaria, were removed from Constantinople on the 20th, that city. Bombs had dropped and occasioned the international proceedings were witnessed.

A Vienna dispatch of the 21st says the Montenegrin troops are concentrating on the frontier, with a view to the speedy reenforcement of hostilities.

According to an Odessa dispatch of the 21st, an English steamer, from New Haven for Constantinople, laden with arms and ammunition, had been lost at sea.

A label fire occurred at Berlin, on the 21st. Laborers from Posen, who were working on the tramway at less rates than the Berliners would accept, were attacked by the latter and other causes necessary to overthrow a compound of history to repel the attack. Several of the rioters were badly hurt.

The armistice between the Porte and Montenegro has been prolonged until April 1.

According to a Berlin dispatch of the 23d, the commercial crisis in Germany was daily growing worse, and disturbances were increasing with aggravated rapidity.

A Paris telegram of the 23d says an Anglo-American banker recently offered Bismarck a loan of 20,000,000 marks at eight per cent., but the negotiations had thereby through Bismarck's refusal to consult the German Parliament and his consequent resignation of the Chancellorship.

DOMESTIC.

The Mutual Union of Detroit has commenced the issue of Bank of Montreal checks in Illinois currency.

The Indian in a sawmill, owned by Hosmer Brothers, six miles east of Wauwatosa, Ind., exploded on the 15th, killing one man and severely injuring several. Seven persons were injured and seven others escaped.

A man named Christian Bangs was arrested in New York City, on the charge of having stolen the money from the person of Judge Hilton, of that city, while the latter was lying in a state of drunkenness. Bangs had taken pains before the arrest to make himself scarce, and was found in a hotel in Jersey City.

Senator Morton, on the 17th formally declined the chairmanship of the United States Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and the position was filled by Mr. Hamlin, who accepted. Mr. Ferry was then made Chairman of the Postal Committee.

The Lexington Republican State Central Committee met in session at New Orleans on the 18th, and—22 to 1—in consideration with a resolution adopted at a previous meeting, to expel Mr. P. B. S. Pinchback from the committee. A. Dumont was their elected President of the Committee.

A delegation of prominent colored men, consisting of Robert Purvis, of Philadelphia; Fred Douglass, John F. Cook, D. Charles B. Purvis, Charles H. Fenn, and others, of Washington, called upon President Hayes on the 20th and tendered their thanks for the appointment of Mr. Douglass as Marshal of the District of Columbia.

Insurance matters still the excited in New York City, on the 20th by the report that A. Oakey Hall, ex-Mayor had mysteriously disappeared and had not been seen since the 17th. It was thought by some that he had sailed for Europe, others feared he might have committed suicide, while a few of his friends connected suddenness with the supposed disappearance, and thought he might have been murdered.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, March 25, 1877.

Our latest wonder in the social scrap paracee still mysterious absence of Abbey Hall whom most of you readers know by name that being the title of Mayor of the city during the days of the Ring and was the only prominent member of the city government of the time who was able to withdraw himself from the embrace of fraud and there are those who still flat associates vow Lavin Since the close of his official term Mr. Hall has been one of the most successful lawyers in New York. Always devoted to the dramatic art and professing for one year to have finished the public to the attitude prior, appearing at the Park Theatre as the principal character in his own play of "The Gambler's Wife" soon after the ex Mayor created a sensation, and the house was crowded by the most brilliant audience that ever had ever held. Two weeks after every one viewed him that he was neither a Booth, a Forrest or a Jefferson, and remarking the stage so suddenly as he had all right, he returned to his law practice which he seems no longer ready to leave de serted.

For a week no theatre of the minor sort have been ready to lend the countenance of evil to those of its disciples who like to have a good time in New York to enjoy it. It is thought as a fact that Mr. Hall's vanishing act may be in some way connected with the recent arrival of Sweeny from Europe. It is very being that he does not wish to get mixed up in the scandals which are of late's trial to give this because it is undesirable to be known to have acquaint of everybody long ago. Hints of murder or suicide are freely circulated but there is no foundation for that which is out of reach of speculation of the meeting. And the mystery suggests a reference to the opening inquiry of our correspondent as to New York the number of which grows from year to year. A solution of passing gauge in this way and consequently a covered after one dead, but there are not a surprising number of such to which some man, woman or child drop out daily out of her place and is never heard of more. Most of such cases occur among the lower class and it is only occasionally when the list can be traced and time enough to have a mystery in society as in the case of the most recent to the public attention it draws on our subject. It may give some idea of the importance of the social fabric of such a great cosmical city when I say that during 1876 there were known to have been thirty and four hundred [illegible] Dressed' males in the county which this record. Hardly that it would be an exaggeration many to say that New York a thousand persons annually pass from view, either into oblivion, or else to find some kind of [illegible] to an unrecognizable death and subsequent discovery

It seems a little rough in these hard times when misery is such a drug in the market to get hold of that we should have to take a contribution proposition that is here, but so it is. I do not remember a time when there was so much need for U. S. currency as that in the smaller denominations as at present. Not only the lead halves, quarters and dimes are troublesome, but what bothers us poor newspaper men the most is the counterfeit $1,000 bill which has recently appeared. When one of us gets two or four of them in his weeks wages, it really cripples him a good deal—makes him wear his old hat and smoke cheap cigars for a while. It is earnestly to be hoped for our sakes, that the counterfeit manufacturers of the square, with has this week resolved to [illegible] on a free Elysian grove, will finally capture the fellow who is victimizing us with these notes.

Another presentation which is being vigorously touched by the police just now is that of the policy men and dealers in lottery tickets. The stir upon the case, which is very large, has been excited of without much result for several years, the fellows now having a rule [illegible] of money to bribe and pay fines, but this year has been so hard on them that their treasuries are scarcely equal to the demands for hush money, etc., and so Marriage Customs and Laws.

The importance of regulating marriage has been recognized in all civilized countries. By the laws of Livonia, criminal proceedings might be taken against those who married too late, as well as against those who did not marry at all. Among the Jews marriage is regarded in males at the age of thirteen and a day, in females at twelve and a day.

In the country marriage is, in law, only a civil contract, magistrates as well as clergymen having a right to solemnize. A boy of fourteen or a girl of twelve may marry in Scotland, but in England the parties must be seven years older. In Prussia, no man can marry before twenty-five years of age, and no woman before twenty-one. In Austria, no man can marry before twenty-four years of age, and no woman before twenty-one. In Hungary, the Catholic or Protestant clergyman are required to marry at fourteen, after marriages by civil law. Under canon law, the ages are fourteen and twelve, and minors cannot wed without the father's consent. The civil law also fixes twelve as the earliest age at which a girl may marry. Men cease to be minors at twenty-four and women at sixteen. A minor's marriage without paternal consent, is still not valid. In Italy, the legal marriage ages are the usual standard, being fifteen in males and sixteen in females. In England, the age is exceptional in males. In Norway, no lord of age is required. In Sweden, it is twenty-one for males and fifteen in females. In the Netherlands, fifteen is the age of males and twelve for females. In Portugal, fourteen for males and twelve for females. In Prussia, eighteen for males and fourteen for females, and in Bavaria law male marriage merely a civil contract, like the issuing of a license. In Denmark, fifteen is the age for males and fifteen for females. In Saxony, the limits of age are eighteen for males and sixteen for females; in Spain, fourteen for males and twelve for females. In Switzerland, the limits vary from fourteen to twenty for males and twelve to eighteen for females, according to the Cantonal and other laws. In Turkey, there is no age limitation. In Wurtemberg, the limit is fixed at twenty-one for males and fourteen for females. In Russia, the legal marriage ages are eighteen and sixteen. There are exceptions, however, for the natives of Caucasus may marry the males at fifteen and the females at thirteen; and in some special cases the Russian bishop of the province can authorize a marriage six months before the period allowed by law, either for the male or the female. In the Grand Duchy of Finland, which is part of the Russian Territory, no marriage is allowed to be contracted without supreme authority, before the age of twenty-one for males and fifteen for females, except for peasants engaged in service in the navy, or those having any fixed trade or occupation, who are allowed to marry at the ages of eighteen for males and fourteen for females. In the principal Oriental countries, Turkey in Asia, Arabia, Persia, British India, Siam, Birmah, Ava, and in fact all over the East, where maturity is sooner attained, the nuptial period is at what, with us, is an infantile age. Girls or eight or nine are frequently married to youths of twelve. The result is that there often may be seen grandchildren of twenty-two, who look as old at that age as European and well-to-do American women dread at fifty-five. Usually with the ancient inhabitants of the East, the bride was obtained by presents to her relatives rendered to her parents in practice which still prevails in some parts of this region.

In the Old Testament history we find mentioned marriages of the wealthy at first sight. The Israelitish nations avoided these attacks forbidden by Moses naturally.

Plurality of wives was allowed by Moses, and no term of trial by Lycurgus, and divorce became, of course, very frequent. Polygamy is also said, other marriages by civil law. Under canon law, the ages are fourteen and twelve, and minors cannot wed without the father's consent. The civil law also fixes twelve as the earliest age at which a girl may marry. Men cease to be minors at twenty-four and women at sixteen. A minor's marriage without paternal consent, is still not valid. In Wurtemberg, the limit is fixed at twenty-one for males and fourteen for females. In Russia, the legal marriage ages are eighteen and sixteen. There are exceptions, however, for the natives of Caucasus may marry the males at fifteen and the females at thirteen; and in some special cases the Russian bishop of the province can authorize a marriage six months before the period allowed by law, either for the male or the female. In the Grand Duchy of Finland, which is part of the Russian Territory, no marriage is allowed to be contracted without supreme authority, before the age of twenty-one for males and fifteen for females, except for peasants engaged in service in the navy, or those having any fixed trade or occupation, who are allowed to marry at the ages of eighteen for males and fourteen for females. A Romantic Slugger-Robber.

The Galveston (Texas) News says that a few weeks ago the Gillespie County (Texas) Mounted Rifles captured one Donallo and three other Mexicans who had robbed a mail party between Austin and Fredericksburg. On the person of Donallo was found an unopened letter, which stamps him as one of the romantic and sentimental sort of robbers read of in dime novels. The young man will have to serve five years in the Penitentiary before he can lay his fortune at the feet of gentle Anna Parsons and claim her hand. His loving epistle reads thus:

Miss Anna Parsons.

"DEAR DARLING—'Tis with pleasure that I seat myself on the banks of Idaho River a beautiful strong flipping its way through the Western firmament and on each side as far as the eye can behold is Mountains and prairies with vast herds of buffalo from the hoary old bull down to the baby calf. Though, dear Anna, I am surrounded with the beauties of nature, I am without one of the greatest blessings, and that is your company. Were you to be with me I would be happy indeed. Dear Anna, I am a Romantic young man and am possessed of a fine constitution, and am willing to undergo any hardships for your sake

PERSONAL.

THE Mormon John D. Lee was shot, on the 23d, upon the scene of the Mountain Meadows massacre, for his participation in that horrible crime in 1857. Before his execution, he wrote what purports to be a full and true history of the horrible butchery at Mountain Meadows, in which he made just before being shot. Lee declared that he had done nothing designedly wrong in this affair; that he did everything in his power to save all the emigrants, and that his conscience was clear before God and man. Lee's death was instantaneous, five guns being fired, the bullets penetrating the body in the region of the heart.

THE first Monday in June has been set for the trial of Peter B. Sweeny, of the New York Tammany Ring.

EX PRESIDENT GRANT and wife arrived in Cincinnati on the afternoon of the 25th.

THE Mormon Lee, recently executed for his participation in the Mountain Meadows massacre, left eighteen wives and sixty-four children.

J. C. SWAYZE, editor of the Topeka (Kan.) Blade, was, on the evening of the 27th, shot and killed in a fight on the street with James W. Wilson, formerly of the Daily Times of that city. The difficulty grew out of articles offensive to Wilson published in the Blade.

MISS ALTA M. HULETT, the lady lawyer of Chicago, died in San Diego, Cal., on the 26th, whither she had gone because of poor health. Her disease was consumption. She was twenty-two years of age, and is highly spoken of by the Chicago dailies for her many excellences of character.

A WASHINGTON telegram of the 28th gives the composition of the Commission to visit Louisiana, as follows: Judge C. R. Lawrence, of Illinois, ex-Gov. J. C. Brown, of Tennessee; Gen. Joseph R. Hawley, Connecticut; Gen. John M. Harlan, of Kentucky, and Wayne McVeagh, of Pennsylvania.

POLITICAL.

A RECENT Washington dispatch says the roll of the lame ducks of the Forty-fifth Congress, as reported by the Clerk, shows a membership of 158 Republicans and 151 Democrats, two seats in Louisiana being doubtful, but which would probably be decided in favor of the Democratic claimants. Eight seats will be contested in Republican and three by Democratic districts. John M. Harlan, of Kentucky, and Wayne McVeagh, of Pennsylvania.

THE Pennsylvania Legislature adjourned sine die on the 25th.

THE proposition to amend the Constitution so as allow women to vote where taxed has been defeated—25 to 22—in the Rhode Island House of Representatives.

THERE was much conversation in Washington, on the 25th, about written pledges said to have been given by President Hayes to closest friends and advisers, during the progress of the Electoral count, to certain Democrats. The facts are said to be, as substance, that Senator Gordon, before the completion of the count, went, in company with John Young Brown, of Kentucky, to Representatives Foster and Stanley Matthews, of Ohio, and demanded written pledge that the Hampton and Nicholls Governments should not be disturbed, whatever might be the result of the count. It is alleged, and denied, that some such pledges in writing were given by Matthews and Foster.

A WASHINGTON Associated Press dispatch of the 26th says, concerning the alleged assurances of the President to Southern gentlemen, involving the withdrawal of the troops from the Capitols of Louisiana and South Carolina: "There was authority for saying that the President had given no assurance of immediate action on that subject.

SECRETARY SHERMAN issued regulations, on the 26th, by which the appointment and employment of persons in the Treasury Department are to be governed. First—No greater number of persons will be employed than is warranted by the actual demands of the service. Second—No employed can expect an better pay than is allowed in the ordinary walks of life. Third—The heads of bureaus must keep a vigilant eye upon their subordinates, and from time to time as to the needs and efficiency of their various clerges. Fourth —In regards the matter of extra clerk-hire, such extra force must be measured strictly by the necessities of the case, and the tenure of such appointments must be denominated in the contract.

THE Massachusetts State Senate has passed a resolution providing for a Constitutional amendment to be submitted to the voters of the State granting to women the right to vote at all elections.

PERRY H. SMITH (Dem.) and Monroe Heath (Rep. and present incumbent) have been nominated by their respective parties for Mayor of Chicago.

IN the contested election case of Puckett (Dem.) and Wigginton (Dem.), candidates for Congress from the Fourth California District, the Supreme Court of that State, on the 26th, reversed Wigginton's demurrer to Puckett's application for a writ of mandate, commanding the Secretary of State to issue a certificate to Puckett.

MESSRS NICHOLLS AND PACKARD, the rival claimants to the Governorship of Louisiana, issued proclamations on the 26th, in which each claimed to be at the head of a fully organized State Government. Nicholls called on the people to pay their taxes, and Packard announced that the State Treasury refused to recognize Nicholls.

GOV HAMPTON, of South Carolina, accompanied by Senator Gordon, of Georgia, and Attys-Gen. Conner, of South Carolina, had an interview with President Hayes on the 27th. The President had previously had a conference with Gov. Chamberlain. The conversation with Gov. Hampton related primarily to the question as to the probable condition of the State in case the troops should be withdrawn. A committee appointed by the Charleston Chamber of Commerce had an interview with the President in the evening, and read to him an address setting forth the condition of affairs in the State, and alleging that if Hamilton were recognized confidence would be restored, money employed and all trades revived, but if not soon done it would be too late. The interests of the whites and blacks were said to be the same. After some other remarks, the President stated that he had invited Messrs. Hampton and Chamberlain to Washington as persons most likely to be able to give an intelligent statement of affairs, and was confident that a satisfactory solution would be found. It was said to have been positively ascertained, on inquiry at the Executive Mansion in the evening, that there was no truth in a report that the President had directed an order to be issued withdrawing troops from Columbia, and it was further stated, on the same authority, that as both the Governors had been heard, no Executive action would be taken until after the most deliberate consideration.

THE FOSTER-MATTHEWS LETTERS.

Statements by Congressmen John Young Brown and Charles Foster.

The Louisville Courier-Journal of the 29th contains an account of an interview with John Young Brown of Kentucky, in which he explains in detail his part in connection with the Matthews-Foster letter relative to affairs in Louisiana and South Carolina. He says that on the 20th of February he went, in company with Hayes-Tilden Elector Burke, to see Stanley Matthews at his residence in Cincinnati. He found Matthews and Foster there. Matthews introduced Foster to Brown, and the latter then said that he would call at Foster's room in the Burnet House the next morning, as he had something to say to him. Brown called on Foster the next morning, and the latter then said that he had come to consult him about the letter which Foster had written to Matthews. Foster then read the letter to Brown, and asked him what he thought of it. Brown replied that he thought it was a very proper letter, and that he had come to consult him about it. Foster replied that he believed that Mr. Brown then said that he had come to consult him about it. Foster replied that he believed that Mr. Brown was conscientious in his views of duty, and that he believed that the people of the States where there existed governments not chosen by the votes of the majority of the people would soon assert their independence in the final and authentic act as the State of Ohio, in which he was interested, had done in 1803, that the people of Louisiana and South Carolina would soon assert their independence by means of the very same political machinery which Mr. Foster had been using against him. Brown said that he was frank full answer and confidence to Foster's question as to his views of the duty of Democrats in the present emergency, and that he had no doubt that the people of Louisiana and South Carolina would soon assert their independence by the ballot-box, and that they would not submit to the usurpation of power by the Returning Boards. Mr. Foster agreed to give the desired letter, and said he would also write a letter to Matthews and Foster. With regard to the second letter, Foster said that he thought that the Democrats were the whole case, and that Hayes was entitled to it. Brown replied that he could not see how this could be, no doubt about the fairness of the case, but that he could not see it in that light. The letters are as follows:

"WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 26, 1877

"GENTLEMEN: Referring to the conversation had with you at Cincinnati, I say that I have no objection to the statement of certain Southern States as to the existence of frauds in the late election, and to the most public manner of our presentation of the same. I am willing that you shall give such publicity as you may deem proper to the letter which I addressed to you at Cincinnati, and to this letter, which I now write, and I am willing that you shall use the name of any friend in connection with this matter. I am willing that you shall use the name of any friend in connection with this matter. I am willing that you shall use the name of any friend in connection with this matter.

THE SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD & SMITH.

TUESDAY, APRIL 18, 1877.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

New York, April 4, 1877.

As expected, it seems to be all settled to-day that New York is ready, especially to be mistress of ceremonies and of course it is customary to open these ceremonies with a reception by the Chinese Embassy. Accordingly the Chinese Envoy will receive the citizens of New York at the Fifth Avenue Hotel this evening. The Chinese Envoy is a man of much importance in his own country, and is a man of much importance in this country, and is a man of much importance in the world. He is a man of much importance in his own country, and is a man of much importance in this country, and is a man of much importance in the world.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

Without the flattering March winds blow,
Within, around the evening fire,
As twilight fell we closer drew
And prized the blazing beeking higher,
The household group—on me they know
The allotment with their appointments
Looked up and claimed his decree.
"Come, come, children, or, I guess,

Then by the deepest pet to task,
I searched my memory through and through,
Until at last I thought of as
The old rhyme-question, built to woo
"Say, dad so, sugh look pictured,
Tell me, how Happily, I pray!
Which—look you weighs the more—a pound
Of feathers or a pound of lead?

He gave a look, successful laugh
That put my wisdom quite to shame,
As then he—Solomon, to him—
Of course, they both would weigh the same.
Now I know—I have learned it since—
But still I record it upon you if see,
Tell me which weighs the more—a pound
Of feathers or a pound of—

I'm sure, poor Mamma, said I,
A pound of feathers would weigh a lot,
And I know I'd like a pound of lead
One or the other should weigh more."
At which he roared in highest delight;
And when he'd recovered, said kind: "Well, sir,
You'll find out as you grow older,
The feathers are the heaviest.

I learned it all in school to-day,
This sum—you'll find it out to-day,
That some pounds weigh more than others,
And some are but twelve, as you must know,
A pound of feathers, you'll see,
Would weigh quite as much as they're Avoirdupois,
A pound of—would weigh the same
As a pound of sugar or sugar'd to Troy."
For precocious child are we.

I drew the window, looking far
Those down to mine—the golden hair—
I pondered it back, and in its place
I fondly kissed the forehead fair.
"That's right," I said. "More precious far
To me than art, my darling boy,
Than any gold and silver age,
Or costly jewels weighed in Troy."

OVERSHOOTING THE MARK.

BY SUSAN ARCHIE WEISS.

"I really don't see what is to be done," said Mrs. Sutton, as she meditatively folded a letter stamped with a foreign post-mark.

The letter was from Charlie, who was spending his last college vacation in Europe, and who now wrote to announce his speedy return, accompanied by his friend, Mr. Philip Warrington.

Charlie Sutton was evidently very proud to call Mr. Warrington his friend. He had met him in the course of his travels, and always wrote of him as a "splendid fellow, clever, handsome and"—with a view to the special consideration of his mother and sister —"rich, as one of the first families of Boston."

And now, in accordance with his mother's instructions, he had invited his friend to spend a week with them, before going on to his more Southern home, and she must expect them in a few days.

There was one drawback to Mrs. Sutton's satisfaction in this arrangement; and it was to this that her remarks, on closing the letter, referred.

"This will be a capital chance for you, Isabel," she said, addressing her daughter; "and, in fact, the best probably that you will ever have. But it requires more tact than you have yet shown; and, beside, there is Alice, who may easily interfere and spoil all, as she did in the affair of Cat. Sawyer. I really don't see what is to be done as regards Alice."

At the Mr. Sutton's niece, whom he had taken to his home on the death of her parents. She was at that time fifteen, and as her cousin Isabel had just made her entree into society, she was found to be somewhat in the way, and was sent to a boarding-school.

Here she had remained until the past winter, when, being nineteen, it was found positively necessary that she should come home and be introduced into society.

But, unfortunately, as Mrs. Sutton candidly owned, Alice's sweet face, and graceful, winning manners had proven with some persons a greater charm than the solid beauty of the rather stout Isabel, or Cat. Sawyer, in particular, to entrap whom the various mother and daughter plans and employed the whole amount of their talent and energies.

He had, upon seeing Alice, transferred his attentions from Isabel to herself, and had actually proposed to Mr. Sutton for the hand of his niece, instead of that of his daughter.

It made no difference that Alice declined the honor. Isabel had lost her best chance; and, though, of course, her cousin could not be properly blamed in the matter, yet she was "dangerous." And now that another chance was about to offer, in the person of Mr. Warrington, Alice must, in some way or other, be gotten rid of for the time.

That evening, at tea, Mrs. Sutton, after silently hailing the conversation in the proper direction, remarked to her husband:

"By-the-by, my dear, when did you last hear from your Aunt Curtis? I fear that we have of late rather neglected the old lady."

"So I have often told you," returned her husband, who was an exceedingly business man, not so worldly-minded as his wife. "Aunt Curtis was very kind to me when I was a boy, and certainly deserves more attention than I have had time to bestow. She is old and infirm, too, and yet in four years not one of my family have been to see her."

"Why, it is such a lonely, out-of-the-way country-place," returned his wife, "that really to go there seems quite an undertaking. Yet I don't wish to neglect the old lady. She wrote last year that she would like to see the girls, now that they are grown; and Alice's no-her, you know, was her favorite niece. I am sure she would be gratified at a visit from us. Indeed, now that we speak of it, I and the girls may as well run up to Copley Farm for a day or two. What do you say, girls?"

"Let us go, aunt, by all means" was Alice's quick reply. "I should like of see my mother's aunt; and you know it is lovely in the country at this season."

Isabel shrugged her fair shoulders, but prudently said nothing; and on the following day the three ladies were at the quiet, old-fashioned little farmhouse, some twenty miles from the city.

It must necessarily be a rigid visit, for Charlie was expected home—Mrs. Sutton had not said a word, except to her daughter, about expecting Mr. Warrington—and so, after a day and a night at the old farm-house, they were prepared to return to the city.

"I'll secretly, Cat. leave the poor old lady so soon," said Mrs. Sutton. "she is so infirm, and that house-keeper of hers is not, I suspect, overattentive to her comfort. Then she seems so fond of you, Alice, and enjoyed so much your reading to her. I wish that one of you girls could remain longer; I am sure it would be a comfort to the poor old lady."

Alice needed no persuasion. She was a kind-hearted, amiable girl, and her sympathies had been enlisted for this lonely, infirm old lady, her mother's aunt, who seemed so forgotten and alone in the world. Her own mother had been of very delicate health, and the young girl, accustomed to attend upon her, had learned many little ways of nursing and comforting the sick, and making dainty little dishes to tempt a feeble appetite. Then she could read to Aunt Curtis in the sweet, low voice that had been such a comfort to her mother, and she felt also, what the old lady had said, that "the very sight of a bright young face in the solitude of the old farm-house, must be such a cheering as a ray of sunshine on a cloudy day."

So Alice remained at Copley Farm, while her aunt and cousin, repeating all the stress of their innocent little scheme, returned to the city to welcome Charlie and his friend.

It was a disappointment to find that Charlie had arrived without his friend, Mr. Warrington. That gentleman, it appeared, had had a previous engagement to spend a few days with a relative, whom they found awaiting them upon the steamer's arrival; but he would make his appearance in a week or so, and meantime Mrs. Sutton might be sure that she could remain at Copley until Charlie and Isabel went up for her.

Alice had no objection. She was greatly enjoying her visit to the farm, and the first of October, when the country is most beautiful, with a lingering of summer glory mingling with the deepening hues of autumn.

She was an impassioned lover of nature, and yet, city bred, had never before seen nature in this glorious repose of autumnal beauty, and it seemed upon her like the reading of some new and beautiful poem.

"Strange that there are people content to live in the city, when the country is so beautiful!" she thought, one evening, as, standing knee-deep in ferns, beneath a canopy of crimson and gold foliage, she gazed in dreamy delight over the lovely scene before her.

A rustling in a neighboring thicket startled her. There was a sudden shot, a whirring past of a brood of partridges, and the next moment a dog rushed forth, deliberately followed by a gentleman in a gray shooting-dress.

As his eye fell upon the young girl, standing in a graceful, half-startled attitude, he lifted his cap courteously.

"I hope that I have not alarmed you," he said. "I should not have fired had I known that a lady was near."

The dog bounded back with a dead partridge, which he dropped at his master's feet.

Alice took it up gently.

"Poor little thing! It was cruel to kill it!" she said, pityingly, as she lifted her brown eyes, softened with tender compassion, to the face of the stranger.

He smiled a curious smile, in which appeared both interest and amusement.

"Then I am sorry that I should have killed it, and, in penance, will not fire another shot to-day."

"I have no right to require that sacrifice of you," she answered, shyly, as she turned away.

But he again addressed her:

"It appears that our pathways lie in the same direction. If you are going to Aunt Curtis, will you permit me to accompany you? The lady is an old friend of mine, and I was on my way to see her. It was for her that I intended those birds."

"I am staying at my Aunt Curtis", she answered, "and, in consideration of the motive, I forgive your shooting those poor birds."

They walked, in the lingering sunset, slowly along the lonely wood-path that led to the old farm-house, pausing a moment on the brow of "the eminence that overlooked it, as it lay like a brown bird's nest, embowered in trees in the meadows below.

"Time has forgotten this little nook," remarked the gentleman. "It is as unchanged now as I remember it fifteen years ago."

"You do not reside in this neighborhood, then?"

"No. My home is in the Sunny South; but, when a boy, I used to be a frequent visitor to this neighborhood. Perhaps I ought to introduce myself. I am Philip Warrington, of ——, and nephew of Dr. Gray."

Dr. Gray was her Aunt Curtis' physician, and resided on the next farm; so that was the name of her companion but it was the name of her companion that now attracted Alice's attention. She had become familiar with it from Charlie's letters, and she said, unguardedly:

"You have just returned from Europe? Then you are no doubt Charlie Sutton's friend, of whom he so often wrote?"

It seemed a pleasant mutual discovery, and the two were no longer strangers.

Aunt Curtis was delighted to see Philip. He had grown so wonderfully, she said—quite a big boy.

And she related many remembered boyish adventures of his, in which he did, or that seemed so long past to him, so short to her. Finally she insisted that, as he had a long walk, he should "stay to supper;" and he, apparently inclining both, accepted the invitation.

There is no place on earth except, perhaps on shipboard) where two young persons thrown together are so apt to fall mutually in love as in a quiet farm-house in the country. Certainly, in this instance, the being "thrown together" was not entirely accidental, since Mr. Philip Warrington, in his interest in the old lady, every day found something to bring him to Copley.

Now it was to bring her a new paper, or a message from the doctor; then to read to her some very interesting extracts from a new book; and then again to offer larks or partridges, forgetful of the cruelty of shooting them.

And in the soft, rich and dreamy October evenings, he and Alice, strolling in the old-fashioned garden, or down the lane, rich in autumnal flowers, or seated on the meadow stile, beneath the golden maples, spent such hours of happiness as can come to us but once in a lifetime—with the first dream of dawning love.

And so it came to pass that Mrs. Sutton, anxiously waiting at home, and still tasting her ingenuity for excuses to keep her niece "out of the way," suddenly heard something which sent her flying up the steps of Copley Farm by the next day's train, in a mood of mind by no means enviable.

And the first person she saw, on reaching Copley, was Alice, standing on the old-fashioned "stoop," engaged in autumn vines, with a remarkably handsome and elegantly-looking young man by her side, the attitude and expression of both revealing at a single glance what Mrs. Sutton felt to be the case with terrible certainty—that Alice had accomplished the mischief, and, in her simplicity and inexperience, had stranded too hard, and overshot the mark.

The Lesson of a Life.

In December, 1845, in the department of the Vosges, Xavier Thiriat, a boy of nine, accompanied four young girls of about the same age to the church. They had to cross a brook over which was placed a single loose plank. The boy crossed safely, the first girl who attempted it fell in. The boy jumped in, pulled her out, and then, walking in the water, guided each of the girls across. Some time was lost by this, and the party reached the church late. Xavier, ashamed of being late, did not go up to the stove, but kept behind. He reached home chilled, a dangerous disease followed, by which he was left a complete cripple for life; his only mode of moving about was on hands and knees, so completely were his legs paralyzed and distorted. Coming of very poor people, there was every prospect that he would be a heavy charge to his family and a wretched burden to himself. Instead of this, he reached manhood bright, cheerful and intelligent, reading all the books which he could lay hold of, he was soon the best educated man in his district, and rapidly acquired extensive influence, which was always used for good. He induced the young people to read and to study. Some contributions to the local paper, the Echo des Vosges, attracted attention and made him known, the result of which was that extended intellectual opportunities were extended to him. He made himself a good botanist, meteorologist and geologist, instructed others in these branches, and procured the foundation of several local libraries. He could not, however, be satisfied without achieving his complete independence and earning his support. He obtained the position of manager of the telegraph at a neighboring town, was made Secretary to the Mayor, became a favorite correspondent of several agricultural papers, and received the highest reward of the French Franklin Society—its gold medal.

All this was accomplished by native force of character and strong religious feeling, under circumstances merely adverse, but at times absolutely hopeless. A horrible deformity, intense suffering, absence of instruction, crushing poverty—all these disabilities were overcome unaided, and this ignorant and crippled lad made himself the light, intellectual and moral, of his whole district.—Public Ledger.

WHEN a man goes over to the other party he is treacherous; when he comes over to ours he shows moral courage.

MECHANICAL AND SCIENTIFIC.

Naptha is now turned for fuel upon several Russian Government vessels on the Caspian Sea. It is obtained from Baku, a port in Caucasia, on the western shore of the Caspian, celebrated for the burning gas wells which have long existed there. The new fuel is growing in favor with engineers, although boilers have to be specially adapted to its consumption.

In the London theaters scenes are now awaiting themselves of photography and the magic lantern in the production of scenery. The painter, instead of drawing on his imagination for a group of mediæval houses to represent the market-places of Bruges, for example, portions a large photograph of the actual scene. This, by means of the oxyhydrogen light, be thrown on his canvas, the light be thrown on his canvas, the image being similarly enlarged in size. Then he follows the outline and has an accurate picture.

A German physiologist states that the heating of the earth by the sun causes magnetic currents from the equator to the poles. South from the equator, persons suffer from sleeplessness should pay attention to their positions at night, and lie in the direction of these currents. Sleeplessness and want of sleep result from lying across them. The head to the north is the best position—to the west the worst. Physicians in charge of hospitals attend to the direction in which the beds are placed, and with the best results.

Prof. H. Hoffmann, of Glessen, has arrived at the conclusion, after protracted observations, that honeydew is not the product of the aphis or other insects, but is a secretion of the leaves of plants. In the case of a beautiful specimen of Camelia japonica which exuded honey-dew on the surface of the leaves, in such quantities as to form large drops on the under side, that continually fell on the ground, there were no insects on the plant. The excretion consisted of a sticky, colorless fluid, of a sweetish taste, and containing gum. The process by which this honey-dew was formed, Prof. Hoffmann was unable to discern. Spots of clear, sweetish liquid, which appeared on the leaves of an ivy tree were found to be due to the presence of insects, an insect which has the power of forcibly ejecting a saccharine secretion that is easily caught by the eye.

According to the Boston Journal of Chemistry, Wood which has been immersed in a "pickle" of a solution of tungstate of soda is thereby rendered incombustible under ordinary conditions. The tungstate has the effect of making soft woods hard as well as fire-proof, and the timber after ward saturated with kerosene—oil and set on fire, only the resin in the oil burned off without igniting the wood. To test the efficacy of the solution, a small house was built of wood impregnated with the tungstate, and an urgent fire kindled within. The wood was only slightly charred by the flames. It was found that all the woodwork of a theater can be thus rendered incombustible at a small expense, and in a few weeks' time. The inventor states that by the addition of tungstate of lime to hydrochloric acid and salt, affording, as a by-product, chloride of lime, large quantities.

—An interesting case is reported from Germany, which shows that the experiment—rarely attempted as yet—of grafting healthy skin on raw or morbid surfaces is capable of being performed successfully. There is no increase in quantity was a young German woman who had received a dreadful burn, involving three-fourths of the surface of the body. Her medical attendant, the well-known Prof. Kitel, tried epidermization (planting of pieces of healthy skin on the raw part), but without much success; the bits were carried off by the very abundant suppuration. The idea then occurred to him to touch the wounds with a solution of nitrate of silver; then fifteen fragments of the skin were applied. The success was great; in that number was increased to one hundred. The pieces were taken from persons who voluntarily offered themselves, and were removed with a razor, dry, or well moistened with water or oil; those gat with the dry razor succeeded best.

Anecdote of Fred Douglass.

There is a story told of Fred Douglass, who has been confirmed United States Marshal of the District of Columbia, and who has been invited to preside at the Lincoln banquet. In 1848 (we believe that was the year) he was in London, and attended a great meeting in Covent Garden, and was invited to address it. We do not now recall the occasion of this meeting, but there were present the Earl of Shaftesbury and hundreds of the chief men of England. At the conclusion of his eloquent speech, Mr. Douglass was heartily congratulated before the audience, Earls, nobles and gentry mingling forward and shaking hands with him heartily. Among those who came forward to patronize the colored man was the well-known Daniel O'Connell, and he, as he was about to withdraw, said to the same gentleman, in substance, "Tell him that I am proud of him, and that I am glad to have met him." The gentleman addressed, who was the chief of the London police, replied, "Mr. O'Connell, I will not tell him that, for he will not believe me. He will think I am only flattering him. But I will tell him that the Duke of Wellington has said that he is glad to have met him."

Probably Douglass has forgot the old hitter past now, and would greet the Brooklyn divine heartily, and introduce him to the President with the ground a courtier.—Cincinnati Commercial.

DIED.—In Walton, April 7th, of consumption, Clinton Knaggs, aged 29.

For groceries go to Carpenter & Bartholomew's. Quality due.

FAIR.—The Grand Traverse Union Fair will be held next fall at Elk Rapids.

THE band were out upon the streets both Wednesday and Saturday evenings.

ELK RAPIDS has taken decisive steps toward the organization of a cornet band.

THE steamer Sutton and the tugs are being put in shape for the opening of navigation.

STEARNS has been in full blast for the past week, but the season has about closed.

THE Elk Rapids iron furnace turned out 322 tons of Iron during the week ending March 17.

PROBABLY the first vessel here this spring will be the scow Owen after posts for Henry Morgan.

Thirteen thousand dollars in Black Hills gold-dust was shipped east one day last week from Sidney, Neb.

REV. W. L. TYLER, has bought of S. G. Isaman the village lot directly opposite the M. E. Church, for $150.

The first few weeks of the exciting life of the White House have pretty nearly made an invalid of Mrs. Hayes.

THE SENTINEL is able to promise soon able contributions from the pen of Rev. A. T. Gray, formerly of Antrim. Mr. Gray is known extensively as an able and scholarly writer, and the SENTINEL flies of by gone years bear evidences of his ability as a poet and essayist.

THE log harvest at Cheboygan during the winter just passed aggregated 40,000,000 feet, and 500,000 feet of square and board timber.

ROBBED.—B. Robinson, of Elk Rapids, while in Chicago, lately, had his pocket picked of $65. The thief was detected and arrested.

THE paper formerly known as the Clam Lake Weekly News comes to us now with the name Cadillac Weekly News for the village of Clam Lake has grown to the city of Cadillac.

For dry goods go to Carpenter & Bartholomew's. Assortment good.

NEW BOOK.—C. E. McLennan, at the hard ware store of M. J. Stockman, is agent for the Centennial Temperance Volume, an excellent work on the temperance question. It is well worth a place in every library.

FINE RESIDENCE.—Judge Eaton has just completed his fine new residence on Main street. Its outward appearance and interior arrangement combine to make it one of the finest residences in the village.

THE new church is well under way. Saturday the studding and lower section of the spire was raised. The rafters will be raised this week. We are informed that the expense of work already done is under the original estimates, which is quite encouraging.

FOX, ROSE and Buttars, under the management of their very capable head clerk, F. M. Loveland, are putting their store in shape for spring trade. Order, system and regularity is the regime under Mr. Loveland.

STATE PRISON STATISTICS.—During the Month of March 32 prisoners were received at the State Prison; 27 were discharged and two were pardoned. The increase during the month was four, and the total number of prisoners at the end of the month was 888.

STEARNS.—The health, balmy, exhilarating spring days have come, and with them the rocking crows and cow bells, all mingling, now harmoniously and anon discordantly, as our villagers busy themselves in preparing their parcels, and cabin beds.

For clothing go to Carpenter & Bartholomew's. Prices reasonable.

OBSTRUCTION LAW.—A petition is before the Town Board, praying them to call a special Township meeting, to repeal the law enacted at the regular Township meeting, restraining cattle within their owner's enclosures between 9 p. m. and 5 a. m. It is a shame to call which is the most obnoxious to our citizens, the law as above stated, or the fiendish ding-dong of cow-bells during the quiet hours of the night. As we don't own a cow we prefer the law as it now stands.

FOUND.—The pocket book belonging to S. G. Isaman, which was stolen from his store last winter, and for which offense Richard Williams was examined and bound over to the Circuit Court, was lately found by one J. Dotloff, in the shed near the old Lester warehouse, on South Arm. It contained a part of the papers only which were in it when stolen, and, of course none of the money. It fell the appartment of having been recently dropped there by some person.

For hats and caps go to Carpenter & Bartholomew's. Styles the latest.

OUR VILLAGE.—Nature and her votaries have commenced their annual work in beautifying our village. Nature, thriftiness, industry, good climate and good society combine in point of attractiveness, to elevate Charlevoix above the sand heaps, saw-dust flats, and rum holes along the shore that are called villages by their presumptious denizens. No brawls, no fights—a village where two lawyers, with all their cheek, can't get a living at law practice, is where we desire to live and die. Charlevoix, to our eye, is the center of the Universe, around and outside of which exists all the cussedness of creation.

Harbor Meeting.

At a meeting held at the village of Charlevoix the 10th day of April, 1877, pursuant to public notice, for the purpose of considering what could and should be done towards opening the lower River, the following proceedings were had:

On motion: W. A. Smith was elected chairman and John Nichols Secretary.

Mr. Morgan was called upon and requested to lay the subject before the meeting.

On motion: The chair appointed a committee to solicit subscriptions in the Lake and at this village for the purpose of raising one hundred dollars, which amount it is expected will be sufficient to make a depth of seven feet of water.

The chair appointed as such committee, Mr. Bell, Mr. Morgan, and Mr. Upright.

On motion: Meeting adjourned to meet at the same place next Monday evening (16th,) to hear report of committee and take such other action as may seem necessary.

For everything go to Carpenter & Bartholomew's. Assortment, quality, prices and style sure to please.

Notice.

Sealed bids will be received for the opening and tending the bridge across Pine River in the village of Charlevoix, from May 1st 1877, until the 15th day of November 1877, by the Township Board of the Township of Charlevoix until Tuesday, 12 o'clock m. the 24th day of April 1877. Said bridge must be opened when necessary every day from 5 o'clock a. m. until 9 o'clock p. m. Sundays excepted. All bids must be handed to L. D. Bartholomew, Supervisor, or Byron Sun, Clerk. The Board reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

By order of Town Board.

SEE & WASHBURN'S are selling cheap, and always sell good goods. Byron See, fat and happy continues in the management of the business.

BARK.—There will be upwards of 10,000 cords of bark got out here the coming season. H. Morgan alone will handle 2,000 cords.

THE returns on State ticket gives 327 Republican majority in Charlevoix county.

IT is stated that Mr. Glenn, who owns a saw mill at Leland, contemplates removing it to the head of South Arm, or some other equally good point.

Marine.

—SEAMEN'S wages start off at $1, and $1.25 per day.

NAVIGATION PROSPECTS.—The ice off this port is fast disappearing before the warm rays of the sun and the shifting winds. It is confidently expected that navigation will open within ten days.

—THE vessel being built on the southshore of Round Lake by T. D. Smith, is rapidly assuming a ship like appearance.

—AT PETOSKEY.—Open water is visible at the east of the lake, but some miles out we covers the lake. A westerly wind would soon fill up the harbor.

The brig Pontiac, which loaded lumber here for Buffalo last month, is now on her way to New Orleans with a load from some point in Scotland, we believe.—Cheboygan Tribune.

The Pontiac is the vessel that went ashore in little Traverse harbor loaded with grain a year ago last fall.

—A Chicago paper says: "The Milwaukee Tug Company will station the tug Stark Brothers at Pine Lake, which will serve to keep the channel clear at that point, and add largely to the business there."

—LOWER WAGES.—The Union, Anchor and Western Transportation Companies have reduced the wages of captains, mates, wheelsmen, and indeed all employees 10 per cent, from the figures paid last season. The captains will now draw hardly the wages paid last season on sail vessels.

—It is understood that the Kasigan boats—the fine propellers Roanoke, Colorado, Nebraska, Scotia, Rosna Cuba and Java—will not run with the Union Steamboat Company this season, and that they will not be put in commission for the present. There are also rumors that the Kasigan boats will be out of the Anchor line As to the truth of those reports, however, we cannot say.

—LATEST FROM THE STRAITS.—A late telegram from Point St. Ignace says: "There are indications of a break up. Look for the opening about the 15th if there is any steamer to pass through." The Chicago Times says: There seems to be no question but that propellers could pass through the Straits now, if they wished to force a passage, but there is no disposition to move boats much before the 1st of May. Consequently the sun and wind will be permitted to remove the icy barrier in their own good time.

—The following items we take from Milwaukee papers.

GOING TO PINE LAKE.—A short time since Mr. Conrad Starke, of the Milwaukee Tugboat Line, visited Charlevoix, on Pine lake, Mich., for the purpose of ascertaining whether a first class tug could find sufficient employment there to make it pay, and was so well satisfied with the inducements held out that the Company has concluded to station the tug Starke Brothers at that point during the present season of navigation. She will leave for her new field about the first of May, in charge of Capt. Theodore Dark. Charlevoix harbor is of the crudest kind, having been formed by causing the waters of Pine lake to tear a channel through to Lake Michigan, at the extreme south, protected by a few cribs sunk by private enterprise, and is liable to be sealed up by sandbars after every heavy storm. The Co. feel confident that the Starke Brothers will be able to keep the harbor navigable, and at the same time they will have a first-class boat in close proximity to Pine and Beaver Islands, upon which numerous disasters occur in the course of a season.

—The schooner Starke will this season engage in transporting several thousand cords of wood from Pine Lakes to this port, on owners' account. The schooners Charlotte Rush, Evening Star, O. E. Darrington, and sloops I. M. Hill and J. F. Prince will also engage in the Pine Lake trade.

THE Chicago Times, though is supported the Democratic ticket at the late election in that city, is disgusted with the Democratic management, and frees its mind as follows: "A more irreclaimable lot of idiots and asses than the persons who set up for managers of the old graveyard party in this city, this State, and this nation, the planet we occupy does not contain." This might be construed as having an indirect reference to 19 Gramercy Park, and it is certainly correct.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

FOREIGN.

THE protocol in respect to Eastern affairs signed by representatives of Russia, France, England, Germany and Austria, on the 31st ult. It was presented to the Porte for signature on the following day.

A Paris special of the 1st says a rumor prevailed in that city that the roof of the Mont Cenis Tunnel had fallen in and overwhelmed two passenger trains.

LONDON dispatches of the 31st ult. announce the arrival at that port of A. Bakey Hall, the managing Sachem of New York. He came on the famous ocean steamer, from Boston, under the assumed name of Sutcliffe.

ON the 30, Prince Bismarck tendered to the Emperor his resignation of the Chancellorship of the German Empire. This the Emperor refused to accept, but gave him a year's leave of absence.

A HAVANA telegram of the 29th states that Gen. Martinez de Campos had issued a proclamation promising pardon to every person surrendering before the 1st of May who had not committed any extraordinary offense connected with the insurrection. Any one surrendering after the 1st of May will be subject to charges to date.

ACCORDING to Constantinople telegrams of the 4th, extensive military preparations continued, notwithstanding the presentation of the protocol by the representatives of the Great Powers. Negotiations with Montenegro had been suspended.

CAIRO (Egypt) dispatches of the 4th say the Khedive, and had also declined to release Gen. Mitchell, the American officer, who remained at Adowah, in a painful condition.

A NORWEGIAN school-house in the village of Eidsgen recently burned, and sixteen children perished in the flames.

A CONSTANTINOPLE telegram of the 5th announces the reappearance of the plague at England. The Sultan had issued a firman to recall Midhat Pasha, the exiled Grand Vizier.

ACCORDING to a Madrid dispatch of the 5th, Capt. Gen. Jovellar had been recalled from Cuba, and would resume his old Cabinet position, that of Minister of War.

DOMESTIC.

IT is now thought that nine vessels of the Long Island fishing fleet, which left for the fishing banks last November, and have been long overdue, were lost in recent gales, with all on board, numbering ninety-five men, most of whom leave wives and children.

THE internal revenue receipts for March of this year were $9,250,257, against $8,293,252 for the same time last year.

THE public debt statement for March shows the following: Coin bonds outstanding, $48,000,141,500; total debt, $2,204,852,375; cash in Treasury, $130,158,148; debt, less cash in the Treasury, $2,074,694,127, decrease during March, $4,167,085.

A FRAME dwelling-house at Rhinecliff, Dutchess County, N. Y., was burned, a few nights ago, and a Mrs. Burns and four of her children perished in the flames. Finding escape by the stairs cut off, Mrs. Burns threw her last child out another, and then it dropped an infant child and another, but the rush of flame and smoke prevented further saving of life. The husband was absent.

MORE than one-half of the business portion of the town of Monroeville, Ohio, was destroyed by fire on the night of the 1st. Loss about $75,000.

A COURIER from Spotted Tail's band arrived at Capt. Vroom's camp, near Deadwood, D. T., on the night of the 4th, and reported that Spotted Tail, Crazy Horse and 900 of his warriors were encamped on the Belle Fourche, about fifty miles north, on route to the Agency, to accept terms of peace. Sitting Bull still held out, but had few warriors.

THE Secretary of the Treasury, on the 5th, issued the forty-fifth call for the redemption of five-twenty bonds of 1865, called by Secretary Sherman. The call is for $10,000,000, of which $9,500,000 are coupon and $500,000 registered; principal and interest to be paid on the day of delivery, and after the 31st of July next, interest to cease on that day.

A SERIOUS tragedy was enacted in the office of Stoars, Jewett, white lead manufacturers, of New York, on the 5th, by which George W. Jewett, the head of the firm, was instantly killed, and his nephew, O. D. Jewett (also a member of the firm), was fatally, and Joseph A. Dean seriously, injured. One account states that a misunderstanding existed between O. D. Jewett and his partners in the business, and that he was about to withdraw from the firm. On the afternoon of the 5th, he, probably crazed with liquor, came to the office armed with a hand-grenade, a pistol and a dirk. Some angry words passed and he pulled the grenade from his pocket and threw it on the floor, and an explosion followed, killing his uncle, as above stated, breaking his own legs and inflicting three terrible wounds on his abdomen. He then drew a pistol and attempted to shoot himself through the head, but his aim was ineffective. He died in the evening at the hospital. Dean, who was also injured by the explosion, was understood not to be in a dangerous condition. Another account denies the alleged misunderstanding among the members of the firm, and claims that young Jewett was insane.

PERSONAL.

IT is said that Mr. Sankey, in a recent interview, stated that Mr. Moody would close his work in Boston about May 1, and that no definite plans had been made or thoughts of regarding future work.

PRESIDENT HAYES recently stated, in speaking of the many invitations he had received to go to Long Branch, that he should remain in Washington during most of the summer.

THE members of the Louisiana Commission left Washington on the 5d for New Orleans.

IN A CARD, recently published, Peter H. Kenney says the statement that he had received loans to make concerning A. Oakey Hall, or any other person, was entirely without foundation, nor could any be truthfully made in regard to himself.

GEORGE KEAPER and family, supposed to be the original family of Beadles, of murderous fame in Kansas, were arrested at Alma, Ark., on the 4th, by Kansas detectives, who had been shadowing them for quite a time, and were confident that they had captured the right parties. The detectives had been for some time past working as farm laborers in Crawford County, quietly watching the movements of their quarry, upon whom they sprung the trap as above stated.

AMONG the appointments by the President, on the 5th, were those of John P. Hoyt, of Michigan, to be Governor of Arizona Territory, and Alfred E. Lee, of Ohio, to be Consul-General at Frankfort, Germany.

EX PRESIDENT GRANT and wife arrived in Chicago on the evening of the 4th.

POLITICAL.

A special from New Hampshire, on the 2d, states that the complete count of the vote cast at the recent election shows that the amendment to the State Constitution abolishing the religious test for officeholders had been adopted by a small majority, and hereafter Catholics will be eligible to office in that State.

THE election in Michigan, on the 2d, resulted in the success of the Republican candidates for Regents of the University and Justice of the Supreme Court, by majorities of from 18,000 to 20,000.

THE election in Chicago, on the 3d, resulted in the success of the Republican ticket, headed by Monroe Heath (present incumbent) for Mayor. Mr. Heath's majority is about 12,000. The other majorities range from 4,000 to 5,000.

HENRY OVERSTOLZ, the regular Democratic candidate for Mayor of St. Louis indorsed by the regular Republican Convention, was on the 3d re-elected to that office by a majority of from 7,000 to 8,000 over N. C. Hudson, fusion candidate of Democrats and Republicans who repudiated the action of the regular Conventions.

T. T. ALLEN (colored), one of the holding-over Senators, who had previously affiliated with the Packard Legislature, on the 2d took his seat in the Nicholls Senate. Allen addressed the Senate, saying he was there in obedience to the best dictates of his conscience, believing the time had come when the white and colored people of Louisiana should unite to bring about peace and prosperity to the State. He was born, not as a Democrat, but as a Republican. He relied upon the promises made by Gov. Nicholls in his letter of acceptance at the Baton Rouge Convention.

AT the election in Cincinnati, on the 2d, the Republican ticket was elected by majorities ranging from 1,000 to 4,000.

AT the election in Rhode Island, on the 4th, the Republican candidates for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor were elected by from 4,000 to 6,000 majority, and the remainder of the Republican State ticket by from 1,000 to 2,000 majority. The General Assembly is also Republican.

GOV. PACKARD made a speech, in a caucus at New Orleans, on the 4th, in which he declared that he would insist on his claim to the Governorship of Louisiana to the last end.

UNDER date of New Orleans, April 6, Gov. Packard has addressed an open letter to President Hayes, in which he takes exceptions to the instructions issued to the Louisiana Commission, in that they either exclude or do not direct inquiry upon the three essential points as to which is the legal Government and who are entitled in the meaning of section four, article four of the Constitution of the United States.

The Order Withdrawing the Troops from the South Carolina State-House.

WASHINGTON, April 3.

The following letter has been made public by the President:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, April 3, 1877.

SIR—Prior to my entering upon the duties of the Presidency, there had been stationed, by the order of my predecessor, in the State-House at Columbia, S. C., a detachment of United States troops. Finding them in that place, I have thought proper to defer a decision of the question of their removal until I could consider and determine whether the condition of affairs in that State is now such as to either require or justify the continued military occupation of the State-House. In my opinion, there does not now exist in that State such disturbance violence as is contemplated by the Constitution as the ground upon which the military power of the National Government may be invoked for the defense of the State. Therefore, it is ordered that the troops now on duty as a police force at said State-House be withdrawn to their proper stations.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your obedient servant,

A Terrible Recital of Suffering and Death.

BOSTON, April 2.

The details of the wreck of the brig Romake are most harrowing. The following is the statement of the only survivor:

Left Philadelphia March 17, on brig Romake, Capt. Wilkes, with a crew of nine men and a cargo consisting of 1,000 barrels of petroleum, consigned to Rio Janeiro, Brazil. Had a fine run down the coast, and on the 20th encountered a heavy gale, which carried away the sails and everything movable on deck. Finally, decreased became unmanageable and broached to, and the masts were cut away, every sea making a clean breach over her. On the 30th was in the vicinity of Cape Hatteras, and ran under the lee shore and made signals of distress to her, but she continued on her course. Had she laid to, all hands would probably have been saved. Had a little preserved fruit and some sugar here that day. On the 2d there was a heavy northeast gale, the sea breaking over us fore and aft. The vessel had commenced to break up. The Captain sealed to take to the boats to save life, but was persuaded not to do it. In the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Bullett were exhausted. They shook hands with the Captain and mate, bade them good-bye, and expressed a hope that they would meet in Heaven. Mr. Bullett took his wife's water-proof and wrapped it around her head. They embraced each other, and then sank to sleep their overboard. The Spanish gentleman shortly followed. He said his prayers, wrapped a shawl around his head, and leaped overboard in a delirious state. Soon after this the sea carried away the after cabin, with Capt. Pearson, cook, sailor, and a boy. The stern broke away and went west with the vessel, and second mate. The mate drowned nearly alongside, and the second mate was seen on a spar of the stern which had been left. Two men were then left with myself. Everything was gone down to the fore deck. Nothing was left but a piece of the mainmast, and suffering terribly from thirst. A long passed there to us, but did not stop. We tried to sail low to eat, but suffered terribly from thirst. It rained a little at night, and on Friday the gale continued. Saturday we had fine weather. We saw a square-rigged vessel to leeward. We ate some candles and a tin box of sardines, but no water. On Sunday it was blowing southeast. One man became crazy, and leaped overboard. At daylight we saw a schooner which proved to be the Adobe Walls, and commenced firing guns. We had to lash ourselves for fear to sweat us. When the gale lulled she came down to us, and after trying three times, I succeeded in catching a line and was hauled on board. The other seaman was saved. The mate became crazy, and, leaping overboard, was lost.

How Tweed Escaped.

William M. Tweed has furnished to Harper's Weekly the particulars of his escape from the Ludlow-Street Jail and his subsequent flight from this country to Spain. The chief points of the narrative are as follows:

Having convalesced upon flight, Tweed resolved to go to Spain, as the country expedited matter, in view of the nonexistence of an Extradition treaty with that country. One of the inmates of the jail with Tweed agreed to aid him with a proposition to escape, and outside friends of this prisoner being called in, agreed upon a plan by which they presented, and for the execution of which he agreed to pay a stipulated sum. No member of the bar, nor his counsel, nor any friend or person whatever of his previous connections was knew of the proposed flight, or had any part in its execution.

Tweed understood that he was to be taken from jail in charge by a well-organized body of men, distributed throughout the country, having every facility, including conveyances, and everything thoroughly tested and well-established. He was furnished with a short key for telegraphic communications. The following is the statement of the only surviving member of the party:

"There are now 192 free high-schools in Maine, which gave instruction during the spring term to 7,000 pupils. These schools cost $111,860, $97,317 of which was furnished by the State. The amount appropriated by State Treasury for the support of common schools of all grades was $40,324.

The Louisiana Commissioners Receive Their Instructions.

WASHINGTON, April 3.

The following is the President's letter of instructions to the Louisiana Commission:

To the Hons. Charles B. Lawrence, Joseph H. Hawley, John M. Harlan, John C. Brown and Wayne MacVeagh, Commissioners:

GENTLEMEN—I am instructed by the President to say before you some observations upon the occasion and objects which have led him to invite you, as members of the Commission about to visit the State of Louisiana, to undertake its public service. Upon assuming the office the President finds the situation of affairs in Louisiana such as to justly demand his prompt and solicitous attention. For this situation presents as one of the features the apparent intervention of the military power of the United States in the domestic controversies which undoubtedly divide the opinions and disturb the harmony of the people of that State. This intervention, arising during the term and by authority of his predecessor throws no present duty upon the President except the exercise and deliberate discretion as to the occasion and circumstances under which such intervention actually exists, and to decide as to the time, manner and extent to which aid should be observed in putting an end to it.

It is to aid the President in the full and prompt discharge of this duty that the President has sought the service of his countrymen to be employed by any measures that he may resolve upon. It will be readily understood that the services required of and intended in this Commission does not include any consideration of the past political history of the recent State election, or of the causes of votes cast at that election. So far as determination of such matters may be necessary, the President cannot but feel that the reports of the Committees of the two Houses of Congress, and other public information at hand, will dispense with, and should preclude the necessity of any investigation by the Commission of that field of inquiry.

But it is most pertinent and important, in coming to a decision upon the precise question of Executive duty before him, that the President should know whether the vote and contents of the regular, legal and powerful possibilities under the laws and Constitution of the State of Louisiana by which the assemblage to the Government there proceeded may be cast in control of sectional interest involving the element of military power as either an aggravation or a weight in such solution. The successful ascertainment of these impediments, the President has full confidence, would unite not to the people of that State the wisdom and mode of their removal.

The unusual circumstances which attended and followed the State election and the various returns of the votes cast, the conflicting and multiplied claims of the Executive functionaries of the State as to the result, and the consequent embarrassment which the contest so raised has occasioned to the orderly progress of the State, and people of Louisiana, have attracted the earnest consideration of every intelligent and patriotic citizen, and have been the subject of discussion in newspaper, pamphlet and other publication, and in the halls of legislation. The President feels that he is not overstepping the bounds of his duty when, in view of the Executive control there presented, he says that he

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

New York, April 10, 1877.

How any correspondent can be expected to write a letter worth reading after such a spell as we have just been through is more than I can understand. Talk about your equinoctials! This must have been old Equinox himself! When it hasn't rained it has snowed and when it hasn't done either it has looked as if the rest of the time it's been colder than that the upper end of the North pole and blown great guns. Verily, as Mark Twain puts it, we have had weather enough to go all around, and some left over, to give to the poor Turk you, therefore, as a man and a Christian, how I can I be expected to go hunting round during such a time for news respecting events which would be absolutely ashamed to happen during such weather? But as my income chiefly known as law says that of filling my appointed column at the appointed time and as I have already spread my excuses over as much space as I dare give them, I will proceed to business giving you fair warning, however, that if I can't find enough genuine facts to fill out my letter, I shall not scruple to manufacture as many as may be necessary to make up the deficit.

And right at the start, one subject appropriate for her present reluctance suggests itself, the facts regarding which have neither to be sought out nor manufactured—and that is the condition of the streets of New York, at this time. I do not believe that ever before in the history of the city were there such lazy, inefficient, rascally set of men in the street cleaning department as at present. Sheltering themselves behind technicalities, or squabbling among themselves, or brazenly and openly refusing to act, they have almost totally neglected their business all winter, and now nine tenths of the city streets are in a state which would be disgraceful to a country plank road in the worst of weather. It is but a few days ago since I was one of a company of over a hundred pedestrians, who at one of the busiest corners of broadway found themselves confronted with a slimy pool of semi-liquid filth, broad and deep enough to be utterly impassable. I at once recognized the spot as one where I had, a few months previous, lost an overshoe in the same old slough.

Such being the state of things on Broadway the condition of the poor and densely populated streets on the East and West sides may be imagined. On one of these unfortunate avenues I noticed, a short time since, within the space of a single block, some dozen piles of garbage, the accumulation of many weeks. One of these stood over ten feet high, and lic its top some of the neighboring sufferers, in bitter derision of the city government they are taxed to support, had stuck an American flag. The notice taken of this particular instance, and the feeling it created has, I believe induced those high and mighty despots of the cart and shovel to remove a portion of the obstruction, but there remain hundreds of similar cases of which no notice is taken.

The recent rains have done a good deal more for our city like than the Department has accomplished during the whole winter, but enough remains to breed a pestilence in the coming warm days. If every official whose shoulders bears the responsibility for this shameful state of affairs should be taken bodily and rolled for an hour in the gutters of the worst neglected street and a repetition of the operation promised for every day things remain as they are, it would not be long before they would find something to do besides drawing their salaries and living fast teams.

Should the cleans now in hand, however, prove to be genuine ones, some thirty or forty more victims have yet to be hauled over the coals, and they will be selected from among politicians, legislators and business men who have carried their heads as high as ever during these years of prosecution. They have relied confidentially on the "old man's grit" for the preservation of their guilty secrets, and to do him justice, Tweed has held out with Spartan firmness through all his troubles, against the repeated efforts to make him disclose the whole list of accomplices. It looks now, however, as though this "honor among thieves" were to fall of its purpose if in all, and as though the "true inwardness" of the great swindle were to be uncovered completely.

Only A Country Weekly

It is only a country weekly? Yes, that is all. But do those who allude to it with an intentional sneer ever reflect upon the duties and mission performed by the poor obscure country weekly, which is as much, nay, more to its few hundred readers in the country, as is the great metropolitan daily to its thousands of "readers in the city." Do, my dear friend of "readers in the city" Do, my never think of placing any estimation upon the worth of a country paper? It has none within the narrow limits of their superficial and contracted brains. They will not dream of the utility of any form of a newspaper save one which is crammed full of telegraphic dispatches, giving the minute details of some revolting and nauseating social scandal the hour at which the chamberlain of the imperial palace at Ispahan put his most serene and mighty highness the shah to bed; that the savage Gallas of Abyssinia had adjured the tenets of the Copic faith, and had bowed down in adoration at the shrine of Mecca's prophet; that the poor unoffending Papuans of the Condus were slaughtered by the Dutch invaders from the neighboring isle of Macassar, and so on, in an infinite variety of detail, all of which is read with an avidity that betokens the importance of these things to a city gentleman. But the financial, commercial, agricultural, religious and social condition of the millions of his fellow citizens residing without the environs of his mighty empire of a few miles in area in a sealed book, he has never opened its pages to enquire within; he knows nothing of it, put him to the test and you will find he knows more about the condition of the Brothers of Northern Africa than he does about the people in the neighboring country. We turn from the contemptuous of this human superficiality to the practical and commonsense man who wishes to be informed as to the pursuits, condition, and prospects of the people of his own immediate State and country. He finds in the rural paper the information he seeks. The country organ is to him the CAMERA LUCIDA which faithfully portrays all that occurs; it is in a great measure the reflex of the character of the people comprising the country wherein it is published. But what is the interest which even he derives from it, compared to that which is felt and entertained by the country people themselves? It is everything to them. In it is found news which they alone, probably, can appreciate and understand: information regarding their friends and neighbors, the condition of the crops and market quotation, which to the farmer and tradesman in the country is of primary importance; matters of local consideration wherein they are interested, and a hundred and one different things which affect and interest them, both privately and publicly. The country organ performs another function which can only be effectually done by it. As a medium for advertising it offers facilities which are unsurpassed. By it the farmer, the laborer, and the mechanic becomes acquainted with the goods and wares of the tradesman; they learn where they can purchase what they desire, and at the lowest prices. The country newspaper is to a country what nutritious food is to a convalescent; it helps to build it up and therefore all that is good in it. The country that is without one is like a wayfaring without elevation, from which a person desiring to examine the surroundings can make no observation. —Ex.

DISEASES OF THE THROAT AND LUNGS, DYSPEPSIA, GRAVEL, PILES, URINARY TROUBLES, NERVOUS DEBILITY, PALPITATION OF THE HEART, TORPIDITY OF THE LIVER, CONSTIPATION, SCROFULOUS AFFECTIONS, AND FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

For nearly a quarter of a century this tar cordial preparation has been effecting cures of the various diseases to which it is adapted, and thousands of persons, of perfect reliability, in all classes of society have borne evidence to its wondrous remedial efficacy.

As a remedy for diseases of the Throat and Lungs it has achieved a popularity rivalled by that of few proprietary remedies. Experience has shown that for those who are troubled with weakness of the Lungs it is the best possible protective against Consumption, and it may be relied on with certainty to eradicate Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup, Diptheria, and Soreness of the Chest.

Coughs of the most obstinate kind are speedily overcome by it, and even a simple cough is very prone to develop into serious inflammation of the lungs, the early use of Dr. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL is earnestly recommended, as it invariably prevents the further progress of the disease.

Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Torpidity of the Liver and of the Kidneys are promptly overcome by this superb vegetable corrective, which not only regulates but strengthens the organs of digestion, as well as those of the urinary and biliary secretions. It imparts unwonted relish for the food, and, by promoting digestion and assimilation, enriches the blood, which is the natural motor of vital energy and nutriment to the system.

Dr. L. O. C. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial thoroughly regulates the Bowels, removes Blind and Bleeding Piles, banishes from the circulation dropsical and all other impurities, and effectually counteracts a tendency to Gravel. It also entirely obviates the weaknesses incident to females.

Dr. L. O. C. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial is no mere placebo. It is a standard medicine, and has been repeatedly recognized as such by the press and members of the medical profession, who emphatically endorse the popular verdict long since rendered in its favor.

Sold by Druggists everywhere.

[From the Toledo Blade.]

The Corners, in the Absence of Mr. Nasby, Meet and Indorse the President Mr. Nasby Returns in Time to Prevent the Action of His Friends.

CONFEDERT X ROADS, }
(Which is to the State of Jefferson.) }
March 25, 1877.

Important business called me to a neigh born village, and I was absent from the Corners two days. The blanis way, I may say, not altogether unconnected with a supply of shirts. Dearin the campaign for Tilden and Reform, which I co-ordin ate unhappily, my linin waz were out, and I went out to a sociation where they hev such things, to borry three or four, which I did —all in the line—without hevin any preliminary conversashin with them re whom I borrerd em. I shood hev preferred to hev em doun up, but shirts is dryly stuft bad. I aren't prouder the free Democratic skorns stardy.

When the cards awae the nice will play. Same the sheperd and the sheep will be scattered. Sossely had I turned my back on the Corners before Pollock and Bill Hosher got at the people, and they cap tured Bascom. Cupcherin Bascom, they had the nes to vote on.

They red to the Corners the inogural of the Yoosurped Hayes, and explained to em waat the policy is that arch cumpliss shun sed I goin to be. They red over a list in his Cabinet, dwellin especiily on his appintment ov Bad rumgodin. Key, and tole em that he waz a goin to run the Government in the intrest av the whole country and not any one seckshun, and that the time had come for the iron and lum to be hoom together, and that the line in Mish waz to mearkin to bed on

And then if they didn't git em inprest, and then showed Bascom that it would be better for the Corners if the old feelin war dun away, with entirely, that the two parties should dwell in yoonity, and assist in establin their strength accordenlih with each other shood expend it a maskin office in each place.

I seed it about seven o'clock in the evenin and sed, q'uy natural, seein the Corners I left well. My experiddent had proved a success, for I got not only more shirts than any Reform leader in Kentucky ought to hev, but I had also prokoored a new sos and a pare ov boots wich wuz dasshin convenient outside a dry good store.

"Where is he?" W.'' I asked ov Mrs Bascom, who waz in the bar

"There's a meetin at the church, and Bascom is there."

"A meetin at the church? Who dares to call a meetin in my absence?"

And mean evil I hastened over to the meetin house.

It waz a harrowin site my eyes restid unto. There on the platform sot Pollock, the nigger Postmaster, M'Peltier, leader ov the Corners, Bascom, Bascom's brother, another nigger, and—the Deekin. Joe Bigler waz a standin up and reedin from a paper.

"What is this?" I shreeked. "Bascom, M'Peltier, Deeker sent e to Brook—the Deekin with them Radikels! What does this mean?"

"The gentleman will take his seat, and keep quiet, while I reed these resolooshens," returned Joe, and he red em:

Waerss, The country her bin key in hiss ter ror short Fifteen years, and

Waerss, Hiz sorer ain't the most comfortable thing in the world for the feet when it duz hev bin sozzened to cold, and

Waerss, In Brook ot Hayes appears to be tirin for hell he knows how to with things on a proper hasis, and in order way in the fewtir to hev em so, and injoinin no more, therefore be it—

Resolved, That the Corners, remainin the good old Democratic landmark he always hev, propoze to stand by him without regardin former pecooliarities, and that we invite to bring clean the era of good feelin.

Resolved, That from this time out all the latterents of the party shall be known as the Corners, that every form and exercise every other name or appellashin of hetro dox origin, like liberty and the pursoos assoshin to ellt—

"And drink," sujested Bascom.

"And the dilt the discussion pertikle quenches shel come until thoze self-stild seekshin ov onors to decide in a more natural way.

Resolved Then—

I red stand this resolooshen, and sprung to my feet.

"Deekin! Bascom! M'Peltier! Deeker! My Preshdent are you again to set there, and let them traitors inculpate resolooshons so forth ez the voice in the Corners? Are you again to be led by your enemies into such a trap?"

"Why sure!" sede Bascom. "Ain't we led that road long? Hez anybody made anything by it? Be sorry and trouble my the last ten years?"

Bascom, of them reasonables pass, and if they are carried out in the spirit which seems to pervade this unconstitutional assemblage, well, he is willin to agree to harmonize at once! If ther is goin to be peace and harmony, ur only peace is? If ther ain't again to be no more i gores to kill, no body lose ther rites, el ther aint to be no more par to struggle agin, in Bascom's bosom, of ther aint to be no more hep for conquest and defiance, and am I to go? Wat do you want to throw me out ov lopsize for? If you acknowledge the yoo surper Hayes, wat need hev you ov a defendent Why, you leave me, stundid and stupids, and take jist ez well leave the Corners to stand! Deekin, Bascom, Jasker, kill you do this?"

I don't see," continued Bascom, but I wooden let him go on.

"I don't see. If this city is good enuffh sete in I unyce ez one with the nigger in the pisy. Offecio's Okkepenshin's gone. My friends, before you commit yourself to this treasy, let me consult—"

I hastily got those misgithed men out ov the house, and into Bascom's, and ther I explained to em more at an anvantage. I held up store ein the horrors ov nigger rool. I showed em that if they past them resolooshins they wuz Republikins, and that the old Democrate party wuz gone forever, and that the deep wuz every Democrat waz to die on, he ever till we had restored peace to our liberdin comely.

"Ben jamin wat thayes sands, suh?" sed the Deekin.

"Spose he does Admit it. That don't the point. Deekin, ther never kin be peace. I never can be satisfied or soothed, nor kin any one ov the noble army ov reformers wich followin the banner ov Tilden and Reform, so long ez abilishists hold the Postoffices, and the rollicks the collectorships. You may cry 'peece,' peace, but ther ain't no peece.' We want peace, but we want to make it, and we want to make it in our way, or we don't want it at all."

That shut nothin like decision and promptnus. Before I had got thru with em, I got em back to ther old mawins, and they didn't go back to the meetin at all, and Deeker waz so enraged at bein almost cajoled, that he shved a brick at one ov the niggers wich wuz a goin home from the Church, which almost dispozed a good old thne rist.

The Corners is now restored. The Democracy and the Redikels hate each other ez hattily ez ever. Fites is ez common ez ever, and I am back in my ole place at Bascom's.

Thus did I avert calamity from the Corners, and theart me evil endeavors to give a yoosurpih President. May Democratic leaders everywhere act with wisdi thruness and promptnus. Wat is peace to the continyoul existence ov the Democratic party?

PETROLEUM V. NASBY,
Ex-Postmaster.

Finances of China.

For the first time in the history of China the state of her Imperial finances been disclosed. The Chinese budget for 1875-6 shows the total revenue in coin to be 34,405,000 taels, and land being worth $1.01; the grain tribute amounts to 4,177,004 pecuils of 133 pounds each, which is estimated to be worth 8,355,208 taels. Thus the entire Imperial revenue of China during the past financial year foots up a total of about $50,000,000. The budget of expenditure shows the cost of the Central Government at 27,044,550 taels, of which the army and navy is set down in round numbers at 4,500,000; salaries of civil and military officers, 7,087,198; administration of Central Government, 887,577 taels. Couriers and mails cost nearly four times as much; river embankments and public works are charged at 2,800,000 taels. A reserve fund of 7,378,742 taels is set apart for some unexplained object. China was without the luxury of a foreign debt until 1874, when a loan bearing eight per cent; interest for $3,138,575 was issued through the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank to Imperial authority, secured on the customs revenue. The existence of this loan cannot account for much a large reserve fund, but there may be an internal debt, interest on which would absorb the difference.

The Emperor, being spiritual as well as temporal sovereign, maintains neither ecclesiastical hierarchy nor priesthood; hence an expenditure for religious ceremonies and the State religion of 1,2,182 taels may be regarded as a peremnite of the Sublimely Pure. There is also a suspicious item of 1,-187,108 taels inscribed for miscellaneous expenditures of the Central Government. The next highest item of expenditure is for examination and this is the literati, which is not peculiar in an Empire ruled by red tape and competitive examination. Public charity and pensions and gratuities likewise figure for solid sums in the list of general expenditure. But the expenditure of the Imperial household, which came under a separate head, but up a total of 12,557,118 taels, being an excess of expenditure over revenue of 4,607,360 taels.

Considering the vast Empire of China, the revenue and expenditure, as exhibited in these figures, is not large; but these sums do not represent a tithe of the money squeezed in poonitrary exactions from helpless people. The deficiency of revenue is usually made up in donations, which are in exchange of rank and place, in other words, by the sale of office.

The heads of expenditure of the Imperial household of China are historically instructive. Tartar-like, the reigning family trusts to Tartar troops, and the Ta-tsing dynasty pays 5,042,421 taels annually in manoeuvers of the Army of the Eight Banners and a Mongol auxiliary troop. Rice and other food cost over 4,500,000 taels; and to handsome swallows 901,285 taels. Many of the sums squandered in presents and pensions look up a coal hall million; sawmee in the Grand Llama another imperial propensity, and many are carried out in the spirit which seems to pervade this unconstitutional assemblage, well, he is not again to harmonize at once! If ther is goin to be peace and harmony, ur only peace is? If ther ain't again to be no more i gores to kill, no body lose ther rites, el ther aint to be no more par to struggle agin, in Bascom's bosom, of ther aint to be no more hep for conquest and defiance, and am I to go? Wat do you want to throw me out ov lopsize for? LOUISIANA.

A Proclamation by Gov. Packard.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, }
NEW ORLEANS, March 26, 1877. }

To the Citizens of Louisiana:

A so-called proclamation of Francis T. Nicholls, claiming to be Governor of the State of Louisiana, just made public, contains gross misstatements which I deem it my duty thus authoritatively to refute. Mr. Nicholls, who asserts that his Government is a lived fact, complains in all his branches, is destitute of one shred of legal title to the offices he attempts to usurp. The pretended Legislature which enthroned his claim to the office of Governor had not before them any legal returns of election, as prescribed by the Constitution, and lacked two of a quorum in the Senate and twenty of a quorum in the House. The Secretary of State, refusing a formal demand made upon him by the partisans of Nicholls, placed the only legal returns of election before the Legislature recognized by Hon. Kellogg. That Legislature, meeting in the State-House, as required by law, and having a full legal quorum present in both Houses, opened and canvassed the returns and declared me elected Governor. The vote of the State of Louisiana was further passed upon during the recent contest over the Presidential election by the highest tribunal in the Nation. That tribunal declared the vote of the State to have been cast for Hayes and Wheeler, and, by doing so, practically declared, by the same act, for the vote cast for me as recorded by nearly 700 that cast for several of the Presidential Electors. The Constitution makes me executive officers of the State, a Treasurer, Secretary of State, Auditor, Attorney-General, Superintendent of Public Education. Not one of these important branches of the State Government is now under the legal control of Gen. Nicholls. The State Treasurer, elected in 1874 for a period of four years, refuses to recognize the authority of Mr. Nicholls, or to sign any tax papers that he may attempt to issue. The Secretary of State, Auditor of Public Accounts, Attorney-General and Superintendent of Public Instruction, elected with myself, are recognized by the outgoing Government, are in possession of all the records and archives of the State pertaining to their respective offices. These include machinery for the assessment and collection of taxes. The Supreme Court, reorganized by my predecessors recognizes me as Governor. Outside the City of New Orleans a great majority of District Judges acknowledge my authority. Nearly all the essential, dangerous and predatory parishes of the State submit to the authority of my Government, and the officials of the State Government. The few county parishes which assume to recognize and support them, are parishes in which the white and colored people are unarmed, and the officials could be easily displaced during the State campaign, and where political disturbances are being created and fostered by the most general lawlessness prevails. Mr. Nicholls, in his proclamation, is reduced to the absurd assumption that the people of Louisiana will acquiesce in the usurpation of power by a minority of the people, and in the overthrow of the Supreme Court of the State—a court recognized by the Federal Government in their already-provided tribunal commissioned by Nicholls, and sustained by the United States Courts of the United States to be devoid of any legal authority. The legal and arbitrary proceedings of these men, in the attempted overthrow of the results of the late election, have been met by the firm and unflinching resistance of the people, and by the refusal of the officials of the State Government to recognize their authority. The judicial tribunals thus temporarily usurped by Mr. Nicholls and his associates, are admitted by the most conservative of the citizens allowed to have been offered, but under his rule, if his claims are recognized, all the rights and privileges of all citizens would be respected. If resolution to seek, peaceably and by the ballot, what is to prevent some other chieftain with an equal right setting up a like pretension? Would not this constitute the resemblance to Mexican customs which the White League, by its own confession, seeks to imitate? The so-called Nicholls Government rests its claims largely upon the support of the old slaveholding and aristocratic classes in this city. It is a Government of wealth and not a compact of the middle and poorer classes, who form a majority whose rights to rule it is the object to deny. A Government established on such a basis would tend to make the rich richer and the poor poorer. It would be a violation of principles which underlie the very foundations of our free institutions. The action of the Democratic caucus, while as well as black are represented in stamping out one race for all, the people

The New York Times comments with gratification upon the fact that the utterances of the most representative and influential of the Southern papers upon the President's course are received with the calmness and candor which the importance occupied by the people in whose behalf they speak * * * The call to repent which underlies the appreciative comments which have reached us calls greatly to their significance. The Times thus calls attention to the large age of some well-known papers in the South. The Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle says that "the Southern people do not propose to offer any factious or senseless opposition to the new administration. Let us act as fairly by him as he has promised to act by the country." The Charleston News and Courier thanks Mr. Hayes "even more for the high constitutional principles he had regard for law upon which his action is based than for the action itself." The Selma (Ala.) Argus urges that the President in the last judge of his own acts of action, and that more than enough is known to warrant the confidence he needs to sustain him in the conflict he must undergo. So we compromising a paper as the Mobile Register quotes this opinion approving-ly, and deprecates a too nice scrutiny of motives or partisan influences. The Richmond Whig does not hesitate to applaud the President as a man in action, as well as a statesman in thought," and to sustain the opinion by a citation of his various acts since assuming the responsibilities of offices. Another Virginia Journal—the Petersburg Intelligencer—will have it Mr. Hayes more of darkness's readiness to assume responsibilities, but nevertheless praises unstintingly his action in the South Carolina case, and the action which must follow in the Louisiana case.

In the wrestle between Col. McLaughlin and Bauer at Detroit last Tuesday evening, the former came off victor. The match was for $500 a side and door money, best two in three falls. The first hold was to be collar and elbow, second Graeco-Roman, and third to be decided by toss of a penny. In the collar and elbow hold McLaughlin threw Bauer twice in a few minutes, the first flop being decided by the referee to be an fall. In the Graeco-Roman hold, Bauer won the fall. The choice of hold for third fall was won by Bauer, and he chose "catch as catch can" better known perhaps as "rough and tumble." The two men pitched to, and Bauer soon found himself on his back, which gave the match to McLaughlin.

Grace Greenwood grieves that Fred Douglass is not in Congress. She says that long ago he should have given up the newspaper and other business, come out to lecture for the Bugtown Lyceum and the Slabtown Female Seminary, packed his carpet-bag, and gone South to learn the tune, and save as fate, to attend to the House. And she goes so far as to declare that if he went in the South there would be a little let up in the long lament for Henry Clay, and that other Douglass who sleeps well on the shores of Lake Michigan.

A good share of the Republican victory in Chicago is due to the German, who began to distrust their company in the Democratic party, and also to admire the steady and able course of President Hayes. They concluded to divorce themselves from the Irish in city politics since the latter, with true clannishness, compose the ruling element in the Democratic party of that city, and had flattered themselves that they could run the thing pretty much as they pleased.

The tendency in President Hayes to bear before he decides is very exasperating to the Democrats. They want the southern question decided with eyes and ears both shut.

Wade Hampton, pleading for his poor bleeding South Carolina, reminds the Burlington Hawkeye of the man who killed his father and mother, and then, when the court asked him if he had anything to say before sentence was passed upon him, begged for the mercy of the court, because he was "a poor orphan."

The franking privilege having been restored to the departments of the government by an act of the late Congress, instructions have been issued accordingly by the heads of the different departments. It is required, however, that all the official stamps now on hand shall be exhausted before a resort is had to the privilege of the act.

The steamer Ottawa, Capt. St. Louis, was destroyed by fire at Chicago, Ill., and nine persons perished in the flames or by jumping to the pavement. The loss and $1,500,000, and the insurance $1,000,000.

The coinage of the United States mints in March was $8,443,000, a period nearly equal to any three months' work. About three-fifths of the amount was gold coin—the rest silver.

The Cincinnati Times says Garfield will probably be the Republican candidate for Speaker of the next House. If our conciliated Southern brethren mean business, they will of course accept a representative Republican if the North is the stronger the better. He should not be any less acceptable to Southern Democrats than Wade Hampton is to Northern Republicans.

The Nebraska Legislature does neither itself a grasshopper credit. Road Supervisors throughout the State are authorized to order on all the voters in their respective precincts to do twelve days' work each in killing grasshoppers, for which each person is to be paid $2 a day in county warrants. Besides this, grasshopper "war circles" are generally looming through the State.

False Impressions.

It is generally supposed by a certain class of citizens, who are not practical or experienced, that Dyspepsia can not invariably be cured, but we are pleased to say that Gardner's August Flower has cured, to our knowledge, fifteen cases of Dyspepsia, and four Complaint in all its forms, such as Sour Stomach, Costiveness, Sick Headache, palpitation of the Heart, low spirits, &c., &c. Out of 30,000 dozen bottles sold last year, not a single failure was reported, but thousands of complimentary letters received from Druggists of wonderful cures. Time does will it. PROBATE ORDER—State of Michigan, County of Manitou.—At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Manitou, holden at the Probate Office in the Village of St. James, on Saturday, the seventeenth day of March, A. D. 1877. Present, Charles H. Wright, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Robert Basham, of Manitou Co. deceased. On reading and filing the petition duly verified of Henry Wright, praying that an instrument in writing be filed in this office purporting to be the last will and testament of said Robert Basham, deceased, and for letters of administration with the will annexed be granted to Henry Wright. Thereupon it is ordered that Tuesday, the fifteenth day of May, at ten o'clock in the forenoon be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law, or said deceased, and all others interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said court then and there to be holden, and show cause if any there be, why the petitioner should not be granted. And it is further ordered that said petitioner give notice to all persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper circulated in said County of Manitou, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

Strayed Trip in Course.—Call at M. J. Stockman's and see those patent harmonic fish hooks. They burn very brilliant and make a very brilliant light.

Another A Fire.—The residence of D. C. Nettleton, known as the old Dixon house, caught fire in the roof on Friday, but was extinguished after slight damage.

Business Meeting.—At the harbor meeting on Monday evening the committee appointed to collect funds for harbor work reported $135 as pledged, to be considerable work. The meeting appointed Henry Morgan to superintend the work and adjourned.

Tug Work.—Scraping the bar at the mouth of the river commenced Tuesday morning, and has progressed finely. The tug Starke is expected here daily, and when once inside she will make short work of clearing out the channel to eight or nine feet.

Carpenter & Bartholomew have a good assortment of everything. Give them a call.

Nuisance.—We call the attention of the Board of Health to the existance above ground of a large quantity of fish offal near the mouth of the river, the smell of which is very offensive to residents of that vicinity. The law requires that such material should be buried.

Sawing M Sir, seems to be the "ruling spirit" in architectural matters in Charlevoix. He has charge of the construction of two edifices,—the church and the new residence of Geo. W. Miller. Sam has few superiors as a builder.

See & Washburn are getting ready to put in a fresh stock of goods. Patrons of this popular firm may expect to see a fine assortment, and at reasonable prices.

Arrived.—The schooner W. A. Smith arrived at this port from Manistee yesterday, loaded with shingles and lath. Capt. Way, has greatly improved her appearance by re-painting her hull green, and otherwise fixing her up.

The Mill.—Hon. John Nicholls seems to have inaugurated a new era in the affairs of the Charlevoix mill property. He has the mill stocked with 1,500,000 feet of logs, about one half of which is hardwood, being a larger quantity than the mill has ever before handled in any one year. Mr. Nicholls has increased the capacity of the mill largely by improvements and has put the engine and machinery in good order, so is he has running positions. The mill will saw down a short time this week for further repairs.

Homestead Entries.

Commissioner Williamson, of the General Land Office, has issued a circular to all Receivers and Registers of land offices throughout the country, containing instructions requisite to carry into effect two acts of Congress, approved on the 13th of March last, relative to homestead entries. The first provides a new method of making final proof in homestead entries in dispenses with the personal presence of claimant at the district land office. The person desiring to avail himself thereof must appear with his witnesses before the Judge of a court of record of the county and State, or district and Territory, in which the land is situated, and there make the final proof required by law according to the prescribed forms, which proof is required to be transmitted by the judge or the clerk of the court, together with the fee and charges allowed by law. The judge being absent in any case, the proof may be made before the clerk of the proper court. The fact of the absence of the judge must be certified in the papers by the clerk acting in his place. If the land in any case is situated in an unorganized county, the statute provides that the person may proceed to make the proof in the manner indicated, in any adjacent county in the State or Territory. The fact that the county in which the land lies is unorganized, and that the county in which the proof is made is adjacent thereto, must be certified by the officer.

The other law to which attention is invited by this circular is entitled "An act for the relief of settlers on the public lands under the pre-emption laws." Under this statute, a person desiring to change his claim under a pre-emption filing to that of a homestead entry, should be required, on making a change to appear at the proper land office with the witnesses and show full compliance with the pre-emption law to date of such change, as has heretofore been required in transmutation cases. Proof of such compliance must be forwarded with the entry papers to the General Land Office. When the person applies to make final proof he must show continued residence and cultivation as required by the Homestead law. In case an adverse claim has attached to the land, due notice in accordance with rules of practice must be given all persons in interest, of time and place of submitting proof in support of the application to make such change. The adverse claimants will be entitled to the privilege of cross questioning the applicant's witnesses, and of offering counter proof.

Run Riverside.—A ripple of the great temperance tidal wave, known as the ... movement struck Charlevoix ... Sunday. Hon. E. O. Rose, of ... and a prominent member ... Cadmus Club of that place, ad... people in the afternoon on the ... of temperance. Over which ... persons signed the pledge and ... the red ribbon to be fastened upon their apparel. Mr. Rose's address was clear, logical and convincing, and was listened to with marked attention.

Jurors.—The following is a correct list of jurors drawn for the May term of the circuit Court for Charlevoix county:

BOYNE VALLEY.

Cromwell Magee Geo. Kyes, Herschel Magee, Thomas Brown, B. W. Ellison.

E. Carpenter, F. O. Fisher.

During the month of March last, fourteen million dollars of the public debt was paid off. Pretty well done for Hayes' first month in the White House.

Close of Volume VIII.

With this number the SENTINEL closes its eighth volume, and steps forth into its ninth year in the fullest confidence for its future. With a just pride we look upon its labors in the past, in aid of the development of this region, and we pledge its continued labors in the same cause until there remains nothing more for it to do. We thank the public for their support and solicit their continued friendship.

The Church.—The new M. E. Church has assumed the outlines of the beautiful gothic edifice which the designs have portrayed. The frame is completed, except the top section of the spire, and the work is rapidly progressing under the deft hands of a large force of workmen. These facts warrant us in giving a more extended description of the edifice than we have yet placed before our readers. The building is 26x61, with the spire standing independent of the main structure on the northwest corner, reaching a height of over 80 feet from the ground. It is 20 feet from the platform ground and the peak is 41 feet from the ground. From the floor to the arched ceiling will be 20 feet. A vestibule will be partitioned off at the main entrance, over which will be a gallery. The building is finely proportioned and the frame is a mountain of strength, especially the roof, which is a perfect lace work of trusses and braces. The building will be completed at the time heretofore announced.

The Sutton.—The steamer Jennie Sutton got steam up Saturday and went up the lake. She is in fine condition. Capt. Aldrich will change her plan of running somewhat from that of last year. Five days of the week during the busy season he will leave the head of South Arm at 5 o'clock a. m., and make the entire circuit of the lake and said Arm, returning the same route in the afternoon. Mr. Powers, of Boyne Falls, will put a stage upon the route between that place and the head of Pine Lake, which will create a route of travel from the railroad through Pine Lake. The Suttons' time-table will probably appear soon.

Ladies specie Portmonies at Fox, Rose & Buttars.

It truly has an animating effect upon our spirits, to witness at noon and night the busy hurrying of mechanics and laborers from their avocations at the sound of the whistle. The sound of hammers and saws and the buzz of circulars filling the air from morn till evening betokens a busy industry, and industry means growth, development, progress. Never, in the history of Charlevoix have indications been more encouraging for a large season's business. The Pine Lake trade will be larger than ever before, and growing out of this comes a benefit that already is making itself manifest. Besides the improvements, both public and private now in progress, there is probability of two new stores being erected this season, besides other business ventures of which we are not at liberty to speak. The outlook is encouraging.

Harbor Appropriations.—On the subject of harbor appropriations the Chicago Tribune's Washington special says: "The President has authorized the expenditure of certain sums, under the direction of the Chief of Engineers, for the improvement of rivers and harbors. This money is a portion of the suspended appropriation voted at the first session of Congress. The total amount is $804,000. The Sau Jesquin River has $20,000; this still leaves a balance of $180,000 to the credit of the various improvements. Applications have been filed for the allotment of the whole of the whole of the appropriations for Georgia, Alabama, and Tennessee, and will be reported on shortly. The President desires to do justice to the works which are of general utility, but a number of jobs run through the bill, will be ignored."

The new woman of the White House is a lady of good sense. There's no foolishness about her—no flam, splurge or airiness. Let us rejoice, and let all the women of America pattern after her.

FOREIGN.

ODESSA telegrams, published in Vienna, on the 8th, reported that unusual preparations were making in all Black Sea ports in regard to an expected attack from the Turkish ironclad fleet.

ADVICES from Rome (Italy) telegraph of the 8th, around loads of International note had appeared in various Provinces. At Sebinas a land had taken possession of the town hall and burned the municipal archives.

LONDON specials of the 9th say intelligence has just been received that the Porte had rejected the principal clauses of the protocol, refused to admit the Russian doctrine of dismemberment; declined to send an envoy to St. Petersburg, and insisted on dealing with Montenegro without interference by the Powers. The dispatches add that war was considered imminent and inevitable.

MR. LESSEPS, United States Minister to Spain, had his farewell audience with the King on the 9th.

CONSTANTINOPLE telegrams of the 10th announce the discovery of two Russian incendiary agencies in Bulgaria. The Porte had assured a circular, to which the deore of Turkey for peace was explained, but the declaration made that Turkish affairs should not be subjected to foreign interference. The demands of Montenegro had been rejected by the Turkish Chamber of Deputies. Affairs were regarded as extremely critical.

ANDREW HALLIDAY DUFF, an English author and playwriter of considerable note, died at London, on the 10th.

HEADACHY telegrams of the 11th say the Turks were exceedingly active in that region in forwarding preparations for war. Twenty-four Krupp guns had recently arrived, and would be placed on the banks of the Danube for the defense of that stream.

DEFINITIVE leave of absence until August has been granted Prince Bismarck, and he has withdrawn his resignation of the Chancellorship of the German Empire.

A CONSTANTINOPLE telegram of the 12th says the Turkish Senate had returned the decision of the Chamber of Deputies in regard to the demands of Montenegro.

UNSOLICITED leading article the London Times of the 12th assumes Russia for the independent boast and sharp practice exhibited in securing the indorsement of the Great Powers to the recent protocol. Lord Derby, on the same day, outlined Turkey that, in the event of war with Russia, she could expect no aid from England.

A BUCHAREST dispatch of the 12th states that Russian troops were moving upon the Roumanian frontier.

ON the night of the 10th, a fire at Stamboul, an outlying suburb of Constantinople, destroyed between 300 and 500 buildings. The fire originated in the Greek quarter.

TWO MEN were burned to death in a hotel which was destroyed by fire at low mount, Ont., on the night of the 11th.

DOMESTIC.

THE Reading Railroad Company, on the 7th, resolved to suspend all the Brotherhood engineers employed on the Germantown & Norristown Branch, giving them 10 days' time in which to decide whether to remain in the employ of the Company at the cost of leaving the Brotherhood.

THE Northwestern Convention of the National Reform Association met in Chicago, on the 10th, the principal objects of such gathering being to take action looking "to secure to the Bible in our public schools, Sabbath laws, the oath and other Christian features of our Government, and to provide for them an undeniable legal basis by a religious amendment to the Constitution." The Rev. Jonathan Edwards was chosen permanent President, and addresses were delivered by him and the Rev. Dr. W. W. Everts.

THE Treasury Department, on the 11th, issued circulars to the various Sub-Treasurers throughout the country calling pay on all outstanding legal-tenders of the denomination of one and two dollars.

BY direction of the President, the Secretary of War has ordered that the United States troops now in garrison in Alaska be withdrawn, and the Territory turned over to the control of the Treasury Department.

BETWEEN one and two o'clock on the morning of the 11th, a fire broke out in the Southern Hotel, on St. Louis, one of the largest structures in the city. In less than three-quarters of an hour from the outbreak the vast building was wrapped in flames, and nothing could be done except attempt to rescue the inmates. Many escaped from the windows, and others escaped by tying sheets together and letting themselves down through the flames. Several ranges of the fourth and fifth stories, and were dashed to pieces on the sidewalk below, but the majority of those on these floors are believed to have perished. The dead were variously estimated from twelve to twenty—how many cannot be known until the debris is cleared away. The origin of the fire is wrapped in mystery, but it is supposed to have started in the store-room in the basement.

THE principal part of the business section of Bangor, Me., was destroyed by fire on the night of the 11th, twenty-five houses, offices and tenements being burned. Loss about $50,000.

THE body of a child, supposed to be a little girl, was found in the Southern Hotel ruins, on the evening of the 12th. It lay on a small mattress, and evidently fell from one of the upper stories. It was disfigured beyond recognition. It was superstated that several of the female domestics of the house were buried beneath the debris.

PERSONAL.

IT was stated in New York, on the 8th, that the only difficulty then in the way of the release of Tweed was his unwillingness to divulge the names of legislators and others who are said to have received bribes from him in connection with the city charter bills.

ALONZO HILL has been appointed by President Hayes to be Assistant-Secretary of the Interior—promoted from Chief Clerk, on the ground of merit, and in accordance with the Civil Service rules.

THE Grand Jury of Caroline County, Maryland has been charged to investigate the Mary Bennett deed, and to collect the principals and accessories if the jury shall find that the author deserves its attention.

THE President has reappointed Peter C. Sloseum Chief-Justice of the Territory of Dakota, and Jacob J. Bowman Associate Justice of the Territory of Utah.

A telegram from Fort Smith, Ark., on the 11th, says the Soaffer family, arrested on a charge of being the Kansas Benders, after examination before United States Judge Parker, were released. The parties from Kansas failed to identify them.

POLITICAL.

THE New England Methodist Conference has adopted resolutions expressing a desire that the freedmen of the South should have several to them all the rights and privileges that their changed relations to the country and their consequently increased responsibility so imperatively demand for them, and recognizing in the President's inaugural address, and in other words and acts of his, a clearly-defined purpose on the part to so administer the Government of the United States as to secure to all classes of our citizens the full and free exercise of all their rights and privileges, and pledging to him, in the execution of this purpose, hearty sympathy and support. The New York Methodist Conference, in session at Rondout, on the 9th, adopted a resolution expressing "confidence in the upright intentions and statesmanlike purposes of President Hayes, firmly believing that the policy thus far adopted of conciliation toward those formerly in rebellion, and good-will toward their formerly in bondage, cannot fail to advance the welfare of the Nation and the interest of God's kingdom."

THE Louisiana Committee on sat three hours with closed doors on the morning of the 9th, and in the afternoon received delegations in the interests of the two claimants for the Governorship. The Commission stated among other things, that the moment the members of the Legislature, whose election was undisputed by either party, should meet together as one body, it would constitute the State of Louisiana. Self-government and the withdrawal of the army could then follow. Packard, he asserted in a day, should the public opinion of the State compel its Legislature to meet as one body, instead of two.

THE United States troops which had been guarding the State-House at Columbus, S. C., for several months were withdrawn at noon on the 12th. On the same day Mr. Chamberlain issued an address, finally retiring from the contest for the Governorship of that State, thus leaving Gen. Hampton in undisputed possession of the field.

THE archives of South Carolina and the Government of the State were formally transferred to Gov. Hampton, on the 13th.

A WASHINGTON telegram of the 12th says it could be stated, on authority, that the President made no bargain whatever with, or promised anything to, Mr. Chamberlain as a condition of his retiring from the Governorship of South Carolina.

RELIGIOUS AND EDUCATIONAL.

—The salaries of Methodist ministers in California range from sixty dollars to $4,000 a year.

—The School Commissioner of Harlan County, Ky., is reported to have lately said that the few school-houses in his county are not as good as "the average horse stable, and that, as a result, the people thereabouts are making greater efforts to raise stock than to educate their children."

—A London paper says that a Presbyterian clergyman who was recently asked to be a pastor was offered $5,000 for his manuscript sermons. The purchaser intended to retail them to ministers of the Church of England, and as they were long he proposed to cut them in two, to suit the rectors and vicars. The offer was declined.

—The Advance has a contributor who urges ministers to make Saturday the time of rest. "In a few," he says, "who is a seventh-day Baptist. Make no parish calls. Deny thyself, it is our worker, and rest home the pen altogether." Immense! words church, congregation, society, parish, in a deep sea of forgetfulness."

—More than one million copies of the Bible are printed yearly. This is equal to more than nineteen thousand every week, more than three thousand every day, more than one hundred every hour, or five every minute of working time. More copies of the Sacred Scriptures are demanded in the English language than in the languages of all the other nations of the world.

—Twenty-three ministers and seventeen ruling elders have accepted the appointment to attend the Cumberland Presbyterian Council at Ethaburgh, as delegates from the Northern Presbyterian Assembly in the United States, and have been commissioned. They will go at their own expense, but will be entertained after their arrival in private families and at hotels.

—It is one-half of school government to expect obedience. And that teacher who is not hopeful of success will generally fail. Hence faith is an important element in the teacher's character. Few pupils make progress if they think the teacher doubts them. They must have the confidence of the teacher; he must let them see that he believes in them. And the teacher must believe in his pupils. Not that they are to be eminent, but that they are doing their best, and are worthy of respect.—N. Y. School Journal.

Thrilling Incidents of the St. Louis Fire.

The saddest case of all was that of young Mr. Hazen, Chief Clerk in the Auditor's office of the Missouri Pacific Railway. The Auditor of the road, Mr. C. L. White, has, for some weeks past, been very sick, and Mr. Hazen was in the habit of nursing him and sitting up with him, in his room, on the sixth floor, at the hotel. After the alarm of fire was given, on yesterday morning, he was the first of the two to wake. He saw the flames coming in, and at once woke up Mr. White. The twain immediately set to work to pick up the bedclothes and make a line. Mr. White says he felt strangely weak at first—so weak, in fact, that he had to put his foot on the sheet and pull with both hands, in order to tighten a knot. When the rope of sheets had been made fast, Hazen said: "White, you'd better go first, you are the lighter, and I'll follow you." Mr. White started and got down to the fifth floor successfully. (The room was on the Walnut street side.) Mr. Hazen followed, and got safely down to the same floor. Here they stopped a few minutes to partially dress themselves, and then got back up into the room for clothes and make a longer line. The line had been lengthened, and Hazen was descending by means of it, when he saw the fifth and sixth floors discharging the rope partial. There was the sharp sound of parting linen and a shrill sound as Hazen struck the corner and fell to the pavement dead. At the time of Mr. Hazen's fall, Mr. White was sitting on the window-sill in the fifth story. He at once proceeded to gather up more clothes and make a better line, and so got down to the fourth floor. Here he called to the firemen below, and lowered his rope, to which they attached a shampoo cord, which he pulled up and made fast, and by a curve down and in Texas Siftings.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Einstmann and Mrs. Seidl, the mother of the latter, occupied a room on the Fourth-street front. They received the warning late, and all hope of escape by the halls was vain. They rigged one of their own and added to it pieces of blankets. Mr. Einstmann, in order to test the strength of the rope, started to climb down first. Slowly but surely one of the flimsy blankets parted its threads, and away down on the hard pavement he fell, with a sickening thud, while the vast crowd groaned in unison. Mr. Einstmann never moved. Mrs. Seidl, an old lady, feeble and weak, did not see this horrible fate of her son-in-law. She started down this ladder of death, and the poor old lady fell to the pavement below, and her mother-in-law, with bones broken and blood oozing from a terrible cut across the forehead, which dyed her silvery hairs. She was not killed, but last reported lay very quiet in bed, in a bedroom in a residence at No. 907 Catalpa street. The doctor said that she could not live through the night. Down in the parlor the form of poor Andrew Einstmann lay, awaiting the burial of to-day. Mrs. Einstmann whose parents lived. She saw the death of husband and mother, and reckless, caring not whether she lived or died, she loosed her hold of the window. Two stories below a man was standing and, as if a window, intent upon saving his own life. The falling body of Mrs. Einstmann struck him. Instinctively he caught her. He held her for an instant. It was enough. The force of her fall was checked, and she fell the one remaining story to the pavement beneath, and was unharmed. "Oh, why did I not die, too?" moaned she, last night, as she sat beside the bed of her husband, and rocked her body backward and forward in the ecstasy of her grief.

Sergeant Fox stated last night to a Globe-Democrat reporter that, in his opinion, one room in the Southern Hotel, on the corner of Walnut and Fourth, was the only room that escaped the tragedy while the fire was raging. Officer Blackford was on the fourth floor endeavoring to aid the inmates to escape. All he had picked in the door of the room referred to by the Sergeant, he heard two pistol-shots, and saw a man and a woman lying on the floor, apparently dead or unconscious. Before he had time to examine them, the suffocating smoke drove him from the apartment, and he thinks that they assuredly perished. The theory of the Sergeant is that the couple were husband and wife, and that, driven distracted at their perilous situation, they preferred instantaneous death to torture by fire, and ended their existence by means of poor and half-witted. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Phelim Toole, an old sailor, as could be told by the "cut of his jib," is employed on Fire Escape No. 3. Some of the ladders had been taken, and, in consequence, much trouble was had in handling the machine.

When it was first raised on Fourth street it was to a window where three women and two men were awaiting rescue. One of the men, a very stout party, made a terrible racket and insisted on being taken down at once. He was frightened into frenzy, but the firemen would not listen to him. By aid of a "blow-line," two of the women were lowered down, and it came the third one's turn, when she, a stout, Irish girl—said, quietly, pointing to the frightened masculine, "Take that poor soul down; I am safe and he safe." All were saved from that window, it is pleasant to add.

Toole himself rescued a number of persons, whom he had to take boldly from the apartments. The individual from New York, who seemed intimidated, and made such an outcry, was not so drunk but that he followed Toole's instructions to close the sash, lay on the sill, and when the escape was raised to its length (the Philadelphia missing) to roll off and drop into Toole's arms—a case of presence of mind which has not often been wrestled.—St. Louis Republican.

A Reprieve—John P. Phair's Narrow Escape.

There was a remarkable development at Windsor (Vt.) Prison yesterday afternoon, where the usual preparations had been made for hanging John P. Phair, of Rutland, at two o'clock, for the murder of Mrs. Friese. At 1:35 there came a telegram from Gov. Fairbanks, at St. Johnsbury, postponing the execution until May 2. The reporters who had gathered to depict the legal killing were out of a job, the undertaker were robbed of the horrid show, and the condemned man, when told the news, covered his face with his handkerchief and wept. There is very good reason for believing that the Governor of Vermont has thus by a narrow chance escaped killing an innocent man.

It will be remembered that the Governor had previously refused to grant a postponement of the hanging, and the story of how he was induced, at the last moment, to change his mind, is a remarkable one. John P. Phair, a Rutland mechanic of amiable, though not absolutely correct, habits, was convicted in October, 1874, of murdering Mrs. Friese, and robbing and burning her house. The case was worked up by local detectives, who lustered matters as much as possible, and who convicted Phair upon the evidence of the clerk of the Adams House, at Boston, and several Jew pawnbrokers of that city, to whom the murderer was alleged to have pawned his victim's effects. Phair left Rutland on the morning of June 9, when the murder was done, some four hours before the fire set by the murderer was discovered. He has steadily alleged from the first that he passed directly through Boston to Providence, where he unsuccessfully sought work, coming back to Boston at noon of the following day, the 10th, and thence going directly to Rutland. Having left town by the noon train on the day of the murder till he re-and of it at Fitchburg, and was soon after arrested. The clerk of the Boston Adams House testified him, on the other hand, that the man who passed the night there June 9; and the two pawnbrokers swore to Phair as the man who pawned with them, on the morning of the 10th, the articles of jewelry belonging to the murdered woman.

But a new witness now arises to substantiate the story told by Phair. He had prepared a circumstantial statement of the matter, his trial and conviction, which was published in the Boston papers of yesterday, and read by M. D. Downing, of the Novelty Manufacturing Company of that city, to a meeting of business men, when the man he met and accompanied from Providence to Boston on the morning of June 10, 1874, when the pawnbrokers had identified Phair was selling them jewelry. Visiting the office of the Boston Chief of Police, Mr. Downing identified Phair's photographs among 200. If correct, this testimony would of course establish an alibi beyond question. Downing telegraphed Gov. Fairbank at Montpelier a statement of his discovery. The Governor, however, was at St. Johnsbury, whither the dispatch was forwarded, arriving twenty-five minutes before the hour for Phair's execution. The Governor, by a mere chance, was at the telegraph office when the dispatch was received, and immediately telegraphed the Sheriff at Windsor to postpone the execution.

This new development in the case, coming so luckily us to save Phair's neck by a t r moments, of course frustes the gratuitous assumption in view of all the facts, there is very general belief in the condemned man's innocence. He has professed religion during his stay in prison, and won the favor and confidence of the officials. Phair in his statement, prepared for publication on the eve of death, of all the circumstances connected with the affair, affirms to the last his unwavering, and probably truthful, declaration that he was in Providence at the alleged great wrong done him. Public feeling being very strongly exelted against him before trial in October, 1874, Phair asked that the case be carried into Bennington County on the ground that it could not be fairly tried in Rutland. The request was denied, and his counsel assigned Lawyer Denton now appointed to the State Supreme Bench—and Col. Veazey to the case; but they have acknowledged, in consequence, much trouble was had in handling the machine.

—Twenty-three ministers and seventeen ruling elders have accepted the appointment to attend the Cumberland Presbyterian Council at Ethaburgh, as delegates from the Northern Presbyterian Assembly in the United States, and have been commissioned. They will go at their own expense, but will be entertained after their arrival in private families and at hotels.

—It is one-half of school government to expect obedience. And that teacher who is not hopeful of success will generally fail. Hence faith is an important element in the teacher's character. Few pupils make progress if they think the teacher doubts them. They must have the confidence of the teacher; he must let them see that he believes in them. And the teacher must believe in his pupils. Not that they are to be eminent, but that they are doing their best, and are worthy of respect.—N. Y. School Journal.

—In one of the towns of Middlesex County, in this State, a week or two days ago, the school committee, by a unanimous vote, informed the Principal of the High School that his services were no longer desired. No fault was found with his abilities as a teacher, or his personal character or influence. The only cause assigned for his dismission was the lack of order in the school. Whereupon the pupils of the discharged master, very sensibly considering that they were most at fault, promptly drew up and signed a compact that they would thenceforth conduct themselves as became ladies and gentlemen, and would manfully and faithfully do all in their power to assist their instructor in securing the order necessary to a successful school. Upon reading this paper the committee at once reinstated the principal in his former position, to the general gratification of the community.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

The Largest Musical Box in the World.

The following very interesting description is from the Commercial Herald, an Anglo-American paper printed in Geneva, Switzerland:

M Samuel Troll, 98, of this city, has just finished, for the Khedive of Egypt, certainly the largest and finest, and, probably, the most unusual musical box ever made. Its material does not cost a baffle-sloped, as large as a two-foot cupboard, and inlaid with zinc and brass wire, and ornamented with lamp chasings and plates. The interior of this remarkable box is a perfect marvel of mechanical ingenuity, for besides all the usual improvements known to musical boxes, a patent modesty, etc., and published with Pate, Bulfinch, Lamb and Company. The receptive consists of 132 tunes supplied by eleven cylinders (which can be exchanged in a minute), and of them being 6 inches in diameter and 20 inches long. Notwithstanding the immense dimensions, and the number of tunes it contains, the instrument is not unwieldy—when the kindness of the proprietor induced to exhibit only to lessen a spring, and it the Hydesmo should grow weary of the monotony of the tunes, he has but to press another, and the ingenious automaton opening manager of M Troll's establishment. Mr Geo. Baker exhibits the assembly supply him with the materials for a few additional hundreds. To complete the description we ought to mention that the case, and part of the box is 20,680 francs. As the peculiarly Swiss flock of art will have Geneva in the world, it is to be hoped that some of those of our readers, who may have time and opportunity, not to omit making a visit to the warehouse in the rue Bonivard where the box is now on exhibition.

From Mr. Baker, who will be happy to show them his big box—for result of eight months' labor—and more money, the successful completion his firm may be justly proud.

—Gen. Sheridan has been granted leave of absence for the remainder of the year, and will visit Europe.

—Ex-Governor Chamberlain, of South Carolina, has been appointed Attorney-General of that State.

—Ex-Governor Ramsey, of Minnesota, has been appointed Minister to Austria.

—Ex-Governor Hendricks, of Indiana, has been appointed Minister to Spain.

—Ex-Governor Dennison, of Ohio, has been appointed Minister to Mexico.

—Ex-Governor Curtin, of Pennsylvania, has been appointed Minister to Russia.

—Ex-Governor Hoffman, of New York, has been appointed Minister to Germany.

—Ex-Governor Geary, of Pennsylvania, has been appointed Minister to England.

—Ex-Governor Morton, of Indiana, has been appointed Minister to France.

—Ex-Governor Seymour, of New York, has been appointed Minister to Italy.

—Ex-Governor Hamilton, of Texas, has been appointed Minister to Mexico

—It is one-half of school government to expect obedience. And that teacher who is not hopeful of success will generally fail. Hence faith is an important element in the teacher's character. Few pupils make progress if they think the teacher doubts them. They must have the confidence of the teacher; he must let them see that he believes in them. And the teacher must believe in his pupils. Not that they are to be eminent, but that they are doing their best, and are worthy of respect.—N. Y. School Journal.

Thrilling Incidents of the St. Louis Fire.

The saddest case of all was that of young Mr. Huzen, Chief Clerk in the Auditor's office of the Missouri Pacific Railway. The Auditor of the road, Mr. C. E. White, has, for some weeks past, been very sick, and Mr. Huzen was in the habit of nursing him and sitting up with him, in his room, on the sixth floor, at the hotel. After the alarm of fire was given, on yesterday morning, he was the first of the tenants to wake. He saw the flames rousing in, and at once woke up Mr. White. The tenth immediately set to work to pick up the bedclothes and make a line. Mr. White says he felt strangely weak at first—so weak, in fact, that he had to put his foot on the sheet and pull with both hands, in order to tighten a knot. When the rope of sheets had been made fast, Huzen said: "White, you'd better go first, you are the lighter, and I'll follow you." Mr. White started and got down to the fifth floor successfully. (The room was on the Walnut street side.) Mr. Huzen followed and got safely down to the same floor. Here they stopped a few minutes to partially dress themselves, and then set to work to pick up more clothes and make a longer line. The line had been lengthened, and Mr. Huzen was descending by means of it, when between the fifth and fourth floors the rope parted. There was the sharp sound of parting linen and a dull sound as Huzen struck the cornice and fell to the pavement dead. At the time of Mr. Huzen's fall, Mrs. White was sitting on the window-sill in the fifth story. He at once proceeded to gather up more clothes and make a better line, and so got down to the fourth floor. Here he called to the firemen below, and lowered his rope, to which they attached a hamper-cord, which he pulled up and made fast, and so came down on terra firma safely.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Eustmann and Mrs. Scott, the mother of the latter, occupied a room on the Fourth street front. They received the warning late, and all hope of escape by the halls was vain. They rigged one of these vain and delusive ropes of blankets. Mr. Eustmann, in order to test the strength of the rope, started to climb down first. Slowly he surely one of the flimsy blankets parted its threads, and away down on the hard pavement he fell, with a sickening thud, while the vast crowd groaned in unison. Mr. Eustmann never moved. Mrs. Scott, an old lady, feeble and weak, did not dare to attempt the perilous descent. She started down this ladder of death, and the poor old lady fell to the pavement below, and lay motionless, with bones broken and blood oozing from a terrible cut across the forehead, which dyed her silvery hairs. She was not killed, but that night she lay very pale and weak, in a bedroom in a residence at No. 907 Catalpa street. The doctor said that she could not live through the night. Down in the parlor the form of poor Andrew Eustmann lay, awaiting the burial of Monday. Mrs. Eustmann alone survived. She saw the fate of her husband and mother, and reckless, caring not whether she lived or died, she started down the ladder. The same stories below a man was climbing out of a window, intent upon saving his own life. The falling body of Mrs. Eustmann struck him. Instinctively he caught her. He held her form in the stout, it was enough. The force of the fall was checked, and she fell the one remaining story to the pavement beneath, and was unharmed. "Oh, why did I make too?" moaned she, last night, as she sat beside the body of her husband, and rocked her body backwards and forward in the ecstasy of her grief.

Sergeant Fox seized last night to the Globe-Democrat reporter that, in his opinion, there was built in the Southern Hotel, was the scene of a terrible tragedy while the fire was raging. Officer Blackford was on the fourth floor endeavoring to aid the inmates to escape. Just as he kicked in the door of the room referred to by the Sergeant, he heard a pistol shot, and only saw a man and woman lying on the floor, apparently dead or unconscious. Before he had time to examine them, the suffocating smoke drove him from the apartment, and he thinks that they assuredly perished. The theory of the Sergeant is that the couple were husband and wife, and that, driven distracted at their perilous situation, they preferred instantaneous death to torture by fire, and ended their existence by means of powder and ball.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Phelim Toole, an old sailor, as could be told by the "cut of his jib," is employed on Fire Escape No. 3. Some of Toole's boldest deeds were performed, in consequence, much trouble was had in handling the machine.

When it was first raised on Fourth street it rose to a window where three women and two men were awaiting rescue. One of the men, a very stout party, made a terrible racket and insisted on being taken down at once. He was frightened into frenzy, but the firemen would not listen to him. By aid of a "blow-line," two of the women were lowered down, and it came the third one's turn, when she—a stout, cool Irish girl—said, quietly, pointing to the frightened masculine: "Take that poor soul down; I can wait and be safe." All were saved from that window, it is pleasant to add.

Toole himself rescued a number of persons, whom he had to take bodily from the apartments. The individual from New York, who seemed inebriated, and made such an outcry, was not so drunk but that he followed Toole's instructions to close the rush, lay on the sill, and when the escape was raised to its length (the dry ladder missing) to roll off and drop into Toole's arms—a case of presence of mind which has not often been equaled.—St. Louis Republican.

A Repriève—John P. Phair's Narrow Escape.

There was a remarkable development at Windsor (Vt.) Prison yesterday afternoon, where the usual preparations had been made for hanging John P. Phair, of Rutland, at two o'clock, for the murder of Mrs. Frizze, At 1.35 there came a telegram from Gov. Fairbanks, at St. Johnsbury, postponing the execution until May 2. The reporters who had gathered to depict the legal killing were out of a job, the audience were robbed of the horrible show, and the condemned man, when told the news, covered his face with his handkerchief and wept. There is very good reason for believing that the State of Vermont has thus by a narrow chance escaped killing an innocent man.

It will be remembered that the Governor had previously refused to grant a respite, and the preparations for the hanging, and the story of how he was induced, at the last moment, to change his purpose is a remarkable one. John P. Phair, a Rutland mechanic of amiable, though not absolutely correct, habits, was convicted in October, 1874, of murdering Mrs. Frizzo, living and boarding in her house. The case was worked up by local detectives, who hastened matters as much as possible, and were convicted Phair upon the evidence of the clerk of the Adams House, at Boston, and several Jew pawnbrokers of that city, to whom the murderer was alleged to have pawned his victim's effects. Phair left Rutland on the morning of time, when the murder was done, some four hours before the fire set by the murderer was discovered. He has steadily alleged from the first that he passed directly through Boston to Providence, where he unsuccessfully sought work, coming back to Boston at noon of the following day, the 10th, and thence going directly toward Rutland, not knowing of the murder till he read of it at Fitchburg, and was seen by the night clerk of the Boston Adams House identified him, on the other hand, as the man who passed the night there June 9, and the two pawnbrokers swore to Phair's having pawned articles with them, on the morning of the 10th, the articles of jewelry belonging to the murdered woman.

But a new witness now arises to substantiate the story told by Phair. He had prepared a circumstantial statement of the matter, and in this trial and conviction, which was published in the Boston papers of yesterday, and read by Mr. D. Downing, of the Novelty Manufacturing Company of Marcellus, who became convinced that Phair was the man in not and accompanied the latter from Providence to Boston on the morning of June 10, 1874, when the pawnbrokers had alleged Phair was selling them jewelry. Visiting the office of the Boston Chief of Police, Mr. Downing identified Phair's photograph among 200. If correct, this testimony would of course establish an alibi beyond question. Downing telegraphed Gov. Fairbanks at Montpelier a statement of his discovery. The Governor, however, was at St. Johnsbury, whither the dispatch was resent, arriving twenty-five minutes before the hour fixed for Phair's execution. The governor, by a mere chance, was at the telegraph office when the dispatch was received, and immediately telegraphed the sheriff at Windsor to postpone the execution.

This new development in the case, coming as it does on the eve of the execution, is one of the most dramatic known to criminal history. In cases of all the sorts, there is very good ground for endeavoring to avoid the imminence. He has professed conversion during his stay in prison, and spent the time in the most comfortable of the cells. Phair in his statement, prepared for publication after his death, of all the circumstances connected with the affair, affirms that he had his innocence, and protests in detail to the alleged great wrong done him. Public feeling being very strongly excited against him before trial in October, 1874, Phair asked that the case be carried into Bennington County on the ground that it could not a fairly tried at home; he also sought a postponement, but both requests were refused. Being too poor to employ counsel, the Court assigned Lawyer Dunton—now appointed to the State Supreme Bench—and C. Veazey to defend him. They have since resigned, according to Phair's statement, that they had too much business on hand to give the matter suitable attention, the first having no papers with which to get the witnesses necessary to prove his story. Then, the time required to work up the case and prepare the defense was not allowed, and they were forced to proceed with very inadequate preparation. The young man last been imprisoned for larceny when a mere boy, and this influenced popular judgment against him. The trial was concluded in four days, and the petition for a new one, that further evidence might be introduced, was refused by the Supreme Court, Chief-Justice Pierrepont being the Judge who had sentenced Phair on that old charge of larceny. Phair further charges that local Detective Thornton and Stevens, who "worked up" the case, were influenced by the reward of $2,500 to bribe the Boston pawnbrokers to testify against him. The Adams House Clerk did not positively identify Phair, though inclined to think him the man who engaged a room there on the night of the 9th.

With regard to his relations to Mrs. Frizze, Phair is very frank. He had visited her several times and taken her to a circus not long before the murder, but had been always on pleasant terms with her. He had not been to the house for two days before the murder, and it is hardly possible that on the morning of the murder he could have gone a mile to his hotel and thence to the depot and got fifty miles away from town by the time the flames, which were set in an upper room, were discovered. He tells of meeting some respectable Rutland business men at Mrs. Frizze's house, and thinks it far more probable that she was killed by married and respectable business men, in whose families she was liable to make trouble, than by Phair, whose character for peaceable does not presuppose a new trial—the Legislature alone can commute his sentence—and is given that the State may investigate, and move in the matter, if it can be shown that Phair was unjustly convicted.—*Springfield (Mass.) The Largest Musical Box in the World.

The following very interesting description is from the Continental Herald, an Anglo-American paper issued in Geneva, Switzerland:

M. Samuel Troll, fils, of this city, has just finished, for the Khedive of Egypt, certainly the biggest and finest, and, probably, the best-toned musical box ever made. Its beautiful cherry case is built—shaped, as large as a full-sized sideboard, and inlaid with zinc and brass work, and ornamented with bronze clusters and figures. The interior of this remarkable box is a perfect marvel of mechanical ingenuity, it includes all the finest improvements in excellence and, added to these, the most wonderful, etc., and is finished with flute, harmonic, drum-table, and castanets. The repetitive powers of the box are supplied by eleven cylinders (which can be exchanged at pleasure), every one of them being of the same size as a large-sized hogshead. Nineteen hundred and 26 inches long. Nineteen hundred and 26 inches long. Nineteen hundred and 26 inches long

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

I write you this week from our writhing clouds of dust such as I imagine to be those that vex the traveler through the great Sahara. The mud, that I was growing about but three days ago by the sun and pulverized by ten thousand wheels, is caught up by the cold zephyrs of our our blustering spring and is thrown, a driving, blinding pall, worse than a genuine London fog over the town. One consolation, and only one results to us in this trial, and that is that our recently street cleaning bureau whose end and refuge in their carriages from the inconvenience of the mud, can in no way escape their edges of the present plague. They have got in choke and cough and wipe their eyes with the rest of us, and that, perhaps, will do more towards making them do their duty than all the Indignation which is finding public and private expression against them.

And it is not alone this department of the city government which makes a foolish exhibition of itself. The police force of this city and Brooklyn have been getting themselves into bad odor lately by a series of brutal and unprovoked assaults upon citizens. A fine cast is becoming an object of fear at most as great as would be a waving lightening with drawn pistol. Half a dozen policemen have, however, been dropped, and one section of the press as there is a returning hope that the active duties of the policemen cause the future which they have been beating upon can at least straighten the Pressers materials all within limit.

Time the three partners in one of the best known auctioneering firms in the country should be suddenly thrown into the street by a hand grenade while quietly conversing in their private office in one of the busiest streets of New York, is of itself a sufficiently strange occurrence; but when to the fact that one added the circumstance which surrounded the Jewett tragedy of last week, the most to course one of the most mysterious which ever perplexed a million of people. Just previous to this strange catastrophe papers were being passed amongst the the withdrawn from business of the Jenkins' member of John Jewett & Sons, while that and of course between. While this business was being completely transacted, but that the young partners of the private room, the other office was filled with clerks going through the routine work of the morning. Suddenly a deafening explosion took place in the inner office, followed by four or five rapid pistol shots. Before the paralyzed employes could move or see or feel the their senses and clear of the principals in the affair, Jewett, daughter and eye-witness, than they rushed in to find two of the remaining partners dead and the other dying. The survivor either can or will give no explanation of the tragedy, the clerks persist in the most profound ignorance of any cause which might have led to the event, and to-day the whole affair remains almost as mysterious as on the afternoon of its occurrence. Where the deadly pistols came from, whether its explosion was by design or accident, and who fired the shots which that killed Orville Jewett are circumstances which may sometime be satisfactorily answered, but for the present they remain among the gladdest conundrums ever propounded in this eventful city.

Ex Governor Tilden is extremely fond of horses, carriage and horseback riding being his chief if not his only recreation. For does he care for the ordinary equine of steady and equable habits, but rather prefers something in the way of a fiery, untamed steed. This preference may some day cost the illustrious gentleman his life. Shortly after his nomination for the Presidency last year he met with an accident while driving near Albany which barely escaped being serious if not fatal, and two or three days ago he had another warning in this city. His team became unmanageable while coming down from Central Park, and running against a heavy coach threw the venerable occupant of the carriage out upon the pavement, whom he was severely but not dangerously bruised.

A dwarf employed in one of the railroad offices in the Grand Central depot came to his death in a peculiar manner yesterday. On last new year's evening he was bitten by a cat, and although suffering no immediate ill effects from the slight wound, expressed the belief that he should die of hydrophobia. A week ago he began to get excited over the matter, took to his bed and in a few days died, the victim of a disease of which he had not the least symptom. This little man, whose name was Beckerman, used to be quite a favorite of the Tweed, who made him doorkeeper of the private office and was always to call him "the dimmie" on account of the extreme and indecorous gravity of his demeanor.

Miss Anna Dickinson, whose debut I mentioned in my last, has completed her short and somewhat stormy season. The critics with one exception made fun of her and Anna, being a plucky little woman, got her "mad" up and talked back. After the press had pitched into her a while she came out one morning with the announcement that after her performances that evening she should have something to say on the subject. A crowd was attracted by this notice, and they got their money's worth in the hour's tirade against the critics which she gave as a sort of allegrieo to her "Crown of Thorns." Anna expresses her willingness to be called rude, and no heroes, and all that, but with abuse of her play and misrepresentation of her reception in Boston she has no patience. She said that in the four days rehearsals which preceded her first appearance in the Hub she went 17 hours without food and 72 hours without rest, and lost 17 pounds of flesh and thus she made a sacrifice of it to the instincts for the nudge of those bleeding New Yorkers who dare to tell a different story about it.

It may seem pretty hard times for Miss Kellogg to meet with such reception as the people of the Centennial exhibit, but a note of the kind is worth something as an encouragement. Less encouraging intelligence is that which the opera house is better. I venture to say, than the steward. Little business indeed.

At Booth's the brilliant team of Janauschek & Palmer have to close, along with the many successful engagements of John McCullough, the Irish star, who has now before him a trip to the Pacific coast, which, the great Californian entertainers being given as they have not been since before Forrest's palmy days. Chamberlain Retires from the Gubernatorial Contest in South Carolina.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 19.

Hon. Chamberlain has just issued the following address, retiring from the contest for the Governorship:

To the Republicans of South Carolina:

By your choice I was made Governor of the State in 1874. At the election on the 7th of November last I was again by your votes elected to the same office. My title to the office, supported by legal and moral ground, is to-day as clear and perfect. By its recent decision and action in the Presidents of the United States, I find myself unable longer to maintain my official rights with the prospect of legal success, and I hereby announce to you that I am unwilling to prolong a struggle which can only bring further confusion upon those who engage in it. In announcing upon these who engage in it. In announcing this conclusion, it is my duty to say, that the Republicans of South Carolina, entered upon their recent political struggle for the maintenance of their political and civil rights, constituting beyond question a large majority of the lawful voters of the State. In a fifed connection with the political party whose control and supporting principle has integrated the equal and political freedom of all men under the Constitution and laws of our country. By honorable and unanimous, which the just wishes of my people will more than be gratified, and which will resume First the recently sworn into office, and again to attempt Executive and leaders, you second the Honorable vote of South Carolina. In accomplishing this result, you became the victims of every form of persecution and insult. From motives of ambition, it is shown that so long even those of your month's name marched because they were beguiled to their principles and convinced that they had been deceived to them by the Nation. You were denied employment, driven from your homes, robbed of the earnings of years of honest industry, hunted for your lives like wild beasts, and your families outraged and scattered, for no crime except your powerful and high determination to exercise your political rights. You resisted, as you had a right to treat, that it by such efforts you established the law supreme of your political party in the Nation, the Government of the United States in discharge of its Constitutional duty, would protect the lawful exercise ment of the State from overthrow at the hands of your political enemies. From causes justly to all, and mentioned by none who regard truth, you have been for a time overcome by such combination and obstacles which have opposed the practical supremacy of the Government which your votes have established. For many weary months you have waited for your deliverance. Wasted by long struggle for the Presidency was in progress you were exhorted in every legitimate way to support the National Republican party to keep your allegiance true to that party in order that your interests from all the hands of the opposite organizations might be certain and complete. Not the faintest whisper of a possibility of disappointment in these hopes and promises ever reached you while the struggle was pending. To-day, April 19, by order of the President, whose your votes above recited from overwhelming defeat the Government of the United States abandons you the liberality—withdraws from you its support with the full knowledge that the lawful Government of the State will be speedily overthrown. By a new interpretation of the Constitution of the United States, at variance alike with practices of the Government and with the decision of the Supreme Court, the Executive of the United States assumes the duty of ascertaining which of two rival State Governments is the lawful one, and, by the withdrawal of the troops now protecting the State from domestic violence, clothes the lawful State Government to struggle with an insurrectionary force too powerful to be resisted. The grounds of policy upon which such action is defended are startling. It is said that the North is weary of the Southern troubles. It was, indeed, so, of the long troubles which sprang from the statesmen frame of lawful citizens, and sought for peace. It sought to cover them from sight in wicked compromises with the wrong which disturbed its peace, but God held it to its duty, until, through a conflict which racked and aggrieved the Nation, the great crime was put away and freedom was ordained for all.

It is said that a majority of the people of the State are unable, in physical force to maintain their rights, this must be left to political servants. Is this a doctrine ever before heard of in our history? If it shall prevail in consequence will not long be confined to South Carolina or Louisiana.

It is said that a Democratic House of Representatives will refuse an appropriation for the Army of the United States if the lawful Government of South Carolina is sustained by military forces. The submission to such coercion marks the degeneracy of the political party of a people which endorses it. A Government worthy of the name, a political party to which power, never be maintained should such a threat.

But the end has gone forth. No argument or considerations which your friends could present here suffice to avert the disaster. No effective means of resistance to the consummation of the wrong are left.

My street legal rights are, of course, wholly unaffected by the action of the President. No court of the State has jurisdiction to pass upon the title to my office. No lawful Legislature can be convened except upon my call. If the use of these powers is denied me by the authorities to our cause I should not shrink from any sacrifice which might confirmit me. It is a case in which, by the light of reason and conscience, a man might well lay down his life, but, to my mind, my present responsibility involves the consideration of the effect of my action upon those who have confidently trusted me, and who are here willing to ask you, Republicans of South Carolina, to risk all dangers and endure all hardships until relief should come from the Government of the United States; that relief will never come. I cannot ask you to follow me further. In my judgment, I can no longer serve you by further resistance to the impending calamity.

With gratitude to God for the measure of endurance with which He has bestowed me, and with gratitude to you for your boundless confidence in me, with unabated love for country, for our noble-ness fidelity to the cause in which we have struggled, I say farewell to you and to the people of the state that. I shall no longer actively assist me right to the office of Governor of South Carolina. In the sincere and earnest purpose of the President of the United States in the policy which compels me to retire, my judgment, of course, is unqualifiedly honorable and patriotic. I devoutly prayed results can only vote the wisdom of his action, and that pious, justice, freedom and prosperity may henceforth be the portion of every citizen of South Carolina.

(Signed) D. H. CHAMBERLAIN,
Governor of South Carolina.

LETTER TO GOV. CHAMBERLAIN.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 19.

To His Excellency D. H. Chamberlain, this morning:

Dear Sir—Returning to the views severally expressed by us during the personal conference we had the honor to hold with you yesterday in regard to the political complications which have grown out of the late election in this State, we beg leave to express our hearty and unreserved approval of your action, after mature deliberation and the gravest reflection which we have been able to bestow upon the subject. While we are not less inspired with solicitude for the dignified and resolute manner in which you consistently maintained your claims to the Gubernatorial chair by virtue of the election held in November last than we are solemnly impressed with the validity of your title to the office, we are unanimous in the belief that to prolong the contest in the absence of that moral aid to which we feel ourselves and party justly entitled at the hands of the National Administration, embodied in a large measure through the same agencies which are now held to be insufficient for maintenance, will be to incur the responsibility of keeping alive partisan prejudices which are in the last degree detrimental to the best interests of the people of the State, and perhaps of precipitating a physical conflict that could have but one result to our defenseless constituency. We cannot afford to contribute, however indirectly, to such a catastrophe, even in the absence of what we know to be our rights. We are agreed, therefore, in counseling you to discontinue the struggle for the occupancy of the Gubernatorial chair, convinced as we are that in view of the time—as added to which the acquiescence has been secured by the action of the National Administration, your retirement will involve no surrender of principles, no will destructive be misapprehended by the great body of that political party to which, in common with ourselves, you steadfastly, and whose success in the past in this State has been ennobled by your untiring zeal and unselfish services.

We have the honor to be, very respectfully, yours.

The Foster-Matthews Letters.

The Foster-Matthews letters and the accompanying statements show those facts.

That there was no "bargain" in the sense that is supposed the term; the South-ern Democrats asked for some assurances with which they could justify their course to their constituents, but they made no absolute promise on their side and received nothing save statements as to what Messrs. Matthews and Foster believed President Hayes would do.

That there was no pretense on the part of Messrs. Foster and Matthews that they possessed any authority from the President-elect to negotiate in his behalf or make terms for him with anyone; their letters are carefully worded to show that they are only expressions of opinion, derived from personal acquaintance with Mr. Hayes and individual familiarity with his opinions, but not written after consultation with him or by his authority.

That the assurances then given by these gentlemen have not as yet been in any respect falsified. The intention of the President to deal with "the Southern question" as to terminate "the military policy," which has wrought so wretchedly in the past, is well known, and there is no doubt that he is firmly resolved to afford such a solution of this knotty problem as shall devolve upon the South the wholesome duty of managing its local matters and shall end the constant intervention of the National troops in the home affairs of that section. It being always understood that no sacrifice of Equal Rights will be involved. In so doing he will fully justify all that there really is in the Matthews-Foster "assurances," which also contain nothing upon which to base that demand for precipitate action which now forms the staple of Democratic complaint.

That the President is in no manner committed to a line of measures, he is not responsible for them and might pursue a course precisely opposite to that outlined in them without bad faith on his part, except in so far as some repudiation of the declarations of his letter of acceptance and of his inaugural address should be implied.

That these documents afford no foundation whatever for any charge of bad faith against anyone; the worst that can be fairly said of them on the one side or the other writers were not justified in even seeming to seek to commit the new Administration to any political policy without definite authority, and on the other that their judgment was at fault, and that by their failure to secure this they left others at an important crisis.—Detroit Tribune.

MECHANICAL AND SCIENTIFIC.

—An eminent French physiologist holds that the numerical proportion of giants in each generation is the same, and that individuals a head taller or a foot out-men of any generation they will present just the same varieties of stature as the hundred tallest men of the preceding one.

A French paper says that "an American company proposes to introduce fur seals from Alaska into Lake Superior. The temperature of the lake is considered to be sufficiently cold for the purpose, and the company hopes to obtain from Congress and the Canadian Parliament an act protecting the creatures from slaughter for twenty years, after which time it is supposed they will be sufficiently acclimatized and numerous to form subjects of sport." As the fur seal is a marine animal and Lake Superior is a body of fresh water, the success of the experiment and even the authenticity of the story is at least doubtful.

—Two very remarkable lathes have recently been made in London, with the view of being prepared to turn out rapidly a succession of eighty-ton guns, and, if requisite, to set to work upon monsters still more tremendous. These lathes are nearly eighty feet long, and lifted with double saddles and quadruple gearing, and made so as to be capable of slicing off iron shavings eight inches broad, and thick in proportion, at a cut. Mention is also made of a vast and powerful crane which has been planned and is about to be erected at the Woolwich gun factories. It is described as a kind of circular traveler. On a strong pedestal, thirty-two feet high, two arms or branches will radiate horizontally, like the hands of a watch, the extremities of which will rest upon a circular platform supported by columns. The bowches will be moved by steam-power all around the compass, pivoting on the entire, and it is estimated that, with the tackle with which it is to be provided, they will lift the prodigious weight of 1,000 tons.

The Hayes Household.

The pleasant family who are domiciled at the White House for the ensuing four years are well worthy the admiration and regard of all Americans who recognize the family as the foundation of good government and the basis of a perfect condition of citizenship.

The family, the church and the state are the fundamental social principles, by means of which gregarious mankind is made comfortable, masterly and safe.

Charles Foster, of Ohio, in one of his humorous campaign speeches, said in Mr. Tilden that he had never loved anything but the Democratic party, and was not fit to be the occupant of the White House. Whether it was contemplated in the building of the house of the President at Washington, that bachelor Presidents might sometimes be inmates there, is the subsequent conclusion not. But no mother of us all will be sorry that lumpy children are now in their own the broad stairways, through the blossoming conservatory, make the spacious halls musical with laughter and shouts in the cozy breakfast parlor and dining-room to go up in plentiful family converse over their tea with little domestic joys and sorrows.

I say sorrows unadvisedly, for the Hayes household do not have the old world semblance of ever having seen trouble and sorrow. They seem a healthy, comely, affectionate, well-to-do group, who feed with gold spoons in their mouths, with traditional unalloyed fabulous wealth, and their star in the east steadily leading, bowing them up to distinction and culmination in splendor over their heads when it attained them to the highest place in the land.

President Hayes is a blonde, with tawny gold-brown tints in his hair and beard. He resembles the purest type of the intellectual German. In physique, commanding and healthful in manners, refinedly dignified, in principles, true and inflexible for the right. He is a noble model for the youth of America. Vulgar jests, and profanity, and intoxicating drinks he contemns as unworthy of correct manhood; and he believes he can enforce my principle or principle of conduct upon his boys that he does not thoroughly practice himself.

Mrs. Hayes has the ever consolation of the Spanish race. She is purely American, however, and with her large, brilliant, black eyes and wavy hair, which set off the rich bloom on her lips and cheeks, she is a healthy, handsome brunette, and her manners and culture make her a most gracious and courteous as become her Southern style of beauty.

When I first saw her years ago in Cincinnati, she appeared a quiet, domestic, winning and pleasing lady. Her husband's rapid promotion in military and civil honors brought her out of her domesticity to take a part in public life, and he was always glad to by much of the burden of entertaining the crowds of people who made demands upon his time upon her willing shoulders.

Her ready tact and adaptation made her his invaluable coadjutor. With the social graces and the domestic virtues and fortunes, with the statesman she is versed in finance and legislation; with the average politician she has the ever consolation of small talk, she adapts her subject and style to her hearer, and one in observing her, does not know which is the more at her wit and success or the complete knowledge of human nature, she evinced in the varied company that "unkindly management of her rooms."

She is as proud of her boys as the Cornelia of Gracchi, the noble three, to the European, as her only jewels.

Mrs. Hayes does not care for jewels; she prefers flowers for her personal adornment. She appeared at Mrs. Grant's inaugural ball in white crushed silk, with her magnificent hair brushed smoothly back over her classic head, and had no other ornaments than a bouquet of natural flowers they had brought from their home in Ohio.

Mrs. Grant wore diamonds and pearls. Mrs. Hayes was conspicuous among all the others, in her attire, for the absence of precious stones. She is a model housekeeper, and is very strong in religious faith. President Hayes, although of Presbyterian proclivities, attends every service with his wife. Their son, Webb and Rutherford, have the oldfull, happy nature of their mother, and the ambitious and high-minded spirit of the father. Scott and Fanny are the joyous little pets of the household. The daughter is but little younger than Miss Jennie, and is seven years of age. Scott is a baby boy five or six years of age, and is, of course, the favorite of the family.

It is a little singular, and a pleasing circumstance withal, that Rutherford, the eldest son, grandfather of the domestic friends and classmates at Cornell University, and that they should go to Washington together, one to witness the outgoing of his father as President, and the other the incoming of his father as President, and that they should sleep together at the White House before the new President was inaugurated.

In the prediction of all who know them that this charming family will make the White House the model of American homes, so far as mutual love and courtesy and grace of daily living can make it so.

President Hayes has many evening visits always among his friends for coveted love of family. He belief is that:

"To make my happy home a shrine,
To me the true patriot duty is divine."

For endless end for wife,
Is the true patriot and sublime.

The green and gold of Ohio.

When the telegram was received of his nomination for the third term as Governor of Ohio, he was playing base ball with his boys, at his beautiful suburban home at Fremont.

"Well, boys," said he, "I shall have to stop playing and go to work again; but we'll have the game out, anyway."

It is said by intimate family friends that even in intricate State matters, Mrs. Hayes is a shrewd, discreet, confiding wife, friend and adviser.

His intelligent interest in political matters, her ease and dignity as a hostess in right and duty, have led him to approve of her suggestions in affairs where a woman's interest and intuition does not often lead her.

Some women irritate and aggravate a man by their petty spites and exactions till they throw overboard their strongest ballast. It is never well to listen to counsel unless it is judicious, and the larger the intelligence and comprehension of the situation, the safer the counsel.

The Hayes family are patricians by nature and culture, but democrats in thought and practice.

It is only the parvenus of society who are set up by a "little brief authority" and the evanescent condition of office holding.

The Hayes household will return to their beloved homestead the same courteous, quiet, happy, self-sustained group, learning in the future high reflection of haughty and autocratic airs, nor setting themselves above their old neighbors and friends as dictators in fashion and social customs because of honors at Washington.—*Cor. Packard's Protest.

NEW ORLEANS, April 8.

Guy Packard addresses the following open letter to the President:

STATE OF LOUISIANA, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, }
NEW ORLEANS, April 5, 1877. }

To His Excellency, President Hayes, Washington, D. C.

SIR—Permit me respectfully to call your attention to the fact that in the instructions issued to the Commissioners dated 29th day of March, 1877, in regard to the duties of which they are charged, no reference is made to the Constitution of the United States.

1. Who is the legal Executive?

2. Does domestic violence and insurrection prevail within the meaning of Sec. 4, Art. 4, of the Constitution of the United States?

3. Who is the legal Government entitled to recognition?

4. Who is the legal Judiciary?

5. Does domestic violence and insurrection prevail within the meaning of Sec. 4, Art. 4, of the Constitution of the United States?

To the first question, the answer is plain. The Constitution does not include any examination into, or report upon, the facts of the recent State election, or the canvass of the votes cast at that election. It declares that those questions from all inquiry as to who are entitled to the office of Governor and Lieutenant-Governor by virtue of the late election, and the canvass of votes by the General Assembly, and sions as to who were elected by the other disputed State offices. It is my desire that searching and satisfactory investigation should be made upon this important point. I believe the Nation will judge of my course according to whether it be a fact that I was elected. I am confirmed in think that your Excellency is in doubt upon this point, as representations for recognition of my Government have not yet been requested to, and consequently that, having received several telegrams from some of the Republican Presidential Electors, I did not anticipate the step now made in regard to question.

It further seems to me that, in considering the situation of affairs in this State, it is of paramount importance to ascertain whether the Supreme Court appointed or elected by the Constitution by my predecessor, Gov. Kellogg, is the legal Court. It is to be determined by the Commission, the assessment of taxes to be well probably prove of assistance in the solution of existing difficulties. The Supreme Judicial Court is found to be entitled to no such consideration than any other equal number of lawyers convened on the call of any one other citizen of the State, the Nation will surely justify the Commission in so declaring. By investigation on this point, I believe your Excellency will be able to ascertain the lawful Executive and Judiciary of this State, and the Commission will be enabled to report upon the question of affairs in this State essentially needed.

Who then is the legal Government entitled to recognition?

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
S. B. PACKARD, Governor.

A Wonderful Lake.

We have more than once heard of the wonderful properties of the waters of Deep Spring Valley Lake, but, until the present, but with sufficiency of detail to give the story full credence. Lieut. Wotherspoon, Company B, 12th United States Infantry in command of the relief party for Capt. Jen's Indians, passed several days last week in the valley, and bears witness to the literal truth of the remarkable phenomena. These are, that at certain times the lucks, which visit the lake in great numbers, become so loaded down with crystallizations of borax, salt or some other substance, that they are utterly unable to fly, and while in this condition become an easy prey to the Indians, who wade into the water and take them in their hands. In fact, this substance often collects upon the birds' bills in such weight as to materially drag their heads under water and drown them. As asserted by Mr. Beasely and family, who have lived near the lake for years, the ducks are so loaded with several pounds weight of this substance—not less than ten pounds in some instances. During the first stages the crystals are quite evenly disposed over all the birds' feathers above water, sticking them together in a mass as it grows. Then accumulates in lumps of strings forming drags or rafts with which the bird can swim but slowly, if at all; and if tourred from the hill or head, soon causes its death by drowning.

The crystallization always takes place in the night time, and entirely disappears after a few hours' exposure to the morning sun, or in the fresh water springs on the border of the lake. The conditions necessary to produce the crystals in this manner are no less remarkable. It occurs during the spring months only, and only on clear nights with a north wind; never on cloudy nights or with the wind from any other quarter than the north. The lake, which is about a mile and a quarter in length and perhaps a mile in width, is only about three feet in depth at the deepest. Strong winds, no matter from what direction, agitate its waters to such a degree as to form a milky or yellowish cast. If this effect was produced by the desicating north winds exclusively, it might afford some clue to the cause of the excessive crystallization at such times, but it is not; other winds stir the gases from the bottom quite as much or more than that.

During the Lieutenant's stay in the valley the wind one night was from the north, but the sky was overcast, as foretold by the signs of the weather, and next night next morning. The following night the wind was from the same point, but clear, and the crystals were in evidence. The Indians spend the entire night in singing and in their peculiar incantations, in full faith that they will be rewarded by a great haul of ducks in the early morning. Their faith was fully realized on this occasion, for before the sun's rays had touched the weird water. Capt. Joe and his band had eight scores of fine ducks piled up on the shore, part of their incantations in which there is obvious virtue. A detail, each with a fork or fishpand, is stationed in or near the fresh water springs on the edge of the lake, and while singing, dancing and doing other necessary things as required by the chief Indians, at the same time keep the ducks away from the fresh water, where otherwise they would be safe from these rats of crystals. The principal supply of the lake is from two immense and bottomless pools or artesian waters located quite close to its edge. The valley itself is entirely surrounded by high mountains, its soil and general characteristics being nothing unusual for the vicinity. The waters are by no other lake within their knowledge ever affects ducks as does this. Indeed, without a doubt, many other birds whose waters are even more impregnated with salt, borax, magnesia, or solution, than the rabbit, appears to be. The sergeant brought over a quantity of crystal, which he will submit for scientific analysis, together with specimens of the ducks produced on the birds as here outlined.

The scientists will have something to puzzle their brains for some time, we think, before they educe a perfectly satisfactory explanation of the phenomena, all the facts considered.—Inyo (Cal.) Independent.

Pease.

The pea will succeed in any soil in which ordinary vegetables thrive, but a calcareous loam, rich in lime, and when the soil is deficient in lime it must be added to it in some form or other, particularly if the subsoil consists of any kind of brand, remove the crust and cutter lightly. Farmers as Bookkeepers.

FREQUENTLY have we referred to the humiliating truth that farmers neglect many of the necessary qualifications for the successful transaction of their business. Lately an association of farmers held in their midst a conference on their transactions, the President of the association was astonished that it was expected of farmers to keep a correct set of books, and said if that was what was demanded other persons than farmers would have to be employed to conduct their business. This was truly a humiliating admission, but the worst feature of it was the evident conclusion that it was not necessary or expected that farmers should be thus qualified, or thus conduct business.

And yet farmers' sons go to school from five till twenty-one. The property of the country is taxed enormously to support schools. Farmers ought to have good schools. Long and idle winter evenings, and many of them are idle the entire winter, and yet, like young men of other occupations, a part of the winter is wasted. The condition as to all the qualifications is the great business of life than school time. Vacation time is when the amusement commences. And yet it is not so much the fault of the boys as their parents who neglect their duty, and who, with examples of the results of a lack of all effort to improve the intellect with which they were naturally endowed. And knowing the truth of the confession of that President of the association, how forcibly has the fact been forced on our mind that there is missionary work for all who have the philanthropy and intelligence we have to spare. Is there no way to arouse the lethargy into which agriculture has fallen? Is there no local pride which can be rekindled? We grow! along, and if a President, a Secretary or a Treasurer or our Agricultural Bureau is wanted, a professional or a commercial man has to do it. If an agricultural address is demanded, or Farmers' Institute conducted, lawyers, doctors, merchants and ministers have to take the lead. If an agricultural paper is demanded it is generally drawn from a crowd of impracticable theorists who have failed in all other branches of business, as a proper person to teach farming. And all this is not the result of a lack of natural talent, but from a misdirected education and the hereditary idea that it is no use for them to wake up and qualify themselves for business and for success. The truth is agriculturists will never be respected until they respect themselves. It will never be a general success until they dignify it. They will never do business men until they use and improve what God has given them. And until there is co-operative association to be to conduct for an agent or manager to a branch of industry which has long since learned that it was unwise to be qualified to transact any business. We wish we could drive home this lesson with the sting of the scorpion's tail, which we would propel a Corliss engine.—Iowa State Register.

Old and Young.

The death of old Lathbush, the British officer, in New York, reminds us of the unbounded reverence in the number of persons who reach a century. Lathbush, may or may not have lived till this case deserves as much record that it might be investigated, but there are undoubtedly numerous instances every year of persons living whose lives exceed a century. Of old negroes and immigrants, who can present no evidence of record, it is not necessary to take account, but centenarians of a better established character are almost ceasing to become rare. Medical cases are now frequently reported than formerly, or whether it is explained by the better success in modern times in preserving health, we have not yet data enough to determine. We believe it is pretty well established that life is growing longer. The Pall Mall Gazette, by the way, draws a striking contrast between the men at the head of affairs in Europe now, and at the beginning of this century. The leaders of European government and opinion are now nearly all men from sixty to eighty-five years of age, though, by the way, we undervaluate Gave Bismarck ten years too much the other day, he being sixty-two instead of seventy-two. Beaconsfield is seventy two, Gladstone sixty-eight, Granville sixty-four, Derby eighty-one, Tennyson sixty-seven, the English Chief-Justice seventy-five, Longfellow is seventy-one, Emerson seventy-five, Bryant eighty-two, Victor Hugo seventy-five, Gortschakoff is seventy-nine, MacMahon sixty-nine, Thiers and Emperor William eighty, Jules Simon sixty-three, the Pope nearly eighty-five, and his most distinguished predates long in years. In 1800, Napoleon at thirty-one was the master of France, and Pitt was in the sixteenth year of that premiership of England to which he had been elevated at the age of twenty-five. Fox was fifty-five, and Grenville forty. the leading English statesmen of the day. Wellington and Napoleon were only forty-six at Waterloo, and at that age Frederick the Great was at the height of his military fame, as well as Washington. But in 1870-71, Moltke was seventy. These contrasts are certainly curious. They do not hold this side of the ocean, but they may seventy-five years from now, when we have become more experienced and less ardent livers.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

A Card for National Readers.

Irrational people always stand good advice, and it is nothing to them if it is frequently conspicuous. Hands ignorant, prejudiced and careless will do as they please, for—as, on the other hand, is a notable characteristic of the rational and to be appreciated—they will do as they should and be glad to them. Protect the system against disease and while under epidemic influences the nervous and the dyspeptic, by toning the whole body, purifying the blood, and by the use of a natural and lasting dependency with the purest and most efficient of botanic preparations, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. That these facts belong to use, and that it appears as well as multitude beforehand and resultant fevers, are facts established by indisputable testimony. To enjoy the full blessings of "a sound mind and a sound body" in all their plenitude, try a course of this sterling medicine.

Chamberlain Retires from the Gubernatorial Contest in South Carolina.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 19.

Gov Chamberlain has just issued the following address, retiring from the contest for the Governorship:

To the Republicans of South Carolina:

By your choice I was made Governor of this State in 1874. At the election on the 7th of November last I was again by your votes elected to the same office. My title to the office, upon every legal and moral ground, is lawful as clear and perfect. By the recent decision and action of the President of the United States, I find myself unable longer to maintain my official rights with the prospect of final success, and I hereby announce to you that I am unwilling to prolong a struggle which can only bring further suffering upon those who engage in it. In announcing this resolution it is my duty to say to you that the Republicans of South Carolina entered upon their recent political struggle for the maintenance of their political and civil rights, constituting beyond question a large majority of the lawful voters of the State. You utilized yourselves with that peaceful purity whose ordered and inspiring principle has hitherto been the envy and political fetishism of all men under the Constitution and laws of our country. By brave efforts and sacrifices, whose the just verdict of history will receive from my conviction soon now cast upon them by political phantom and timbers, you secured the Electoral vote of South Carolina. In accomplishing this result, you become the victims of many lions of pecuniary and other loss. From intimidation, it is shown that no less than 1,000 of your number were murdered, the same used were prohibited in their principles, and exercise the rights solemnly guaranteed to them by the Nation. You were denied employment, driven from your homes, robbed of the outcomes of years of honest industry, hunted for your lives like wild beasts and our families outraged and scattered, for no offense except your peaceful and firm determination to exercise your political rights. You united, as you had a right to insist that if by such efforts you established the lawful supremacy of your political party in the Nation, the Government of the United States in discharge of its Constitutional duty, would protect the lawful Government of the State from overthrow at the hands of your political enemies. From causes potent to all men and perplexed by those who control them, you have been able to or resume unlawful combinations and obtain a harsh law opposed the practical supremacy of the Government which your votes have established. For many weary years you have waited for your relief over some. While the long struggle for the Presidency was in progress you were exhorted by every representative and organ of the National Republican party to keep your allegiance true to that party, to believe that deliverance was in the hands of your oppressors ought to be certain and complete. Not the hottest hunger of a possibility of disappointment in these hopes and promises ever reached you while the struggle was pending. To day, April 10, by order of the President, whom your votes alone caused from over the Nation defeat, the Government of the United States abandons you deliberately—withdraws from you its support with the full knowledge that the lawful Government of the State will be superseded by Mr. Brown. By a new interpretation of the Constitution of the United States, at variance alike with practices of the Government and with the decision of the Supreme Court, the Executive of the United States ex-cedes the duty of ascertaining which of two rival State Governments is the lawful one, and by the withdrawal of the troops now protecting the State from Brownlander violence, ranges to the United States Government in struggle with an insurrectionary force to power it to be resisted. The grounds of policy upon which such action is declared are startling. It is said that the North is weary of the Southern problem. It was worn, say they, of the long troubles which spring from the unreasonable crime of chattel slavery, and hasped for repose. It sought to cover them from sight by wicked compromises with the wrong which disturbed its peace; but failed to do so, and is now, at last, through a conflict which racked and agonized the Nation, the guilty crime was pursued and freedom was ordained for all.

It is said that a majority of the people of the State are unable, by physical force to maintain their rights, they must be left to political servitude. Is this a doctrine ever before heard of in our history? If lawful personal chooses upon which can be confined to South Carolina or Louisiana.

It is said that a Democratic House of Representatives will refuse an appropriation for the Army of the United States if the lawful Government of South Carolina is sustained by military forces. This submission to such coercion marks the degeneracy of the political party or people who submit to it. A Government worthy of the name, a political party fit to wield power, never became defeated at such a refusal.

But the effort has gone forth. No agreement or consideration which your friends could present have sufficed to avert the disaster. No effective means of resistance to the consummation of the wrong are left.

My surest legal rights are, of course, wholly unaffected by the action of the President. No court of the State has jurisdiction to pass upon the title to any office. No lawful Legislature can be convened except upon my call. If the case of those very prominent citizens successful over the lawful supremacy of your political party in the National Government of the United States in discharge of its Constitutional duty, would protect the lawful Government of the State from overthrow at the hands of your political enemies. From causes potent to all men and perplexed by those who control them, you have been able to or resume unlawful combinations and obtain a harsh law opposed the practical supremacy of the Government which your votes have established. For many weary years you have waited for your relief over some. While the long struggle for the Presidency was in progress you were exhorted by every representative and organ of the National Republican party to keep your allegiance true to that party, to believe that deliverance was in the hands of your oppressors ought to be certain and complete. Not the hottest hunger of a possibility of disappointment in these hopes and promises ever reached you while the struggle was pending. To day, April 10, by order of the President, whom your votes alone caused from over the Nation defeat, the Government of the United States abandons you deliberately—withdraws from you its support with the full knowledge that the lawful Government of the State will be superseded by Mr. Brown. By a new interpretation of the Constitution of the United States, at variance alike with practices of the Government and with the decision of the Supreme Court, the Executive of the United States exercises the duty of ascertaining which of two rival State Governments is the lawful one, and, by the withdrawal of the troops now protecting the State from Brownlander violence, ranges to the United States Government in struggle with an insurrectionary force to power it to be resisted. The grounds of policy upon which such action is declared are startling. It is said that the North is weary of the Southern problem. "Little Jake," the Republican nominee for mayor of East Saginaw, is a heavy advertiser, but a little touchy about what the papers say about him, and it was funny to see how the Courier tried to say he would not be a good mayor, and at the same time labor to keep that log ad.

Hon. D. C. Leach has sold his interest in the Springlight Mo., Patriot Advertiser, and will, about May 1st., commence the publication in that city of an Agricultural journal to be called the Southwest Farmer. President Hayes has thus far only one pair of black horses, which he brought from Ohio, and which are not remarkable for good looks. The colored coachman who came with them says that the President only had one carriage, and that wasn't worth bringing here, but that he will buy one soon.

The New York City newspapers have pursued Anna Dickinson with criticisms till it amounts to persecution. A few nights ago, after Miss Dickinson had filled an engagement for the evening at the Eagle theatre, she appeared before the curtain and answered her critics as only Miss Dickinson can. She spoke for an hour, giving those salaried pencil shovers known as "theatrical critics," all the solid facts their mental stomachs can digest for a month.

The rapid increase of steamers on the chain of the great northern lakes is the feature of the lake trade during the last three years. The number employed in 1876 is reported to have been 885, their tonnage being 190,367. The number of sailing vessels has fallen off heavily, decreasing from 3,207 in 1872 to 1,282; the tonnage, however, not going down in quite the same proportion, but to such an extent that there were 200,000 tons less to the trade last year than in 1872.

The L'Anse News does not extend a very cordial hand to the legislators who expect to visit the Northern Peninsula in the summer. It says: "They will come up here and steal specimens of copper, knock pieces of iron ore down from Norway pine, and fill their bellies full whitefish—which, let us hope, will generate brains enough in some portion of their human forms divine to give them an understanding of the wants of this region—then go back home to deliver lectures to crowds of open mouthed, unkempt, dirty faced swine herders, upon the wonders of an unknown world. But come on, gentlemen, come on!"

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

FOREIGN.

THE news from Constantinople and St. Petersburg, on the 14th and 15th, indicated the immediate precipitation of hostilities. It was stated that Austria had resolved upon the armed occupation of Bosnia; that the Greek Government had dictated the raising of an army of 60,000 men for active and immediate service; that an international outbreak was imminent in Russian Poland and contiguous Russian Provinces, that the Russian fleets in the Atlantic and Pacific had been ordered to rendezvous in the Mediterranean, and that Turkey had begun the erection of a bridge across the Danube at Kalafat.

A PESTH dispatch of the 16th says Austria would not long remain an indifferent spectator to the action of Turkey and Russia, and that her position would be that of defensive neutrality.

BERLIN specials of the 12th say that 239,000 Germans in Russia were about emigrating to Poland and the United States to avoid draft into the army.

THE Montenegrin deputies left Constantinople for home on the 12th, the negotiations with Turkey having failed.

ACCORDING to a Vienna telegram of the 17th, efforts were making by Austria and England to induce the resumption of negotiations between Turkey and Russia, basing the settlement of the Treaty of Paris as a starting point.

A ST. PETERSBURG telegram of the 18th says the Emperor Alexander had decided to demobilize 120,000 men for the protection of the capital against the expected attack of Turkish irregular troops. It was reported from Constantinople that the Porte would persist in a state of war throughout Turkey.

ACCORDING to Vienna dispatches of the 19th, negotiations were still going on, with a view to a negotiation of peace between Turkey and Russia. The Russian Secretary of Legation had negotiated a suspension of the Black Sea blockade, but the peace negotiations were still in progress. The Russian Secretary of Legation was engaged in negotiations for the passage of the Turkish fleet through the Dardanelles. Two conferences were being held at Galatz, between delegates of the Russian and Turkish forces.

AN explosion in a coal mine at Pontypridd Wales, on the 6th, imprisoned one man behind a caving of coal 120 feet thick. Communication with the imprisoned man was established on the 9th. Two were saved, but four had succeeded in other parts of the mine and were believed to have perished.

ADVICES from Belgrade telegrams of the 19th to hand last night around Nissa.

FIRES specials of the 19th say the Russian embassy had been closed, and that Russian interests would be cared for at the German Embassy.

DOMESTIC.

IT was reported at Deadwood, D. T., on the 13th, that 100 of Crazy Horse's band of Indians had taken to the field again. Because of the numbers of troops it was supposed to be the dissension practiced by Spotted Tail. In representation that only the arms taken by them in an Indian fight would be demanded of them upon their surrender at Red Cloud, when in reality no Government demanded of them all arms and ponies.

A PASCAGOULA (Ga.) dispatch of the 14th states that the steamship Lee, from that port for Boston, was destroyed by fire at three a. m. on the 13th in a heavy southeast gale eighty miles southeast Tybee, thirty miles off shore. Thirteen of the crew were saved on a life-raft. The passengers, numbers and names unknown, were all lost.

AMONG 1,000 Northern hostiles made a formal surrender of their arms, ponies, etc., to Gen. Crook at the Spotted-Tail Agency in Nebraska, on the 14th. Their entry is said to have been very dramatic. Entering Spotted Tail's camp and discharging their guns in the air, they called forth the whole force of that Chief to greet them, after which their Head Chief delivered a short speech to Gen. Crook, indicating his desire for peace by laying his rifle at the General's feet.

THE Chicago Journal of the 17th states that Major Heath had received a letter from Minneapolis, asking for information as to a lottery scheme, the drawing of which is advertised to come off at "Crosby's Opera House, Chicago, June 12, 1877," and that the scheme was the Louisiana City and Topeka lotteries. The Directors' names are appended to the circular, but the Journal says no such persons can be found in the city, and that paper pronounces the whole thing to be a swindle.

IT was reported at Omaha (Nebraska), Neb., on the 18th, that Crazy Horse, with about 2,000 of his people, was drawing beside that Agency with the intention of surrendering. This will leave the country clear of hostile Indians, with the exception of Sitting Bull's Band and some few stragglers from the other bands that have come into the Agencies.

THE fresh fruit shipped to Europe from this country during the eighteen months ending March last amounted to 34,278,810 pounds, valued at 824,026,483. The statement shows a gradual increase from 36,000 pounds in October, 1875, to 6,767,895 in March the present year.

PERSONAL.

AT a meeting in New York, on the 16th, of the Directors of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad Company, Hugh Riddle was elected President and David H. Dows, Vice-President. Mr. Riddle has been for a long time Vice-President and Superintendent of the road.

MAJ. RENO, recently tried by court-martial on the charge of insulting the wife of a brother officer was sentenced to be dismissed from the service. He forwarded to the War Department a request for delay in the presentation of the case to the President, claiming that he has additional evidence that will lead to a mitigation of his sentence, and the request has been granted.

A DECISION in favor of Myra Clark Gaines, involving millions of dollars' worth of property in New Orleans, has been rendered by Justice Billings, of that city. The litigation has extended over forty years, and it is said the decision ends the struggle in favor of the plucky claimant.

IT was reported from New York, on the 17th, that Wm. M. Tweed had sent to Attorney-General Fairchild a proposition that, in return for liberty and rest, he would yield up all his property, be a faithful witness on behalf of the people, and make a full disclosure of his criminal companions. The World gives what purports to be a synopsis of this proposition, which is in the nature of a confession, and which implicates several prominent citizens of the city and State, including members of the Legislature. Many of those alleged to be implicated have since emphatically denied being guilty of any fraudulent transactions.

A BANQUET was given at the Executive Mansion, in Washington, on the evening of the 19th, in honor of the Grand Duke Alexis and Orestantzoff. The guests present included the Russian Legation, Diplomatic Corps, Members of the Cabinet, Cabinet, Admiral Porter and the Justices of the Supreme Court.

POLITICAL.

GOV. HAMPTON, on the 13th, addressed a note to the Chamberlain officials requesting them to turn over their offices to their successors, subject to a decision of the Supreme Court. This each officials refused to do, asserting that they held their offices by dissolution of the State Government from the face of all the election returns, that Gov. Chamberlain had taken the case to the Supreme Court and that Hampton had no right to anticipate the judgment of that court or to attempt to coerce upon a quo, he is then for the first time presented to his lady-love as her future husband, and may afterward put the house on an intimate but not familiar footing. He must always come in full dress, but can lay Cast-iron cares aside when he leaves the ball-room, and increases rapidly through the period of education and growth.

But what makes the matter a very grave one, is that our school systems in this country and in Europe are rendering the choose willingly not to marry.

Dr. Cohn, of Breslau, examined over 10,000 school children and pupils, and has just made a report on the days that he intends to call. The engaged pair must never be permitted to indulge in a dreamy, silent walk, but must talk to each other by their first names without using the prefixes of monsieur and mademoiselle. An engagement ought to be kept secret, and should not be publicly announced only a few days before the signing of the contract. Of course, French engagements are invariably kept secret, and the life of constraint and formality being agreeable to neither party.

The preliminary formalities having been scrupulously gone through with, next comes the question of the wedding, or rather weddings, for not French couple must be married twice over, once at the Mayoralty, in accordance with the law, and once at church, to satisfy religious scruples. This latter ceremony is by no means essential to the legality of the marriage; but not to be married in church is considered by the bride and bridegroom's sympathizers of the most unhappy. Now comes an amount of bother which, to our extremely simple ideas of the affair, appears to be at once stupid and unnecessary. As a necessary preliminary to the civil marriage, the bride and groom must arm themselves with half a dozen documents each. First comes the acte de naissance, or birth-certificate then the consent, in writing of both parents, and, if either or both of them be dead, the proofs of their decease, and the consent of guardians or curators, if younger lady or gentleman be under age, and have parents still living, this written consent is still indispensable, unless, indeed, you go through the formality of the trois sommations respectueuses, which consists in "respectfully summoning" your recalcitrant parents three times to know cause why you should not espouse the beloved of your heart, after which you can do as you please. But such a proceeding is looked upon with so much disfavor by French society that it is only resorted to in very extreme cases. If you are an officer in the army, you must get the permission of the Minister of War to your nuptials, and he will not grant it unless the bride possesses either a dowry of thirty thousand francs or a settled income of twelve hundred francs a year. All these consents obtained, next comes the publication of the banns, which takes place not only at the church, but also at the mayoralty. The signing of the contract is the next formality to be fulfilled. Usually, in Paris, the ceremonial is made the excuse of a family festival, and a special dress is prepared for the bride, who, after a facsimile of the wedding-dress, only in some delicate evening-dress tint instead of white. The notary reads aloud the contract, after which the bridegroom rises, bows to the bride, and signs his name, afterward passing the pen to her. She signs in her turn, and must then hand the pen to the mother of the groom, who must give it in turn to the mother of the bride. These little points of etiquette are strictly observed. All the other relations then sign in turn, according to age or station. It is considered a great honor to obtain some high personage as a witness to the contract. If there is a fete given on the occasion, the entrelle or wedding-presents of the bridegroom, and the trousseau as well, are exhibited to the guests. The corbeille comprises shawls, jewels, gloves, laces, furs, etc., together with a purse containing a certain sum of money in gold, the whole inclosed in a large and elegant box, or in a handsome work-table. The value of this present is usually supposed to represent one per cent. of the young lady's dowry.—Appletons' Journal for May.

Near-Sightedness.

One of the questions now enlisting attention is that of a medical supervisor for our schools. We have no doubt that the supervision proposed is a public necessity; that diphtheria, scarlet fever, measles and other contagious diseases among children, might thereby be materially limited in their ravages; and the injury now done to the permanent health by foul air, improper temperature, badly-arranged light, and by undue stimulation of young brains, might be greatly diminished; and that many practical ideas, of lifelong value, on physiology and hygiene, might be rendered familiar to pupils, either directly through such supervision, or indirectly through their teachers.

Few, however, would think that near-sightedness was a grave subject enough for a medical inspector. Most look on it as very harmless, and as pretty likely to insure good sight when that of others would be failing. In rare cases, where the near-sightedness remains unchanged, this may result; but statistics show that the general tendency is to increase, and that in proportion almost always begins in the school-room, and increases rapidly through the period of education and growth.

But what makes the matter a very grave one, is that our school systems in this country and in Europe are rendering the disease well-nigh universal.

Dr. Cohn, of Breslau, examined over 10,000 school children and pupils, and has just made a report on the defects of sight among those who had just entered school, cases began to appear and multiplied rapidly from year to year in the higher classes, and reached fifty-five per cent. in the gymnasium, or classical high-school, and seventy-four per cent. in the real-gymnasium, or high-school for the sciences. Dr. Cohn's examination of 1,725 students in Italy and University also proved that their sight is defective.

Whether a medical inspector is appointed for our schools or not, we trust that measures may be taken for the arrested the alarming deterioration of sight now going on among the youth of our land. Meanwhile, the following rules may serve as helps:

1. Keep the printed page nearly two feet from the eyes.

2. As far as possible secure good air, not overheated—not above seventy.

3. Never read with the direct rays of the sun falling on the page.

4. Don't read with insufficient light.

5. Don't read immediately after a hearty meal.

6. Avoid books with extra fine print.

7. Don't continue any reading or study more than two hours without change and respite.—Youth's Companion.

Watch the Children's Feet.

THE following advice from the New York Evening Post is very important. Let every mother remember it:

"Life-long discomfort and sudden death often come to children through the inattention or carelessness of the parents. A child should never be allowed to go to sleep with cold feet; the thing to be last attended to is to see that the feet are dry and warm. Neglect of this has often resulted in dangerous attacks of croup, diphtheria, or a fatal sore throat. Always, on coming from school, on entering the house from a visit or errand in rainy, muddy or thawy weather, the child should remove its shoes, and the mother should herself ascertain whether the stockings are the least damp. If they are, they should be taken off, the feet held before the fire and rubbed with the hands till perfectly dry, and another pair of shoes put on. The wearing of shoes and stockings should be kept where they are perfectly dry, so as to be ready for use at a moment's notice."

Marrying in France.

That young girls and young men in France are seldomly kept apart, that wooing and winning are unnecessary preliminaries to a French marriage, are facts that have been much commented upon, but how they marry in France, and the etiquette of that very formal and business-like ceremonial, and the preliminaries considered necessary thereto, are, we believe, but little understood on our side of the water.

The first thing to be done is to go through that time-honored formality called popping the question. But a French aspirant for matrimonial honors is not allowed to make his proposals in person to the young lady. That would be a sad breach of les convenances, and would probably horrify the jeune personne out of her seven senses. A friend is charged with the delicate office of asking her parents, not if they will accept M. So-and-so for a son-in-law, but if it would be agreeable to them to consider him in that possible light. Should the answer prove favorable, the gentleman may desire an interview with the lady's parents or guardians, at which interview the young lady must not be present. In this first interview all business questions, including the important one of the dowry, and the almost equally important one of the young man's fortune, expectations, etc., are discussed. Should all these preliminaries be favorably arranged, a second interview is decided upon, and the day and hour rigorously settled beforehand. Exactly at the specified time the future bridegroom must present himself, carefully but not too carefully dressed—that point is essential. His betrothed, in elegant but simple attire, awaits his coming, surrounded by her parents and relatives. After the first visit he is entitled to be received as a prétendu, but must request admission to the privilege either by writing or through one of his near relatives. Permission once gained, he is then for the first time presented to his lady-love as her future husband, and may afterward put the house on an intimate but not a familiar footing. He must always come in full dress, but can lay Cast-iron cares aside when he leaves the ball-room, and increases rapidly through the period of education and growth.

Continuity.

To do one thing extra well is about all that can be asked of a man in this world. In fact, it is an open question whether to do just one thing, and do that well, is not the highest duty of man toward the world and its future. If so many attempts were not made by individuals to do many things at once, and no one thing at any time, man would not be quite so much a failure. And if there never had been one to grapple with the one idea and conquer it, before the same idea and conquer it, before the same idea go to the dogs—or, more properly, to other men—man would not be half as much a success as he is.

An old Chinese song says:

"If a man will talk,
Talk all the time;
If a pen will talk,
Talk all the time;
If a cow will talk,
Talk all the time,
Heifers know it's a talk."

And it is about this way with everything. To grasp one subject; to enter one field; to engage in one profession; to wrestle with one art, to follow one line of research; to stick to one trade with pluck, perseverance, unyielding will and study—always means success, if not great success. The reason why observations fields it is also best to take some particular division. It is the lawyer who follows one line in his profession who is chief counsels. He may aim to be a great criminal lawyer; a great probate lawyer, a great tax-title lawyer, or a great Constitutional lawyer; and, if he ever does grow really great, it must be with a title to excellence in exacting one of these particular lines of his calling, and no more than one.

A man may aim at eminence in literature, and if his ambition be desires he must, it must be—through pronunciation as a poet, writer, novelist, lawyer, and historian? No. Not as all these in one, but as one or three quite distinct and different lines. What no man ever was in all of these departments at once, and the same time. He must take some one of these lines, and there make a specialty of that one. It is the only way that great trade success are gained abroad and that millionaires are made.

This one-idea theory will hold good in every calling of life. It is the creation of greatness. It is under it, in opinion, that the wisest of men, the wisest of fame, and the sum of all progress. In the list of the children of men there are all the renowned in all ages. In the history of its conquests we see all the achievements of art, science, literature, religion and humanity. All are accumulated to bless the present time.

To the youth there could be given little better advice than that contained in the first verse of the Book of Numbers, chapter xv., and verses 37, 38 inclusive. Passing through the usual phases of youth, he finds one way modified, at length, into that of a man bearing a thorn-bush and a lantern, accompanied by a dog. It is unmistakably the person of the old youth that appears in the prologue of "Midsummer Night's Dream," where Quince replies to Bottom's suggestion that a casement of the great window of the chamber where they were to play should be left open, that the moon might supply them with the moonlight for the meeting of Pyramus and Thisbe:

"Ay, or else one must come in with bush of thorns and a lantern, and say he comes to disfigure, or, to present the person of moonshine."

There is also an allusion to this popular notion in Chaucer's "Test of Cressecide," where the renowned old poet says of this lunatic:

"He stole the bush."

The tradition is not yet exhausted, but goes back, indeed, almost to the Genesis of our race, making the man in the moon to be Cain with his dog and thorn-bush, the latter supposed to represent the thorns and briers of the fall, and the dog doing service as the fool-friend who prompted Cain to his fratricidal crime. There is yet another, and more poetical fable of the origin of this mythical personage, which represents him as Endymion born to the moon by Diana.

These old traditions, popular and practical alike, have served to give to the fancy of a human form and face on the moon's disk a breadth and perpetuity of form upon the uncultivated mind; and as in the case of many but more palpable fantasies, this hold is narrowly separated from faith. The inquiry with which this essay begins demands for its satisfactory answer, however, more than this superficial outlook, which has brought these legendary fancies of other ages to our notice. It cannot be met with optical illusions or poetical ingenuities. It must go deeper than into shadowy diversities of the moon's disk.

A profile found there, however gigantic and imposing, will not answer the present purpose, which, beneath a seemingly curious and difficult conundrum, really urges a philosophical problem, and asks, in all seriousness, there a man in the moon—a man as a mere individual, but as a species not as a simple unit, but as an aggregate of being?" To state this question more gravely and distinctly, Is the moon inhabited? This problem is really not so difficult of solution as might be at first supposed. It is certainly not an easy one, and the difficulties which environ it are of a nature that tends to discourage investigation.

The moon, although the nearest of our celestial neighbors, is yet too far away from the earth for us to form any peculiar proof of the existence or non-existence of life upon its surface. Only the loud but fictitious ingenuity of a Locke has set invented a telescope of sufficient space-penetrating power to carry our vision closer to the gardens and groves of our inamorata, and to reveal to all the Lapps and high-cheekboned beings who despoil the moon therein. It is not probable, indeed, that the power of existing telescopes will ever be greatly surpassed that we shall come to see "the man in the moon," in such a typical being there really is.

The problem hardly admits of optical solution. It must be worked out by intellectual rather than by physical methods. If seeing were alone believing, we should probably never get beyond the mythical face into which light and shadow weave themselves as fantastically as they play on the moon's disk. We can, indeed, in effect, by the aid of the best telescopes yet devised, bring the surface of the moon "twenty miles and one hundred inches nearer to us than her actual distance is known to be—to pioneer words we can, in fortunate circumstances, see and spell the lunar surface—lying nearly a quarter of a million miles apart from us—as if it were actually spread out in our view, at a distance not much exceeding a hundred miles."

It is evident, therefore, that any extraordinary and widespread changes in the condition and aspect of her disk—such as the change from the brown barrenness of winter to the green verdure of summer, would be detected by the eye of practical observation. What no such change has been witnessed in the whole progress of telescopic investigation, a presumption would seem, indeed, to be conclusive—evidence that the surface of the moon is not like that of our globe, variegated by "seasons and their change."

This negative testimony is the first step of that progress which will probably bring us, at the end of it, to a positive answer to the inquiry which has engaged many minds and moved many pens for its solution. The assumed and apparently assured fact that the moon has no seasons, which would by their succession produce striking changes of appearance on her face, is a foundation from other conclusions to which close and patient telescopic observation has brought the best astronomers. They are generally agreed that the moon is without air and water; at least without open seas, lakes and rivers, like those which constitute so large a proportion of the surface of our globe.

The occasional appearance of white, glistening patches amid the deep, pervasive gloom of the lunar disk, has led some observers to think that these spots are lakes mirroring the sunlight upon their waters. But this hypothesis is not well supported, and the supposed lakes are so inconstant in their guise that they may be quite as reasonably supposed to be mineral masses with variable aspects of reflection.

The absence of water from the moon is easily more than a mere supposition. It is almost an established fact, inasmuch as there is certainly no atmosphere about the moon at all corresponding in its density and functions to that gaseous envelope which environs our larger globe. If there were much water, even considerable lakes not absolutely subterranean—or, perhaps we should coin a word here and say subluminarian—like the pent-up waters of our earth's interior, their evaporation would inevitably create clouds, and these would be visible to us in varying traceries of light and shade, and possibly of color, upon an atmospheric veil. No such filmy pictures are photographed there.

But the most conclusive proof that the moon is not atmospheric, like her happier mistress—our jewelled-serpent and softly-veiled globe—is the absence of the phenomenon of refracted light upon the limbs or edges of her disk. When a star, lying on the moon's lucent path, or one of Jupiter's satellites, passes behind her disk it should, if there is a true atmospheric medium upon her apparent border, suffer instant marring or distortion of its own disk by the well-known optical process of refraction of light. This is never seen in such instances, which are of so frequent occurrence that observation cannot be at fault here, and the obvious conclusion is that there is no refracting power as a faculty or quality of the moon.

Destitute, thus, of seasons, of water and of air, how can we reasonably proclaim of the moon's surface fitness for the habitation of man? If there are living creatures on the moon, they are certainly vastly, may totally, different from ourselves and the animals that inhabit our globe.

Beyond these arguments in denial of the probability of organic existence on the moon, there is a further protest against it, to be derived from the unquestionably volcanic condition of the lunar globe. It is, to all intents and purposes, a vast cinder, probably refined to its present desolated condition and aspect by the intensity and universality of volcanic fires which, at some past period of its existence, poured their Vesuvian tides of lava and scoriæ all over its valleys and plains. It has been studied, with brilliant show of probability, that this huge celestial cinder has been perforated, here and there, by its fires, and that the brilliant spots, or flames of light, occasionally caught on the lenses of exploring telescopes are only glimpses of direct sunlight through the ghastly chasms and eyes cast by the ravages of incineration.

All that has been said or written about the physical condition of the earth's errant and fickle attendant must, however be taken with allowance. It is beyond all questioning charged with the fault of supposition, for upon one side only of that most questionable orb has even telescopic vision rested. There is no hemisphere of the moon which no human eye has seen or can see, save only as her librations serve to swing her opposite edges alternately, and for a few leagues of their mysterious territory, to the sweep of our great lenses. The moon turns upon her axis in exactly the same period that is occupied in her revolution about our globe, and thus she has ever placed with our astronomers a gigantic game of hide and seek—she hides her face always on her own part—the "seek" on their's.

It is not impossible, therefore, that the latus incognitum of our satellite may be less Alpine in its surfaces—more than the side which she turns to us. If we could inspect it we might miss the "ragged edge" which everywhere obtrudes itself upon our present sight. There, the mottled face might disappear, and the external conditions seem more compatible with the ideas we have of a habitable planet.

The difficulties already considered in the matter do not disappear from the problem. If the visible hemisphere has no air and no water, then neither could her unseen face glow with animal forms and feel, on its somewhat diversified beauties of seasons and gold and crimson clouds.

There is also another drawback to the pleasing fancy that the invisible side of the moon is populated. Its night is a whole fortnight long, for it opposed "man" that never has a glimpse even of that great light which our earth pours upon the moonsphere she continually presents to us. Darkness most profound—Dunsmanian gloom—must wrap, for eighteen scores of dreary hours at a time, that offside of our satellite, which our fancy may yet kindly exempt from the caustic fate and ghastly incineration of the side we see.

We can scarcely find, then, anywhere subject to the reason of our logical reasoning, than a negative to the question. There is "no man in the moon," none generically nay more than there is specifically and numerically. The fable of the ages in this postulate is no more unreal than the fancy of the pseudo-explorer to whose ingenious forgery we have made allusion.

Whatever there may be in the moon, is there not something of regret mingled with the question to which we reach this end of our quest? The visions which mental eyes would find, from their far heights of the heavens, irradiated by the dazzling sunlight of the day and by the magnificent earthlight of the night—supposing they were so organized that they could bear the unrefracted, unreflected, undiffused and undiluted glory of the former—are lost upon us in our present and the loss, in our imperfection measures and defines it, is vast, indeed.

It is melancholy, moreover, to reflect upon the utter lonesomness of the orb, so fair to us, so friendly in her offices, that make as half-ashamed to call her "Selene!" How sad it seems that she should swing upon her marvelous epicycloidal evolutions in extreme solitudes which no delicate ear can catch, and that as she sails majestically through the deep interspaces of the empyrean, the wondrous tale of her birth, which we have been taught to believe she tells to us nightly, is as voiceless to her gloomy depths and as echoless to her glittering heights—unopposed with sensitive men and women—as they are to us, when we look reverently up to her silver throne and vainly listen for the sounds that never come.

Is it any mitigation of this half-sorrow that we confess to feeling, in dismissing the idea of "a man in the moon"—as altogether mythical—that we may go back in our imagination to the period that antedated her volcanic ruin and think of some millions of sentient beings suddenly or slowly consumed in the outpour of her flames and flecks? Hardly, we say; and so we content ourselves with the negative solution of the question at the outset of this paper—that it is never "a man in the moon."—Wm. C. Richards, in Standard (Chicago.)

"THE MAN IN THE MOON."

Is there a man in the moon? The question is not altogether a light one, nor is it, on the other hand, one of mere shadow. It has only a surface, although, at the outside, it is that mythical personage who has immemorially borne the bible, and whose existence depends, and will continue to depend, upon the persistence of superstitious faith, or upon the ingenuity of opticians in blending the gradations of lunar light and shade into the semblance of a human face.

The legend of such an existence is one of great antiquity. Some very imaginative people think it shaped from outlines, traceable upon the surface of the moon at her full, into the figure of a man bearing upon a pitchfork, upon which he has been carrying a fagot of sticks picked up on Sunday, and the origin of the fabulous fancy is traced to the record in the Book of Numbers, chapter xv., and verses 32-36 inclusive. Passing through the usual phases of youth, he finds one way modified, at length, into that of a man bearing a thorn-bush and a lantern, accompanied by a dog. It is unmistakably the person of the old youth that appears in the prologue of "Midsummer Night's Dream," where Quince replies to Bottom's suggestion that a casement of the great window of the chamber where they were to play should be left open, that the moon might supply them with the moonlight for the meeting of Pyramus and Thisbe:

If there were much water, even considerable lakes not absolutely subterranean—or, perhaps we should coin a word here and say subluminarian—like the pent-up waters of our earth's interior, their evaporation would inevitably create clouds, and these would be visible to us in varying traceries of light and shade, and possibly of color, upon an atmospheric veil. No such filmy pictures are photographed there.

But the most conclusive proof that the moon is not atmospheric, like her happier mistress—our jewelled-serpent and softly-veiled globe—is the absence of the phenomenon of refracted light upon the limbs or edges of her disk. When a star, lying on the moon's lucent path, or one of Jupiter's satellites, passes behind her disk it should, if there is a true atmospheric medium upon her apparent border, suffer instant marring or distortion of its own disk by the well-known optical process of refraction of light. This is never seen in such instances, which are of so frequent occurrence that observation cannot be at fault here, and the obvious conclusion is that there is no refracting power as a faculty or quality of the moon.

Destitute, thus, of seasons, of water and of air, how can we reasonably proclaim of the moon's surface fitness for the habitation of man? If there are living creatures on the moon, they are certainly vastly, may totally, different from ourselves and the animals that inhabit our globe.

Beyond these arguments in denial of the probability of organic existence on the moon, there is a further protest against it, to be derived from the unquestionably volcanic condition of the lunar globe. It is, to all intents and purposes, a vast cinder, probably refined to its present desolated condition and aspect by the intensity and universality of volcanic fires which, at

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

New York, April 27, 1877

News has doubtless reached you regarding Tweed's revelations, a synopsis of which was published here early this week. This confession has been long promised, and when it came there was a general ducking of heads all over the city and state, something similar to that which took place in the old Scotch kirk whose pastor one morning broke into his discourse with the sudden announcement that he was about to throw his prayer-book at an unfaithful husband whom he saw in his audience. The full particulars are not known yet, the document remaining in the hands of the attorney-general, pending his consideration of the proposition that accompanied it, namely, that Tweed is to be set free, and so be insured against further prosecution, on condition that he produces his proofs of the allegations of his so called confession. If this be rejected by the government the old Spartan threatens to relapse into his clam like silence. Enough has already leaked out however to furnish material for numberless suits and investigations, the latter being loudly courted by those whose names are found in the statement published. Queer thing, that Tweed is known to have stolen millions and to have distributed his booty widely and freely; and yet you may scrape the state of New York with a fine tooth comb without finding a man who ever took one of his ill-gotten dollars. Here for instance are a Judge on the bench, the editor of a prominent New York journal, and a "reform" leader in the Albany Legislature whom Tweed claims as accomplices, and now the torrent of their virtuous indignation is a sight both grand and beautiful to be bold. Well, we shall know more about it later.

The climax of the life insurance proceedings which I have noticed from time to time has at last been reached in the publication of the long looked for report of the committee appointed to investigate the "Equitable." This young giant of a company which in its eighteen years of existence time been the real focus of the blows aimed from all sides at the life insurance interest. Jealousy, like death, loves a shining mark, and as a consequence a number of lesser corporations have for many months sought in various ways to undermine public confidence in their too powerful rival, and to injure its business. To remove any doubts concerning its condition which might result from such attacks or from the general distrust occasioned by the failures of last season, the officers of the Equitible in January last made the request of nine New York business men of the highest standing, headed by ex-Governor Morgan of this state, that they would act as a special committee to probe the affairs of the society to the bottom, and ventilate every corporate act of its life. The commission was accepted, and three months having been given to an unsparing scrutiny of its accounts and condition, the results thereof are embodied in the comprehensive report just published—a report both critical and thorough, and closing with an emphatic declaration not only "that the Society is solvent beyond question, and that the policyholders are amply secured in their investment," but also that its unparalleled growth reflects the highest credit on its officers, and places the "Equitable" in the front rank of institutions of its kind.

This effectually disposes of all detractions of this company, for the members of this committee are so far above suspicion of partiality of favoritism that their dictum is accepted here and everywhere as absolutely correct.

A new enemy to man, and in this longitude at least, a deadly one, is being developed in the shape of the ordinary cat, at whose door must be laid a number of recent deaths, and for whose suppression stringent measures are now proposed. So great is the alarm in the region of Fulton Ferry among the restaurant keepers and market people that an association has been formed which has offered a reward of "Fifty cents, dead or alive," for every cat brought in. The fish market has long been famous for its cats, each stallkeeper having a number of feline pensioners which answered to their names and received regular rations. But they have increased and multiplied till they have become a terrible nuisance. Thieving, mangy, quarrelsome and noisy, the atmosphere is redolent of the pungent odor of cats, the roofs, cellars, outriders and fences are pervaded with cats, the tempest tossed mariners temporarily sojourning in the adjacent boarding house cannot sleep for the pests, and fill the air with flying boots and portable furniture. The residents are in sore trouble. They say the cats are worse than the rats, with whom they have apparently formed an unnatural alliance for offensive assaults on anything and everything eatable they can lay their paws on. Worse than all, the New York cat, in addition to all his other vices, is becoming addicted to hydrophobia of an aggravated character. This puts the cap sheaf on his accumulated offences, and a long suffering public having risen against him, he has suddenly become an equal share with the Spitze dog in the general enmity and fear.

I think I am safe in asserting that it has come within the experiences of all of us to see men run away from the Ten Commandments, avoid them, and leave them severely alone; but that any one should be moved by his affection to run away with them must be acknowledged to be a genuine cowsky. This, however, is what such a uncomfortable specimen of humanity has done with the elaborately engrossed parchment which formed the central ornament of one of our New York synagogues. In spite of the commotion which this outrage has created, its perpetrator is still unknown; but his coolness, however he is, in carrying off bodily the injunction against stealing, is worthy of mention.

Of the two great ocean steamers which went ashore near Long Branch during the winter, the Amerique of the French line has just been gotten safely off by skillful and persistent efforts, and is now lying in the dry dock receiving the torrent of their virtuous indignation is a sight both grand and beautiful to be bold. Well, we shall know more about it later. trifling repairs necessitated by her misfortune. The Rusland, which was a Belgian boat, proved less staunch, and has become a total wreck. The New York agent of the French line gave this week a grand dinner to the captain of the wreckers who saved the Amerique.

The Japanese are the most progressive of all the Orientals and are without doubt the best liked by Uncle Sam's nephews. The almond-eyed nation has, however, made rather an inauspicious entry into the American learned professions, the first Japanese lawyer ever admitted to this bar, Yamada by name, trying at present under an indictment for an attempt to blackmail.

The smooth current of the amusement season has been slightly ruffled this week; largely, no one will be surprised to hear, by Anna Dickinson who suddenly, on Monday night, gave notice to the proprietor of the theatre at which she has been acting, that she should not put in an appearance. A newspaper quarrel followed, and the "Crown of Thorns" is killed dead.

On the same evening a certain Miss Lenox was to have made her debut at the Lyceum in the part of "Camille." At the appointed hour a crowd of ticket holders surrounded the entrance of the building which they were somewhat dumbfounded to find closed and dark. After some wailing a tumult arose which finally penetrated the green room of the theatre, where the fair debutante was eagerly completing her toilet, unconscious of anything amiss. When it become evident that the manager of the evening had failed to come to time, and that no performance was to be had, there followed rather more of a scene than though the regular programme had been followed out—a scene in which distracted supernumeraries, a hysterical actress and a disgusted public sustained the principal parts.

Not less interesting was a little episode at Gilmore's Garden, in which Barnum's big elephant "Borsen" who has only been in America a few days, filled the chief role. Borsen has the reputation of being the biggest elephant in captivity, and he feels his dignity accordingly. When, therefore, he was brought into this "blarsted country," and settually shut up in the same cage with three plebian elephants of smaller size, his feelings were so outraged that he found it necessary to pick up his keeper with his trunk and chuck him a couple of blocks in order to show a proper resentment. Further reflection convinced him that this was not a sufficient vindication of his honor, so he knocked down the wooden walls of his domicile and the cage of lions, and then galloped around the establishment for an hour or so, when he was finally captured.

TRADE MARK

A Sterling Vegetable Remedy
Which Eradicates
DISEASES OF THE THROAT AND LUNGS, DYSPEPSIA, GRAVEL, PILES, URINARY TROUBLES, NERVOUS DEBILITY, PALPITATION OF THE HEART, TORPIDITY OF THE LIVER, CONSTIPATION, SCROFULOUS AFFECTIONS, AND FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

For nearly a quarter of a century this sterling preparation has been effecting cures of the various diseases to which it is adapted, and thousands of persons, of perfect reliability, in all classes of society have borne evidence to its wondrous remedial efficacy.

As a remedy for diseases of the Throat and Lungs it has achieved a popularity rivalled by that of few proprietary remedies. Experience has shown that for those who are troubled with weakness of the Lungs it is the best possible protective against Consumption, and it may be relied on with certainty to eradicate Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup, Diptheria, and Soreness of the Chest.

Coughs of the most obstinate kind are speedily overcome by it, and since a simple cough is very prone to develop into serious Inflammation of the Lungs, the early use of Dr. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL is earnestly recommended, as it invariably prevents the further progress of the disease.

Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Torpidity of the Liver and of the Kidneys are promptly overcome by this superb vegetable corrective, which not only regulates but strengthens the organs of digestion, as well as those of the urinary and biliary secretions. It imparts unwonted relish for the food, and, by promoting digestion and assimilation, enriches the blood, which is the natural motor of vital energy and nutriment to the system.

Dr. L. O. C. Wishart's Pino Tree Tar Cordial thoroughly regulates the Bowels, removes Blind and Bleeding Piles, banishes from the circulation dropsical and all other impurities, and effectually counteracts a tendency to Gravel. It also entirely obviates the weaknesses incident to females.

Dr. L. O. C. Wishart's Pino Tree Tar Cordial is no mere placebo. It is a standard medicine, and has been repeatedly recognized as such by the press and members of the medical profession, who emphatically endorse the popular verdict long since rendered in its favor.

Sold by Druggists everywhere.

NEW ORLEANS, April 19.

The Packet has taken no notice of the appointment of Colonel Sharkey to the Chief Justiceship of Louisiana, because it has no political significance. A New Orleans man has been at Washington since March 4, 1877, solicited and received the appointment of Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Louisiana. It never was a political office, and it is not now. It is a judicial office, and the appointment was made by Mr. Hayes because he believed that Colonel Sharkey was the best man for the place. Colonel Sharkey is a Democrat, and has been a Democrat from the beginning of his political life. He was a Democrat before the war, and he was a Democrat during the war. He was a Democrat after the war. He is a Democrat now. He has been a Democrat all his life, and he will be a Democrat to the end of it. He was a Democrat when he was appointed Chief Justice, and he is a Democrat now that he has been appointed Chief Justice. He was appointed because he was a Democrat, and because he was the best man for the place. He was appointed because he was a Democrat, and because he was the best man for the place. He was appointed because he was a Democrat, and because he was the best man for the place

We take the following items from the Little Traverse Republican:

One of the features of the Concert in Conor Village, commented upon by many is missed from the last week.

On last Monday, which the world of mankind by Periods, was all on foot and the school house together with other small sheds in that place were thronged with their visitors. Mr. O. N. Wood mounted to the roof of the new building was the instrument in the ordination to saturate the roof with water, but his balance and fell to the ground injuring him in a thought mortally.

The tidewater Elbert Sherman, which has been in our locality long time writer is now being put in readiness for sea. She is a trim, smooth little craft, and Capt. Sherman's friends just look to her like her. She will leave our harbor for a short time on a sea shore expedition and will be ready to Wyandotte order or service, and may the wind fair, the waves driving for ocean to safety.

Monday's Meeting.—On Monday last, was the R. M. Hoag on the G. R. & I. R. R. was on her way up, came to a mass meeting with a score or more of people. As near as we can learn, Mr. Hoag was passing through Pine Lake and Crawford station, a two pony two for in distance fell, striking the rear car just over the bridge. Luckily, neither this end of the car into handling were. Fortunately the two and five from people and fell dragged with the train which caromed it to one side. Strange as it may seem, but two or three passengers were injured, and they but slightly.

It seems that war in Europe is inevitable. No hope of a peaceful settlement is now entertained at Constantinople. The Turkish grand council has granted the Danube to assume the immediate command. Where it will end no one can conjecture.

LATER.—War has been declared.

SENTENCED.—John Allen, the Elk Rapids burglar was sentenced to State Prison for five years at the late term of court at that place. After his sentence he tore a plank from the jail and escaped. He was overtaken and made to enter the jail but the same hole that he came through. He is now confined in order to prevent his escape through. He is to be taken to Jackson this week.

The proposed division of Isabella county, which has been so much talked of for the last year or two, is now likely to be consummated at the present session of the Legislature. The boundary lines are substantially as follows: Commencing at the northeast corner of Isabella county, thence west to the northwest corner of Section 1, Town 16 North of Range 3 West, thence south to the southwest corner of Section 1, Town 15 North of Range 3 West, thence east to the southeast corner of Section 1, Town 15 North of Range 3 West, thence north to the place of beginning. The new county will contain about 324 square miles, and will be known as Gladwin county. The county seat will be located at Gladwin, a village on the Flint & Pere Marquette Railroad, about 30 miles south of Saginaw City.

PROBATE NOTICE.—State of Michigan, County of Grand Traverse, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Grand Traverse, holden at the Probate Office in the Village of Traverse City, on the 24th day of April, A. D. 1877. Present, James R. Bacon, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Peter Bowman, late of Paris, deceased. On reading and filing the petition duly verified of Henry Wright, praying that administration of said estate may be granted to Henry Wright. Thereupon it is ordered that Tuesday, the fifteenth day of May, at ten o'clock in the forenoon be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said court then and there to be holden, and show cause if any there be, why the petitioner should not be granted: And it is further ordered that said petitioner give notice to all persons interested in said estate, of the pendency and prayer of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL, a newspaper circulated in said County of Antrim, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

FOREIGN.

According to a Calcutta telegram of the 23d, a serious outbreak of cholera had occurred in Akyab. Fully 25 per cent. of the European population had perished.

On the 24th, the Czar of Russia issued a manifesto to the Russian army and people in which, after setting forth the causes of offense on the part of Turkey and the efforts made by Russia in the interests of peace and humanity, he formally declared war, and issued an order for the crossing of the frontier. Simultaneous with this manifesto, Prince Gortschakoff sent a circular to the Powers, giving the reasons for the precipitation of hostilities. The Turkish Charge d' Affaires at St. Petersburg was also furnished his passports. The advance of the Russian army, consisting of 17,000 men, crossed the Pruth into Roumania, under the leadership of the Grand Duke Nicholas. A proclamation was issued announcing the invasion. The Roumanian Government, not having received a preliminary notification, declared that it yielded to force and directed its troops to fall back to avoid a conflict. It is stated that the immediate object of the advance was to protect the railway bridge at Barbaeshi, where the first collision was expected.

On the 26th, an Imperial order was issued declaring the Provinces of Besserabia, Kersen, Taurida and Crimea in a state of siege. The Russians had crossed the frontier of Asiatic Turkey at Akzemlepsol on the route to Kars. Galatz and Braila had been occupied by the Russians, and the important railway bridge at those points secured. Several Turkish ironclads were moving up the Danube to attack the bridge.

According to Berlin and Vienna telegrams of the 25th, the Powers would not attempt to mediate between Turkey and Russia until after one or two serious engagements had been fought on the Danube.

The municipality of Moscow voted funds, on the 25th, for 1,000 beds for wounded soldiers, and also 1,000,000 rubles for additional hospital appliances. The "unions Imperial family have given 60,000,000 rubles from their private purses for the expenses of the war.

In reply to the demand of the Porte for permission to cross the frontier, Servia has declared that she should maintain strict neutrality in the war between Turkey and Russia, so long as her territory was not violated.

Up to the morning of the 25th, 50,000 Russians had crossed over into Roumania.

Server Pasha, the Turkish Minister of Foreign Affairs, sent a circular dispatch to the Powers in reply to the Russian manifesto on the 25th. He protests against the declaration of war, and sets out the efforts made by Turkey to improve the position of her Christian subjects and satisfy the demands of the Christian Powers. In the absence, therefore, of proper provocation, Safvet Pasha says the Porte cannot understand the motive of Russia's attack, and consequently appeals to the Treaty of Paris and the mediation of the guaranteeing Powers.

Servia notified Turkey, on the 26th, that she would resist by force any attempt on the part of the Turkish Army to occupy Usadova.

The Prince of Montenegro, on the 26th, issued a circular to the Powers, in which he states that the negotiations with Turkey were broken off because of his demand that the Herzegovinian refugees be reduced to their homes. He adds that he shall defend the integrity of his territory by all the means at his command, hoping that, if he be defeated, Christian Europe will save the women and children.

According to foreign newspaper reports of the 26th, an engagement had taken place on the Asiatic frontier, resulting in the defeat of the Russians, with a loss of 63 killed and wounded. They were forced to fall back.

On the 26th, Prince Charles sent in a message to the Roumanian Chambers, substantially advising the declaration of war against Turkey.

The Sultan, on the 26th, issued a proclamation to his army, announcing the declaration of war by Russia. He proclaims reliance of God to repel the invader, and promises that the Nation shall care for the wives and children of those who fight for battles. Should it be "unnecessary, he would himself go to the army and raise the standard of the Khalifatanate of the Sultanat, and would ascribe his [illegible] honor and independence of his country.

The plague has appeared at Reshit, on the southern shore of the Caspian Sea, in Persia. There were 176 deaths at Bagdad from the plague between the 16th and 23d of April.

A Lisbon telegram of the 25th states that another outbreak of the cattle-plague had compelled the slaughter of 124 head in Middlesex.

DOMESTIC.

Reports recently received at the Treasury Department in Washington state that the counterfeiting of coin, principally silver, is increasing rapidly. Reports from the Black Hills mention the coinage of counterfeit five-dollar pieces and some seconds.

A man, named John Krupple, died in Philadelphia, on the 21st, of hydrophobia. He was bitten in the thumb, by his dog, three months before, and the wound cauterized, and it apparently healed thoroughly. No ill-effects were felt until a few days before his death, when the usual symptoms of hydrophobia appeared and the usual result followed.

Two little Boston (Mass.) boys, named Dudley Kimble (aged four and a half years) and Stephen Orr (aged seven), quarreled at play, on the afternoon of the 21st, when young Kimble, saying "I will fix you," went home, and, procuring his father's revolver, shot Orr through the temple. The wounded lad lived two hours after. The fathers of the boys are prominent business men.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean of the 21st publishes crop reports from 429 counties in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Iowa, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Tennessee and Maryland. According to these reports, wheat seems to be unusually promising: in the 459 counties covered, 126 are reported excellent, 304 average, and only 29 poor. Peaches are likely to be at least a partial failure, in 180 counties they are reported injured or wholly destroyed, in 191 a fair or an average crop is preplanned, and in only 61 are they promising. Apples promise very finely. 67 counties reporting a fine crop, 309 an average crop, and but 45 a poor or partial crop. Cherries and smaller fruits seem to promise about an average crop.

Six hundred Cheyenne Indians, under the leadership of Chief Standing Elk and Bull Knife, surrendered at Red Cloud Agency, Neb., on the 21st. The ponies surrendered number about 700.

A Detroit Washington dispatch says the Postmaster-General had issued an order that hereafter appointments of Postoffice clerks, route-agents, mail-route messengers, or local agents, shall be made only for six months, and that at the expiration of this period an reappointment will be made unless the appointee pass a satisfactory examination.

The National Exchange Bank, of Minneapolis, Minn., closed its doors on the 24th. It was stated that the financial embarrassment of its President, H. Miller, of Troy, was the chief cause of the suspension.

Gov. Hartranft, of Pennsylvania, as Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, has issued a general order designating May 30 as a Memorial Day. Wherever there are no posts of the Grand Army to lead in the good work, the Commander-in-Chief, in behalf of their surviving comrades, asks the citizens to take steps to decorate the graves of the gallant dead, and secure a proper observance of the day.

The New York canals are to be opened for navigation on the 5th of May.

PERSONAL.

The President has appointed George Schneider, of Chicago, Minister Resident to the Republic of Switzerland.

Capt Geo. Barker, aged eighty-five, and believed to be the oldest Free-Mason in the United States, died at Hudson, N. Y., on the 22d, and at Chamber, N. Y., on the same day, William E. Lathrop died, at the age of eighty-three, having been a Mason for sixty years, and being at the time of his death Commander of the Grand Commandery of the United States

Ex-President and Mrs. Grant arrived in Washington on the evening of the 25th.

Senator Blaine was interviewed by a New York Herald reporter on the evening of the 23d, and stated that he had no expression of opinion to make with regard to the change of political affairs in Louisiana. Being inquired of as to a statement made by a San Francisco newspaper that he had prepared, and intended to introduce, resolutions at the next session of Congress, expressing doubts of Mr. Hayes' election, and proposing a new consideration of the question by a tribunal to consist of the Chief-Justice of the United States, Mr. Blaine said there was not the slightest foundation for the story.

Gov Packard issued a lengthy address to the Republicans of Louisiana, on the 25th, and, early on the morning of that day, he and his adherents, except one Metropolitan police man, left the State-House. At noon the Legislature adjourned from Odd Fellows' Hall to the St. Louis Hotel, where it reassembled and proceeded with its business.

Caleb Cushing, ex Minister to Spain, arrived at New York on the 26th.

POLITICAL.

The Massachusetts House of Representatives, on the 20th, rejected—117 to 106—the Prohibitory Liquor bill, which had previously passed the Senate.

In the Nicholls (Louisiana) Legislature, on the 21st, a number of the Packard members of the Senate and House took their seats. Seven Democratic members who had been seated subject to contest yielded their seats to, and introduced, the colored Republican members who claimed the seats on the face of the returns. Lucher, Warmoth made a speech, in which he said: "We have been whipped in the battle, but have at least preserved our self-respect in an honorable contest, and are prepared now to offer our allegiance to the only existing government, and to fairly co-operate in anything which may be suggested."

The Louisiana Commissioners returned to Washington on the 24th, and visited the Executive Mansion during the session of the Cabinet. Their presence was suspended when there was an informal conversation between them and the Cabinet respecting their mission. The Commissioners furnished the final report of their proceedings to the President, who returned thanks for the satisfactory way to which they had discharged their duties. The Commissioners are said to speak in warm terms of the kind manner in which they were received at New Orleans by both parties, and appear to be perfectly satisfied with the result of their mission.

The bill prohibiting betting on elections, pool-selling at races, etc., passed the New York Senate on the 24th—ayes, 21; noes, none.

Gen. Adams announces as follows, in a telegram of the 24th, the withdrawal of the Federal troops from the vicinity of the State-House in New Orleans: "The troops quartered at the Custom House, in the city, vacated it at twelve o'clock meridian to-day, and proceeded to Jackson Barracks. This hotel is the only building in the immediate vicinity of the State-House that has been occupied by troops during the past year, and not once during that time have the troops occupied the State-House or any part of it."

The Louisiana Legislature, in joint session on the 24th, elected Judge H. M. Spofford (Democratic caucus candidate) United States Senator, the vote being Spofford, 140; Wilts, 1; blank, 12.

The report of the Louisiana Commissioners to the President is dated New Orleans, April 21, and opens up with an account of the condition in which the Commissioners found the rival State Governments on their arrival at that city. They say they "found it to be very difficult to ascertain the precise extent to which the respective Governments were acknowledged in various parishes outside of New Orleans, but it is safe to say that the changes which had taken place in the parishes after the organization of the two Governments on the 5th of January, 1877, were in favor of the Nicholls Government." The Commissioners then enter into a discussion of the legal question upon which the right of the respective Governments depended, and say they "was no judicial tribunal, acknowledged to be authoritative by both parties, by which the legal title could be solved. The only hope of practical solution was by the union of so many members of the rival Legislatures as would make a Legislature with the Constitutional quorum, in both the Senate and House, of members whose title to thier seats was valid under either view of the law. Such Legislature was finally formed by the withdrawal of members from the Packard to the Nicholls Legislature, thus giving the latter body a quorum of Returning-Board members in both houses. The Commission conclude their report by expressing "an earnest hope that the adjustment which has been made of the political controversies of Louisiana will be of lasting benefit to that State, and will be approved by the patriotic people of all sections."

The Louisiana Legislature adjourned sine die on the 27th.

RELIGIOUS AND EDUCATIONAL.

—The costs of tuition per pupil in the Boston schools is three times that of twenty years ago.

—The receipts of the American Bible Society during 1876 were $853,579; 624,726 volumes were issued.

—In a late number of Macmillan's Magazine, Mr. Pattair advances the theory that the education of the rich should be more carefully looked after than that of the poor, on the ground that poverty is in itself a school.

—Of the 215,000 Germans in New York City, 80,000 are Protestants, 60,000 are Roman Catholics, 40,000 are Jews, and 15,000 are unclassified. There are forty-one German Protestant churches, beside several chapels, embracing 14,000 communicants.

—The Mennonites, at a General Conference, recently held at Elkhart, Indiana, resolved that all members of the church who had voted at the Presidential election should be disfellowshiped, and that every minister should try to induce his members to abstain from voting. Until 1871 the Mennonites in Southern Russia were exempted from one of the duties of European citizenship—military duty.

—Dr. M. W. Taylor, in his fifth lecture on "Preaching for Men," to students, said that the clamor for brevity in sermons is a bad omen for the churches. "No great theme," he said, "can be treated in seven minutes. Therefore, brevity means the banishment of doctrinal instruction and systematic preaching, and in consequence of that, spiritual dwarfs and a piety from which manhood has disappeared."

—The following is taken from the recent report of the Columbus (Ohio) schools: "It is the unanimous opinion of our committee that married women ought not to be employed as teachers in the public schools. We believe that, however conscientious and competent they may be, the cares and duties of home and family unfit them for the work we require of our teachers. For this and many other reasons the married women were dropped from the list at the last appointment of teachers."

—The Superintendent of the Schools of Baltimore, in a report just issued, emphasizes the fact that there is a great penmanship in that city. He thinks that the defect arises from an "expenditure of much labor in trying to make young children write well at too early a time before they have been trained to form the letters with a good degree of exactness." He complains also that reading does not receive the attention that it ought. Instead of using the spelling-book for teaching spelling, the superintendent thinks that great advantage has been gained by using the readers, inasmuch as pupils are, by this means, taught to spell words in ordinary use. Of arithmetic the report says: "This subject is well taught in most of our primaries, but too many teachers are in the habit of devoting their instruction to the mere mechanical working of examples in the addition, subtraction, multiplication and division of figures, without attempting by interspersing these exercises with suitable examples involved in the ordinary business of everyday life the subject is rendered much more interesting and at the same time more profitable."

The Sultan of Turkey.

By ten o'clock in the morning, clad in a fur-lined anteri, the Sultan takes his place in the cheerful little room in the right wing of the palace which he has made his own—a little gem in its way—furnished in ebony and green velvet; its only adornments a select picture, a number of clocks hung on the walls, the busts of his father and uncle, and portraits of his father and grandfather. The first person he sends for in the morning is Said Pasha, Grand Marshal of the Palace, with whom he draws out the programme of his day; he then calls for the other Said Pasha, his First Secretary, with whose assistance he carefully examines all the papers sent to him from the Porte. Occasionally, while still in his dressing-gown, he receives Ministers on pressing business, otherwise he works at his papers till about noon, when he breakfasts, and shortly after reappears in his study dressed in the Quaker-cut black frock coat, called Redingote. Then commence the official receptions, generally followed by a second interview with his Grand Marshal, after which he either takes a walk in the palace grounds or a trip on the Bosphorus in his yacht. He also likes driving, but on Sunday he drives over to Stamboul, where I saw him, to inspect the arrangements of the new Chamber of Deputies. He dines shortly after sunset, takes no raki before his dinner and no wine with that meal. Once or twice a week he invites some members of the Cabinet to spend the evening with him, and talks to them on public affairs; other evenings are devoted to music; he has a special pianist—an Italian—attached to the palace, and sometimes the palace troupe performs a pantomime for his amusement. Aloof, eleven, or earlier, he retires to his harem, which, expressed prosaically, means to go to bed. He is perfectly conscious that his position is not a bed of roses, and his physicians say that he adheres most faithfully to their advice for the preservation of his health. No one who saw the Sultan, on Sunday, examining with interest every detail of the new Chamber, visiting the Imperial Lodge, mounting the Tribune, noting the silk serifs which cover the benches, and jauntily descending the broad staircase of the Imaret-i-famoun with Said Pasha, could conscientiously conclude that the mere mise was wanting in that slender frame, although the frame is undeniably slender, and the expression of the face anxious and sorrowful.—London Truth.

Pauperism in England.

This year's first monthly return of pauperism in England states the number of persons receiving relief from the rates at the end of January, 1877, as 2.8 per cent. less than at the corresponding period of 1876. The 1,534,846 indoor paupers show an increase of 7,566, the 852,824 out-door paupers a decrease of 27,503; but these must be about 3 per cent. added to the total for vagrants and lunatic paupers in asylums, which two classes are not included in these monthly returns. The present return shows an improvement to the extent of 6.5 per cent. on the corresponding period last year, from the English Channel up to Yorkshire, and 5.0 per cent. in the South-Midland, and 5.2 per cent. in the North-Midland Division. The Metropolis—the decrease of paupers is 3.2 per cent., and in the Southwestern Division 3.4 per cent. But Wales has the merely nominal decrease of 0.1 per cent., the Northwestern Division only 0.5 per cent.; the West-Midland an increase of 0.1 per cent., and Yorkshire an increase of 0.4 per cent. The Northern Division shows a decrease of 0.8 per cent.—London Times.

The War and the Speculators.

The signs of war thus far have chiefly manifested themselves in this country on the Boards of Trade. The Russian Bear has been metamorphosed into a lamb and the Russian Bull, who has been engaged in tossing grain in the most fantastic and amusing manner. The "scalpa" has been in his element. The man who has been accustomed for some time past to hang around the outskirts of the wheat-corner all day, awaiting a turn of half a cent a bushel one way or the other, is now kept dancing and bowling about to keep track of variations of several cents every few minutes. There is no penmanship in that city. He thinks that the defect arises from an "expenditure of much labor in trying to make young children write well at too early a time before they have been trained to form the letters with a good degree of exactness." He complains also that reading does not receive the attention that it ought. Instead of using the spelling-book for teaching spelling, the superintendent thinks that great advantage has been gained by using the readers, inasmuch as pupils are, by this means, taught to spell words in ordinary use. Of arithmetic the report says: "This subject is well taught in most of our primaries, but too many teachers are in the habit of devoting their instruction to the mere mechanical working of examples in the addition, subtraction, multiplication and division of figures, without attempting by interspersing these exercises with suitable examples involved in the ordinary business of everyday life the subject is rendered much more interesting and at the same time more profitable."

This sort of speculation will do the country no good. It is only the revival of a bad habit that will be followed by precisely the same consequences in all cases. It is the renewal of a debauch, common enough some years ago, which will bring on headaches and heartaches. The country will derive no benefit from it. The material advantage to the American people of this foreign war will depend upon its duration, and the consequent foreign demand upon American production and industry, but this speculative mania will make the material disadvantages apparent from the first. Flour already reads $1.50 per barrel more to the consumer than it cost a few weeks ago, and other commodities will follow in the same direction. The farmers having parted with the bulk of their 1876 crop, will get no immediate benefit from the increased prices, and the war may be over before they will be able to realize on their crop of 1877. Meanwhile, the cost of living will have been increased to all by the speculative excitement, and the dollar which is earned in actual service will not be worth as much to the man who works for it, but whose compensation has not been enlarged by the speculative movement. Some men may grow suddenly rich and others suddenly poor, but the extensive changes in prices of lots will be only detrimental to the community at large for the time being, and will in nowise affect the ultimate influence of the war upon the business of the United States.

Of course, we don't expect to put any check upon the gambling propensity of the Board of Trade speculators. They will make the most energetic use of the opportunity which the war excitement affords, and stand their individual asses and pocket their individual gains without any regard to the real condition of things. But a word of warning may keep the community from placing too much confidence in the ballooning of the Board of Trade enthusiasts, and induce people generally to avoid the infection. This country has had a sad experience in the prostration and exhaustion consequent upon the fever of speculation, and those who look calmly out into the future will prefer not to have another era of disappointment which will just as surely be followed by another era of depression.—Chicago Tribune, April 27.

The Bastinado.

"T. H." writes: "I am boiling over with indignation while reading the account of the fearful bastinading of the unfortunate Ali Nassir, narrated in your European correspondence. A few days ago I was reading an account of this punishment inflicted many years since on an unfortunate Englishman. A Mahometan of Tripoli owed him a debt. He fully aware of the horrible nature of this torture, I give the account in the writer's own words. 'I do not think how it is possible that in our day such barbarous cruelty can be perpetrated for so small an offence as the poor stranger's debt was proved, and which he was magnanimously owned. The writer says: 'The victim was thrown flat on his face, and his legs bent up, so that the soles of his feet were presented. Whilst the feet were held in this position by a long staff and chain. At first the blows were moderately heavy, then they were laid on more roughly, and every stroke felt like the application of a red-hot poker. At first the pain was excruciating, but the feeling in time became numb, and it was like beating a bag of wool. It was six weeks before he could walk, even with crutches, and for more than three years his feet and ankles were very much swollen, and, though twenty years had elapsed when he published this account, he still suffered.' The merciful cessation of the bastinado have been applied for three days successively, and, if the person survived, the legs were the parts on which the blows fell, but in general, he observes, when between 500 and 600 strokes were inflicted, death was the consequence."—London Times.

COUSIN WILL.

I strolled last night in musing mood
Beholding on my lonely widow,
Till, wearied out at last I paused
And leaned upon a garden gate.
The old mansion mellow radiance hung
In golden mists among the trees,
The sunset's lustre from Orchard flowers,
Lifted silly on the evening breeze.

As thus I stood absorbed in thought,
I guessed against the gate too hard,
It opened with a sudden jerk.
I found myself within the yard.
A voice came gliding down the walk,
And I was sudenced now as perplexed.
I stood one blissful moment, while
A sweet voice soothed my ear, the next
It came into a silence, then sobbed
"Dear, how could you go so cold?
When all the time I knew you knew
I thought you were my Cousin Will."

* * * * * * *

Those stars are moons, or, rather, months,
That we have flown since that night,
And two of those have wholly shone
Upon our wedded life. Bright
Suppose me to be Cousin Will?
And she is queenly, tall and fair.
With lustrous eyes, and such a wealth
Of wavy, soft as autumn hair.

* * * * * * *

"So hard!" I've just come from the club,
My wife sits silent, but a child,
Unseen before, looks in her eyes
Dear me! I must go on that coin night
When first she met me at the gate.
And welcome, while her eyes flame still,
If ever I, in spite to come,
Plead what I'd fain learn Cousin Will,
—Philip Lyon, in Scribner for May.

BARBARA'S DIFFICULTY.

That Barbara Hawkins owed a good deal to her stepmother was a fact that she could not have concealed from herself if she had tried.

Her father's home had been a very home of discomfort during the dull terms that when her own mother's death and the arrival of the youthful and winning stranger who had been somehow persuaded by Squire Hawkins to "come and take keer of us little darter."

The history of the next five years, in which she herself had grown from girlhood to womanhood, included all the genuine sunshine which had fallen to her lot. It was a dreary, hard life, and she knew to whom that change, and a good many other excellent things, were due.

Then, since the Squire had been gathered to his fathers, what a notable manage, had Widow Hawkins proved herself for the widow's scarce property he had left behind him!

It was just there that the difficulty was now coming in. The place which, with such good management, had kept the two women very nicely so long as they lived together, could continue to do so only under just that state of affairs. The widow's share, it set apart by itself, would be only another name for poverty. True, and yet what of that, or at least which one of the two is now nearest to a proper condition for consideration, would cease to "marry a motherin-law," and a stepmother at that, be well at a wife?

"And she understands it," said Barbara to herself that September afternoon, "as well as I do. She's as polite to both of them as if they were counting her husband or me. I must say it's been very convenient once or twice, for they both like her. In fact, everybody likes her, and that makes my position so very peculiar.

A very pretty girl was Barbara Hawkins; even prettier than her stepmother, and that was saying something, in spite of the widow's thirty years.

A lot of a belle, too, was the squire's "heiress" in that unambitious rural community, and by no means without some characteristics which, put the village gossips, at times, in mind of "Squire Hawkins' dust wife."

At the present juncture, however, the public opinion of the Corners society was more than usually perplexed. The best judges of such matters were inclined to "guess" Ethel Emmons is a beetle ahead," although this was sure to be followed by the remark, "But than, you know, Dan Grover's got ten dollars to Hill's one, and he's a mighty slight shidder."

And Barbara was in a worse quandary about it than the Dorcas Society knew how to be, for at times she almost suspected her heart of threatening an impertinent interference before her head could have a fair chance.

"She'd be entitled to a third, I suppose," soliloquized the fair maiden, "and she's a wonderful hand with her needle. There's no danger of her starving. There's lots of folks'd be glad enough to have her come and live with them.

And Barbara did not know it, but a train of thought very nearly related to her own was at that moment passing through the mind of the widow, as she stepped lightly to and fro among the household duties, of which she so kindly relieved her step-daughter.

"I don't fear the piano," murmured the soft, low voice of the widow, "and yet I know she wanted to practice that new piece. Young Emmons 'll be here this evening. I ought not to say a word in such a matter. She's old enough to decide for herself, but why can't she see that Dan Grover's worth five hundred of him? —not to mention his big farm, and that's something nowadays. I wouldn't put a bit of a talk with you, and there'd be no chance for it at the house."

Not a word said the widow, as Dan Grover drew her arm in his, but she thought, "If he wants to speak of Barbara, he's right, for Bill Emmons must be three to this time. What a fool she is! He don't begin to compare with Dan."

It must be confessed, however, that it seemed wonderfully pleasant, even when Dan turned up the shadowy lane toward the grove, and when he seemed disposed to put off his express business and to talk of his farm and the house, and at last of himself.

"I have everything around me fixed as nicely as I could ask for," he remarked, at length; "but I grow lonelier every day. The fact is, I've determined to have a wife, if I can get the one I want; but there's only one in all the wide world. I'd be lonelier than I am now with any other."

"Why don't you speak to her, then?" said the widow, with a half-choked feeling in her throat. "She's a very sensible girl, but I don't think it would be right for me to try to influence her. I believe a woman has no right to marry without loving."

Quick as lightning—very different from Dan's ordinary calm, slow style—was his responsive query: "Have you always been of that opinion? Have you acted on it?"

The plump, soft hand on his arm was perked away in an instant, and Barbara's step-mother was almost sobbing with angry and wounded feeling, as she stepped back from him, exclaiming: "How dare you! What have you to do with this? Ask Barbara for her secrets, if you will. Mine are my own."

"Exactly," responded the steadyminded Dan, but his voice was shaking now in spite of his self-control. "You have told me part of your secret, Marian Hawkins, whether you meant to or not. I knew you could never have loved him. Now I will tell you mine. You are the one woman in all this world whom I must forever be loyal to. You have been only too faithful to Barbara, or you would have seen it before."

Bold, earnest, passionate, grew the strong man's words as he uttered them, and he closed with a sudden forward movement. Before the widow knew it, Dan's arms were around her, and even her tears betrayed her.

It was too late for any thing but to let him have his own way. Such a willful fellow he was too. And when at last the widow insisted on going homeward, their arrival at the gate was signalized by just such another theft as he had perpetrated twenty times already, for Barbara's exclamation had been simply, "Kissed her."

Never was a girl so quickly in all the world before; but, between the flushing and the scrambling of the match, Bill Emmons managed to say that he was a fellow of excellent mind. "Perhaps, Barbara, that may remove some of our difficulties."

And Barbara made no reply; but when Dan and the widow came into the parlor, it was not easy to say which of the two women was blushing most deeply.

"It's all right, Bill," remarked Dan. "I don't know that any explanations are required. You have my entire consent."

The visions of the newly-pointed house had faded from the mind of Barbara Hawkins, but it was Dan's treat, and he paid attention to the manner in which she was clinging to the arm of Bill Emmons. The latter was equal to the occasion, however, for he replied:

"Well, so long as I've got Barbara's, I don't mind having yours;" and then he added, quickly, "I say, Dan, you and I are two fellows of remarkably good sense."

So Barbara's difficulty about her step-mother's future as well as her own was removed for her entirely, and, curiously enough, Dan Grover spent the remainder of his natural life in the unbroken assurance that neither he nor his admirable wife had ever known but one love.—Harper's Bazar.

Chinese Cousins.

In the course of the evidence of a Chinese interpreter in the Ah Moon murder trial to-day, the witness was asked what was the application of the term "cousins," as used by the Chinese, or, in other words, what was the relationship existing between Chinese calling each other cousins. He replied that all Chinese having the same surname were cousins under the social laws of China; that it made no difference from what State or part of China they hailed from, they called each other cousins, and that this applied to the Chinese all over the world. The witness was asked the question: "If these cousins did not consider it not only their privilege, but their duty, to sustain each other, right or wrong?" He answered that they did. "Suppose," said the counsel, "a member of the cousin family by the name of Wing was killed by a member of a cousin family named Sing, would not all the members of the Wing family be obliged to pursue the Sing family until they obtained revenge on one or the other of the members?" "Yes, sir," replied the witness.—San Francisco Bulletin.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

New York, May 5, 1877.

Local events have this week largely taken their color from the bursting war cloud in Europe. Remote as is the actual scene of action from us, we can scarcely be said to disinterested spectators to the developments which the last few days have inaugurated. Despite the expressed intention of the European powers to hold themselves aloof from the strife between Russia and Turkey, and thus prevent the strife from being more than a local one, the probability is everywhere felt to be strong, that unless the last abject appeal of Turkey to the treaty of Paris should prove of some effect—and nothing could be more unlikely—it will not be many months before England Austria, Germany, and perhaps France and Italy, will be found ranged upon the side of one or the other of the present combatants. The effect upon this country of the stubborn general war that would follow is easily to be seen. The production of provisions and of manufactured articles practically ceasing throughout Europe, demands upon the United States, the only great producing nation left with its hands free, for supplies of every variety, would tax our capacity to the utmost, and give such a stimulus to our manufactures as not even our own war furnished.

With, these ideas uppermost in mind, Wall street and the heavy manufacturing interests have naturally been feverish and excited. Gold has gone up three or four figures and breadstuffs have followed suit. I presume few are so greedy and inhuman as to desire to see the whole of Europe plunged in the horrors of war; but certain it is that none of us can help it if such a state of things is brought about, and therefore need not hesitate to reap the temporary harvest which it would place ready to our hands.

The Russian fleet, which brought the Grand Duke to this country, and which has formed the great attraction to the ferry passengers on the North River for several weeks, shows very evidently that it has heard of the disturbance on the other side. On receipt of the news of the declaration of war the ships' officers scoured the town for such members of their crews as, having been allowed leave to go on shore, had disported themselves with the characteristic abandon of Jack Tar the world over, had got drunk and been sent to various limbos by the police justices. The weather beaten truants were reclaimed as rapidly as possible, their flues being paid out of the treasury of his imperial majesty, the Czar of all the Russias, and the fleet now lies with steam up awaiting and rather expecting a telegraphic recall to the Black Sea.

With the returning green of our parks and trees attention falls naturally upon the plant and seed interests, which now begin to be in enormous activity. Few people relize what a business is done about here in the raising and selling of flowers and seeds. Flower growers estimate that within a radius of thirty miles about the New York city hall there are over $10,000,000 invested in the growing of plants by professional gardeners, large and small, and that their annual sales—exclusive of cut flowers—reach 2,000,000, half of which, or more, belongs to the Spring trade. Besides this, there is probably not less than $1,000,000 worth of seeds sold from their city between January and June of each year. The growth of the seed and hot house interest has of course occasioned a tremendous multiplication of varieties. I know of one seed house alone which has 600 named varieties of potatoes and other vegetables and flowering plants receive proportionate attention.

A very pleasant result of the concentration of this trade about New York is the cheapness of cut flowers in the city. Besides the numerous regular florist there is on most every busy street corner a little flower stand where, from the first warm sunshine to the first snow squall, pretty, fragrant little bushes of green and color can be brought for a song. And to the credit of New Yorkers it must be said that busy as they are, these flowers stands get very fair patronage. Throughout his hurrying day in the heat and dust of summer many a clerk, banker and merchant, and above all, the wild, untamable broker of Wall street, would feel quite lost without a bunch of violets or pansies, or a rosebud and sprig of geranium in his button-hole or on his office desk.

The tidal wave which for several years past has been sweeping the finest retail business of the city from its old moorings in lower Broadway to various uptown locations, has now carried away another landmark in the great photographic atelier of Sarony, the pioneer, and for many years the leader, in this department of Americans fine arts. Every visitor to New York knows the old location opposite the Grand Central hotel, and even those who never enjoyed an inspection of the beauties of the place cannot fail to be familiar with the bold and characteristic signature which appears beneath all the best portraits of native and foreign celebrities which are scattered through the country. The new quarters on Union Square are being made a palace of this art, every luxury and convenience which taste and experience can suggest, being supplied with unstinted liberality; for "Sarony's" has always been first in elegance as well as art, and its proprietor is not the man to fall behind in the universal warch of improvement. Among the other accessories for the convenience of the public which he is placing in the new building is a steam elevator from the street to his elegant quarters.

Several delegations have already set out from this city and Philadelphia for the purpose of being present at the ecumenical centennial celebration of the Pope's elevation to the bishopric. This jubilee, as it is called, will be held at Rome on May 21st, and will be celebrated with immense pomp and splendor—provided that the old Pontiff lives another three weeks, a matter of some little uncertainty. The official reports of his health are always flattering, but private despatches show his condition to be quite precarious. It seems to be the continued determination of the American faithful that His Holiness shall not suffer from temporal want during his declining years. One of the deputations above referred to carries $25,000 Peter's Pence as a gift to Pius IX, and another $40,000. If the pilgrims from the rest of the world do as well as ours, the Vatican will not be in the Sheriff's hands during the life of its present occupant.

Everybody has heard of Captain Craft, the famous English engineer, who, during his period of office has probably launched into eternity more human beings than did ever a red Indian or frontier desperado. Everybody, however, does not know that New York has a corresponding functionary. Our "Jack Ketch," who also officiates in Brooklyn, where he resides, is a quiet, black-haired, swarthy man, who has pursued his unattractive calling here for about twenty-five years. He is a carpenter by trade, and doubtless rose from building scaffolds to operating them. What his real name is I cannot learn, as he persists in calling himself by an assumed name to shield his family from the odium which still clings about the hangman's office. He has already swung off nineteen victims, which number would have been twenty by this time but for the death in prison of the Jewish murderer Rubenstein last year. His fee for doing the disagreeable job is $250 per criminal. It's a good round price, but it doesn't strike me that I should care to compete with him for the business, even if I were sure of getting it at the same rates. As our criminal matters stand at this writing, I don't know of anyone who is awaiting his kind offices.

WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL

TRADE MARK. REG'D. BANC.

A Sterling Vegetable Remedy
DISEASES OF THE THROAT AND LUNGS, DYSPEPSIA, GRAVEL, PILES, URINARY TROUBLES, NERVOUS DEBILITY, PALPITATION OF THE HEART, TORPIDITY OF THE LIVER, CONSTIPATION, SCROFULOUS AFFECTIONS, AND FEMALE COMPLAINTS.

For nearly a quarter of a century this sterling preparation has been effecting cures of the various diseases to which it is adapted, and thousands of persons, of perfect reliability, in all classes of society have borne evidence to its wondrous remedial efficacy.

As a remedy for diseases of the Throat and Lungs it has achieved a popularity rivalled by that of few proprietary remedies. Experience has shown that for those who are troubled with weakness of the Lungs it is the best possible protective against Consumption, and it may be relied on with certainty to eradicate Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup, Diptheria, and Soreness of the Chest.

Coughs of the most obstinate kind are speedily overcome by it, and since a simple cough is very prone to develop into serious Inflammation of the Lungs, the early use of DR. WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL is earnestly recommended, as it invariably prevents the further progress of the disease.

Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Torpidity of the Liver and of the Kidneys are promptly overcome by this superb vegetable corrective, which not only regulates but strengthens the organs of digestion, as well as those of the urinary and biliary secretions. It imparts unwonted relish for the food, and, by promoting digestion and assimilation, enriches the blood, which is the natural motor of vital energy and nutriment to the system.

Dr. L. O. C. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial thoroughly regulates the Bowels, removes Blind and Bleeding Piles, banishes from the circulation dropsical and all other impurities, and effectually counteracts a tendency to Gravel. It also entirely obviates the weaknesses incident to females.

Dr. L. O. C. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial is no mere placebo. It is a standard medicine, and has been repeatedly recognized as such by the press and members of the medical profession, who emphatically endorse the popular verdict long since rendered in its favor.

Sold by Druggists everywhere.

Principal Depot, No. 916 Filbert St., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

A PEERLESS EXTERNAL SPECIFIC AND BEAUTIFIER OF THE SKIN.

GLENN'S SULPHUR SOAP.

As a remedy for DISEASES, SORES, ABRASIONS, and ROUGHNESS OF THE SKIN; as a deodorizer, disinfectant, and means of preventing, and curing Rheumatism and Gout; and as an ADJUNCT OF THE TOILET and THE BATH, "GLENN'S SULPHUR SOAP" is incomparably the best article ever offered to the American public.

The COMPLEXION is not only freed from PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, TAN, FRECKLES, and all other blemishes, by its use, but acquires a TRANSPARENT DELICACY and VELVETY SOFTNESS through the clarifying and emollient action of this WHOLESOME BEAUTIFIER.

The contraction of obnoxious diseases is prevented, and the complete disinfection of clothing worn by persons afflicted with contagious maladies is insured by it. FAMILIES and TRAVELERS provided with this admirable purifier HAVE AT HAND THE MAIN ESSENTIAL OF A SERIES OF Sulphur Baths. Dandruff is removed, the hair retained, and grayness retarded by it.

Medical men advocate its use.

Gov. Packard and His Adherents.

COMPLIMENTARY ADDRESS TO GOV. PACKARD.

NEW ORLEANS, April 24.

The following address was adopted in joint caucus of the Senate and House by the Republican members of the General Assembly of Louisiana

To Gov. S. B. Packard:

We recognize and appreciate the loyalty with which you have sought to carry out the obligations which you assumed when in the presence of a legally-organized quorum of both houses of the General Assembly, after a formal Constitutional canvass of the votes, you took the oath of office as governor of the State of Louisiana. The unquestioned active co-operation of the Republican members of the General Assembly has been with you throughout your connection with the State Government in your struggle to maintain said authority, and overwhelming obstacles have been thrown in your way. Among the first acts of the General Assembly was to pass a joint resolution requesting the President of the United States under Sec. 4, Art. 4 of the Constitution of the United States, to accord the legal Government support against domestic violence which threatened its overthrow. In response to that appeal, after some delay, as under was issued by President Grant, troops from time to time have been legally declared to the Governor of the State, that the Supreme Court ordered set up its own organization of legal authority, and that the General Assembly could lawfully proceed to the discharge of the duties devolved upon it by the Constitution. Prior to the meeting of the Legislature, the Democrats claimed to have elected, in many members of the House, and the Legislature, duly organized, convened in joint convention in the Hall of the House of Representatives, with a full quorum of both houses, and transmitted to him a concurrent resolution reciting the domestic violence prevailing in the State, and requesting, under the Constitution and laws of the United States, in response to the appeal he has been constituted to that request.

The Legislature sat in the State's Commission of Congressmen, who submitted a proposed compromise on the General Assembly, which, after being amended in the form of one adopted high ranks on our part, was accepted by the Republican majority in the House, and indicated wishes of the President. That proposition was rejected in our opponents, who in turn submitted a plan for the organization of the House. The resolutions adopted by the Democrats in joint caucus, which have been published, have explained by what means of forgery, persuasion and threats, the majority in the House, consisting of nine members, professing simply to sustain you in your official capacity, but wishing all the powers of authorized organization of the President sent to the State for a specific purpose, secured a sufficient number of Legislators to give the opposing body a majority of members legally returned elected. The action of the Democrats was followed by an official order of the President, made at the request of Gen. Nicholls, directing the withdrawal of the United States troops, and virtually announcing the opposing Government.

During the seventeenth days that have elapsed since you took your seat as Governor, no word of encouragement, recognition or support has been accorded you by the National Administration. On the contrary, a disposition has been clearly manifested to encourage, strengthen and maintain in all direct and indirect means the Democratic usurpation, already so strong in the moral support which it received in the presence of a legally-organized quorum of both houses of the General Assembly, after a formal Constitutional canvass of the votes, you took the oath of office as governor of the State of Louisiana. The unquestioned active co-operation of the Republican members of the General Assembly has been with you throughout your connection with the State Government in your struggle to maintain said authority, and overwhelming obstacles have been thrown in your way. The New York Herald has a cable telegram from St. Petersburg, Russia, which says Russia has 300,000 men on the Danube, and 120,000 men in the Caucasus, while on the opposite fronts of the Turks are 100,000 along the Danube and 50,000 or less in Asia Minor.

England has issued a proclamation of neutrality on the Eastern question, but the gravest military preparations on her navy yards, and her army is being put on a war footing. Russia is making formal protest to England, from which point they may be moved speedily, should it be needed.

The Cumeks want Victoria declared Empress of Canada on the fortieth anniversary of her coronation, June 28. She is now Empress of India. Canada is a more important part of the United Kingdom than Do New Deseret, and she has a larger material claim to be the two Kingdoms, Canada will be a part of the United States one of these days.

Something more than a division of the Republican ranks ordered Rutherford Hayes, commanding the U. S. Army, to call out Regular soldiers to prevent Democratic voters from voting at the election over American affairs in the Mississippi valley, during the week now in progress. Bloody country of ours, you and your, only 40 years and 1,000 men, hundreds of them.

Tom Dunnegan's are now arrived at the fact that Gen. Grant is not such a Democrat as they have been crying for a third for three eight years past, and it is necessary to Democratic precedent for one in office to refuse to step aside, that many half the members of that party thought the nomination was true. Hayes' declaration, yesterday, that Gen. Grant has not stood behind him

Father Jouclard is an ordinary to Detroit, Rev. Mr. Bronson, to succeed and perform the duties of bishop Borgess during a six months' absence of the Bishop in Europe. Rev. Father Jouclard, of Monroe, has also been appointed to perform certain duties in the same time. Rev. Frank O'Brien (who was ordained a short time ago) will serve as pastor of St. Joseph Church, in Monroe, during these vacations.

The officers of the Ice Yacht Club elected at Pontiac last week are: Commodore, Jas. Hall; Vice Commodore, Jas. Hall; Secretary, Jas. Hall; Treasurer, Jas. Hall; Measurer, Jas. The Club has a fine ice yacht, which is kept in the boat house during the summer months.

The Detroit Post and Tribune says: "The Democratic Congressional Committee has issued a circular to the Democratic Congressional candidates, informing them that the Democratic National Committee will not contribute to their campaign funds, and requesting them to raise the money themselves. The Committee has also issued a circular to the Democratic State Committees, requesting them to raise money for the Congressional campaign. The Democratic Congressional Committee has not a dollar in the treasury, and is in debt to the amount of $5,000. The Democratic National Committee has a surplus of $100,000, but it is not to be used in the Congressional campaign."

The Democrats are now arranged in the following order: In the House of Representatives, 153 Democrats, 140 Republicans, 4 Greenbackers, 1 Independent, 1 Democrat-Greenbacker, 1 Democrat-Republican, 1 Democrat-Independent, 1 Republican-Greenbacker, 1 Republican-Independent, 1 Democrat-Republican-Greenbacker, 1 Democrat-Republican-Independent, 1 Democrat-Greenbacker-Independent, 1 Republican-Greenbacker-Independent, 1 Democrat-Republican-Greenbacker-Independent, 1 Democrat-Republican-Greenbacker-Independent, 1 Democrat-

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

FOREIGN.

THE Porte has declined to recognize the arrangement by which Russian subjects in Turkey were placed under the protection of Germany and the German Government has entered a vigorous protest.

ON the 29th, the Romanian Minister of Foreign Affairs notified the Chamber of Deputies that he had signed a convention with Russia, by virtue of which the latter was promised free passage across the country and the treatment due to a friendly Nation. The Cabinet on its part, had bound himself to respect the rights of Roumania as secured by the Treaty of 1856. No convention had been signed with the Porte, because it had persisted in making Roumania the theater of war and had refused to recognize the country as settle long-pending difficulties.

THE Novelty Works building in Montreal, Can., was burned on the morning of the 28th ult., and nine persons were crushed or burned to death, and several others were injured, mostly firemen.

THE Czar has telegraphed to the Prince of Montenegro: "I am firmly resolved this time to realize the sacred mission of Russia and my predecessor. God will aid me."

GREAT BRITAIN has issued a gun-boat to the Danube, to observe strict neutrality in the war between Turkey and Russia. France has also issued a similar proclamation.

A VIENNA dispatch of the 30th ult. says the Porte had given official assurance that it did not intend to open on the war on Servian territory.

A CONSTANTINOPLE telegram of the 30th ult. says entrance into or departure from the Bosphorus and Dardanelles during the night time had been absolutely prohibited by the Turkish Government. All lights had been extinguished.

AT the request of Austria, Russia, on the 1st, declared the navigation of the Danube reopened subject to certain local restrictions.

BATTLES were fought before Kars, on the 26th and 30th ult., in which the Turks were worsted.

ACCORDING to a Berlin special of the 1st, Russia, at the instance of Austria, had promised to respect the neutrality of Servia.

A CONSTANTINOPLE telegram of the 1st says the Bey of Tunis had offered the Sultan 10,000 infantry and 5,000 cavalry, provided the Porte would pay a portion of the expense of equipment and transportation.

AN English steamer was recently totally destroyed by a tornado while entering the harbor of Kertch without observing the necessary precautions.

THE Turkish Commander on the Danube has been authorized by the Porte to close the river to navigation, and to adopt any measures in connection therewith rendered necessary by military exigencies. Accounts on the 2d state that the Turks were burning the villages opposite Galatz and persecuting the Christians.

A VIENNA telegram of the 31st says Austria had decided to issue a proclamation of neutrality.

DISPATCHES received from the Russian telegraphic agency, on the 2d, announced the capture of Nicopolis, containing 7,000 men, and abandoned Bayazid and withdrawn to the heights of Altaday, leaving behind them a large quantity of ammunition, which fell into the hands of the Russians. The Russian forces from Alexandropol had occupied Zizma and Bardeers. All the Turkish posts in the Asiatic frontier had surrendered without a shock.

A BUCHAREST dispatch of the 2d says the Roumanian Army had taken possession of Kalafat, the occupying force numbering 9,000 men, with twenty-four guns. It was the intention to hold the post against any attempt at its capture by the Turks. The town of Omtul, occupied by the Russians, had been bombarded by the Turks, and that the Roumanian Chambers had voted to be sent to the front.

ACCORDING to Constantinople dispatches of the 3d, the Turks had harmed and abandoned Tultcha. The evacuation of Dobrudscha had been resolved upon, and the Turkish Army was slowly falling back upon the second line of defense. Several Russian merchantmen had been captured by the Turkish fleet.

DOMESTIC.

THE Treasury of the United States, up to the 27th, had disbursed $30,244,000 in silver coin, of which amount $18,095,000 were in lieu of fractional currency, and $12,249,000 for currency obligations. There was a balance on hand of $3,500,000.

THE verdict of the Coroner's jury in the case of the Southern Hotel fire in St. Louis is to the effect that the fire originated in the basement of the hotel, in their opinion the storeroom, but possibly the wine cellar, but, in either case, near the bottom of the baggage elevator, in which carried the smoke and flames almost instantly to the upper floors and roof of the building. The losses of the building are confused among other things, for having made no provision for using the necessary means at hand for extinguishing a fire, for carelessness in storing inflammable materials in the storeroom and wine cellar, and for making no efficient efforts on the night of the fire to awaken their guests and employes.

AN Omaha telegram of the 27th says a heavy snow-storm, reported in the mountains on the night of the 25th, had passed over the entire line of the Union Pacific Road, reaching that city in the shape of a severe and heavy cold rain. At Kearney Junction it was snowing hard. The thermometer ranged remarkably low on the season. The next augur-holes were now indulged in that this cold storm would have the effect entirely to destroy the grasshoppers.

THE eighth annual report of the Board of Indian Commissioners has been recently made public. It reviews what has been done under the peace system, and deprecates the want of good faith of the Government in its treatment of the Indians. It concludes with the following recommendations: Immediate compliance on the part of the Government with the terms of the existing treaties with all Indians; appropriations for consolidating the agencies, generous appropriation for school purposes, disconnection of tribal relations; extension of the law for the protection of life and property; allotments of land, establishment of industrial and agricultural boarding-schools, and compelling the attendance of all between seven and eighteen years, the issue of supplies to be made to heads of families; increased salaries to Indian Agents.

THE suit, in New York, of the English owners of the famous Emma Mine against Frederick W. Park and others, since 1871, to recover eight $1,500,000 paid for the shipping there was finally closed and mere presentation on the part of Mr. Park, in regard to the resources of the mine resulted, on the 30th ult., after a long private trial, in a verdict in the defendants.

SEVERAL members of the St. Louis Whisky Ring, who were sentenced to pay a fine and to undergo imprisonment, a year, etc., but who had never paid the fine, were arrested in that city on the 30th ult. One of them paid the fine ($1,000) and was released, but the others gave bail in $1,000. These arrests were made under the direction of Post-Office Bliss, in pursuance of a recent decision of the Secretary of the Treasury that insurance could be broken to the collection of Post-Office fines in the whisky cases.

AN Omaha dispatch of the 29th ult. says information from nearly all sections of Nebraska was to the effect that the heavy snow had ran above of the previous three days had destroyed all the grasshoppers. The weather was unusually cold, and none the "hoppers to death. Experiments in thawing them out showed no signs of vitality.

TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY employes, mostly females, in the employ of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing in Washington, were discharged, on the 30th ult.

THE Dime Savings Bank, at Bethlehem, Pa., suspended, on the 30th ult., with liabilities exceeding $200,000; assets unknown.

THE public debt statement for April shows the following: Coin bonds outstanding, $1,186,320,750; total debt, $2,724,558,503; cash in Treasury, $154,220,886; debt, less cash in the Treasury, $2,670,337,617, decrease during April, $4,315,230.

A SECTION of the northeast corner of the New York Postoffice building fell on the afternoon of the 1st, while men were at work removing supports which had been placed under it while making repairs. Of the ten men at work in the room at the time of the accident, two were killed, and one fatally and others slightly injured.

A JACKSON (Miss.) Associated Press dispatch of the 30th ult. says that, on the evening of the 30th ult. John W. Gully, a prominent citizen of Kemper, was assassinated by an unknown party. On the 29th, two colored men made an affidavit that Benj. Bush, a white man, did the deed, and that Judge Chisholm, who ran for Congress on the Republican ticket in the Third District last election, bribed him to do it. Bush, Chisholm and son were arrested and committed to jail. Chisholm's wife, who was present at the Kells, Mrs. Chisholm and Daughter attended on sharing their confinement. On Sunday, the 29th, Chisholm sent to Sessha for dinner for whom a warrant had been issued. Before the arrival was arrested, but fled as he arrived at the jail was set upon by a mob and killed. The jailer was then overpowered by the mob, who immediately attacked Chisholm, mortally wounding him and killing his son. Miss Chisholm, in defending her father and son killed in flour, and Mrs. Chisholm severely wounded. Gully, a son of Gully who was assassinated. Mrs. Chisholm was also seriously wounded. Rosenbaum and Hopper were carried to the woods by the mob, to escape from the wholesome of Bush, the alleged assassin of Gully. It is supposed Rosenbaum and Hopper were hanged. It is reported that a horrible state of affairs is existing throughout that section. The people are wild with excitement, and other hangings will probably follow."

IN New York City, on the 2d, the Grand Jury found indictments against Dr. Thomas S. Lambert, President; James Cruikshank, Secretary and Alfred J. Bell, Cashier of the American Life Insurance Company, charging them with having subscribed to a sworn statement of the financial condition of the company in which in addition to the capital stock, $1,000,000, was misrepresented. Dr. Lambert was held in bail of $10,000, and the others were held in the sum of $5,000 each. Indictments for a similar offense were also found against Luther W. Frost, President, and J. P. Rogers, Secretary, of the Continental Life Insurance Company, but they had disappeared from the city.

PERSONAL.

GEN. SHERMAN is said to be of the opinion that the war in Europe will be of long duration, and involve other Governments beside Russia and Turkey. He states that American officers desirous of visiting the scene of operations can only obtain leave of absence on half-pay, if at all, and that they will be debarred from engaging temporarily with either army.

THE divorce case of Ann Eliza vs. Brigham Young, Judge Schaeffer has decided that there was no marriage between the parties, and that hence the plaintiff is not entitled to a share of dowress. The Judge also decides that, for the mental service which she rendered unto the Prophet during the years of their joint polygamous career, as nun and wife of fiction, she would be entitled to recover a reasonable compensation; but, as she has already received in the form of alimony during the pendency of the litigation a sum in excess of the value of her services as shown in the proof, she has exhausted her legal claim upon Brigham's estate and must look to the law for an further consolation.

JOHN E. KING has been appointed by the President Collector of Customs of New Orleans.

THE resignation of A. M. Clapp, Public Printer, was tendered on the 30th ult., and J. D. Defrees was appointed to succeed him.

SENATOR BLAINE has been recently chosen for the eighteenth time, Chairman of the Maine Republican State Committee, he having already served seventeen years in that capacity.

EX-SENATOR WILLIAM G. BROWNLOW died at his residence in Knoxville, Tenn., on the 29th ult.

STATE SENATOR WEBBER, of New York, testified at Albany, on the 2d, relative to the charges in the alleged confession of Wm. M. Tweed, to the effect that in no possible shape had anything of any value passed through his hands, or been received by him, in consideration of any vote or act done by him in the Legislature or out of it for the benefit of William M. Tweed or anybody associated with him (Tweed); he never received any money from Ewaid, Winslow or Hastings.

DAN FAIRBANKS, of Vermont, has presented John F. Plant until April, 1879.

POLITICAL.

THE Louisiana Legislature adjourned sine die on the 27th.

THE South Carolina Legislature convened in special session on the 29th, in its message, Gov. Hampton chronicles the peaceful character of the past year. The Governor will forget the unseemly engendered by political strife, and rise supreme to petty considerations of partisanship, and that, desiring somethin with pride and zeal to the service of your State, you will strive earnestly to restore its lost prosperity, revive its wasted industry, reform all the abuses in its government, and promote harmony, zeal will and justice among all classes and parties."

GOV. NELSON has issued a proclamation on the 29th, designating Thursday, May 16, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer in Louisiana, and inviting the citizens of the State to observe the day, to the end that all the people, "forgetting past dissensions and bitterness, may unite in the fulfillment of a common and happy destiny."

A COLUMBIA (S. C.) dispatch of the 30th ult. says the Republican claimants for State offices would consent to the proceedings before the Supreme Court, which would end the contest and seat all the Democratic State officials.

THE Democratic State Convention of Pennsylvania has been called to meet at Harrisburg on the 8th of August.

Enormous Power of Large Guns.

THE results recently obtained with the "Wolwich Infant," an eighty-one-ton gun, and the Italian 100-ton gun appear to demonstrate conclusively the enormous efficiency of these monster weapons, the latter having apparently somewhat the best of it, if the experimental trials may be regarded as a sure; of competitive examination of the two guns, for the "infant" is becoming seriously affected by the extension of the fissure or crack induced some time ago, and will probably be only used for a few more rounds, after which it will be removed to the Royal Arsenal, and cut in half in front of the trunnions for the purpose of attaching a new steel lining, the whole cost of this rebuilding, so to speak, of the gun probably amounting to several thousand pounds, whilst its larger rival, the Italian gun, has stood the tests applied to it remarkably well. Some idea of the magnitude of the forces involved in these gun trials may be gathered from the circumstance that the pressure exerted on every square method of the powder chamber is usually upward of twenty-five tons, occasionally reaching the enormous amount of forty-two tons. Let it be supposed that in a round shot or average projectile weighs 800 pounds and occupies half a square foot; thus to equal a weight of twenty-five tons per square foot there would have to be piled as much theirs would have to be piled as much theirs would have to be piled as much theirs

Cameron in Africa.

In a notice of Commander Cameron's recent publication, "Across Africa," the New York Evening Post says:

"Commander Cameron suffered much, as all central African travelers do, with the malarious fevers of that country, and the following description of the sensations experienced in an attack of the sort indicates the distressing nature of the disease:

"One night I thought I was at least twenty people, all of whom were in pain, and that each one had the same feeling as all the rest. Another night the fancies were more distinct, and I experienced a complete sense of duality. I imagined that another person, a second self, was lying upon the opposite side of the boat, and I was perfectly conscious of every shade of anger and pang of headache that he suffered. I thought, too, that the teapot of gold was which had been placed on that side of the boat was for his sole use, and when, in my tossing about, I rolled over to that side, I seized the teapot and drank like a whale, and chuckled at the idea of the other thirsty mortal having been done out of some of his tipple."

Fever was not by any means the only, perhaps it was not even the greatest, hindrance to the traveler's work. His porters and other servitors constantly absconded on mere baubles, which was his money; they got drunk at inconvenient times, deserted at critical moments, outraged the natives and created hostility, they would refuse to move, too, when he was ready to march, and the man whom he had employed to command them, constantly worked them in their evil practices. Another serious obstacle was the irregularity concerning custom-duties, which were exacted in every chief's territory, it was frequently necessary to wait a day or two for a drunken chief to get sober before a parley on this subject could be begun, and then another day or two would be consumed in adequate assurance that the amount to be paid.

The natives were sometimes friendly and sometimes the reverse, but whether friendly or hostile they managed always to be extremely disagreeable. Their habit of annoying themselves with fancied cause of, and their negative habit of not washing themselves, made them unpleasant visitors, and they were as persistent as they were disagreeable guests. Of one of his visitors Mr. Cameron writes:

"He seemed half-witted, and certainly was the coolest fellow I ever met. So he did not hesitate to take the pipe out of my mouth, and, after a whiff or two, to pass it on to a circle of grisly, dirty natives, who were spitting round us, staring as only a negro can stare."

Another of the traveler's annoyances was that he was constantly examined and exhibited as a curiosity. Writing of one of his visitors he says:

"He recognized some pictures of animals which we showed him, but invariably looked at the back of the paper to see what was there, and remarked that he did not consider them finished, since they did not give the likeness of the other side of the animal."

This exacting art critic was pleased, however, with his entertainment, and he need not to obtain the travelers for several days, so that the people, who had never seen a white man, might examine them and their effects.

Com. Cameron was not less a sightseer than his entertainers were, although he was more cautious than they, and he has put upon record many observations of their customs which are of interest. In Unyanwezi he made a study of African curiosities.

"There are two of these public houses—or, perhaps, they may be more properly termed 'clubs'—in nearly every village in Unyanwezi, one for each sex. That appropriated to the women is not open to strangers; but at the one frequented by the men all travelers of distinction are welcomed by the chiefs and elders."

Youthful ornamental men rather early in Africa it appears:

"As soon as a boy attains the age of seven or eight years he throws off the authority of his mother and passes most of his time at the club, usually eating and often sleeping there."

Luxury and richness of apparel are sought in Africa as elsewhere, but in crude ways chiefly. A King who was making a royal progress through his dominions called upon the traveler on one occasion:

"He was dressed in a scarlet baize tunic trimmed with gold and embroidery, which looked rather odd over his greasy waistcloth, his only other garment."

At Ugaga Mr. Cameron was visited by a local man, whom he describes as a very civil young man of five-and-twenty years of age:

"When he called on me I was lying on my bed, with both boots on his legs, waiting for my bath. I showed him my guns, books and other curiosities to occupy his attention; but in the midst of his examination of these things he suddenly caught sight of my boots and looked at them most carefully, remarking that my feet were much too white and soft for walking. Then he transferred his attention to my hands, with certainly could not be called white, having been tanned to the color of a dirty dogskin glove; but after inspection he arrived at the conclusion that I had done very little work, and therefore must be an important personage in my own country."

The modes of salutation in the neighborhood of Ugaga are very curious.

"When two grandees meet, the junior bans forward, bends his knees and places the palms of his hands on the ground on each side of his feet, while the senior claps his hands as of seven times. They then change round, and the junior slaps himself first under the left armpit and then under the right. But when a 'swell' meets an inferior, the superior only claps his hands and does not fully return the salutation by following the motions of the one who first salutes. On two commoners meeting they pat their stomachs, then clap hands of each other, and finally shake hands. These broad signs are observed to an unlimited extent, and the sound of patting and clapping is almost unceasing."

The custom of "making brothers," or fraternizing, which is common in central Africa, interested Commander Cameron, not merely because of the odd ceremonies with which the brotherhood is accomplished, but because he believes that the custom is of Semitic origin, and that it was introduced into Africa by heathen Arabs before the time of Mohammed. The traveler was present at the brother-making between Syde, one of his followers, and a Chief, Dakaowwa, and he thus describes the ceremony.

"The first operation consisted in making an incision on each of their wrists, just sufficient to draw blood, a little of which was scraped off and smeared on the other's cut, after which gunpowder was rubbed in. The concluding part of the ceremony was performed by Dakawnywa's sponsor holding a sword resting on the Dakawnywa so shoulder, while he who acted on Syde went through the motions of sharpening a knife on it. Both sponsors mean while made a speech, calling down imprecations on Dakawnywa and all his relations if he, the said Dakawnywa, should ever act unfaithfully to Syde in future, and praying that their graves might be defiled by pigs if he broke the brotherhood in word, thought or deed. The same form having been gone through with respect to Syde, the sponsors changing duties, the brother-making was complete."

Crushed in the Dark.

One of the most heart-rending accidents which has been recorded for some time has just occurred at the Empire Mine, near Grass Valley. Two men, named John Mooney and Patrick Oman, were employed in No. 4 shaft, laying track. The nature of about two miles from the opening, and a mile from the other workings. When they least dreamed of danger there was a sudden explosion somewhere, and an instant later they were overwhelmed by a burial fall of rock. The terrible accident put out their lights, and they were in utter darkness. Mooney, after considerable difficulty, succeeded in extricating himself from among the massive bowlders, which fell about him in such a way as to form a sort of cave, and by freeing himself his first thought was for his companion. He called aloud for Oman, but received no answer—only the echo of his own voice, sent back to him by the rocks. He felt himself growing faint, and realized that he was seriously injured, but was determined to ascertain the condition of his fellow-miner. After calling aloud in vain for some time, he groped about in the dismal place among the rocks, hoping to find Oman, and now ing that he was dead. At length he touched him, but the poor fellow was pinned fast by a big bowlder which had ripped one of his mangled legs. The other leg had been completely severed from the body by the fall. To release him was a hard task, but Mooney, forgetting his own injuries, set about the work with a will and succeeded in getting Oman free.

How to carry him to the light of day was the next trial, but he was determined to do it, and, taking him upon his back, he began groping his way through the pitchy darkness in the direction of what he considered the foot of the slope. For two hours he wandered about the living tomb, with his dying comrade on his back moaning in the most piteous manner. The situation was awful, and, after roaming thus for a long time, poor Mooney was disheartened to find that he had come back to the very point from which he had set out, and where the accident occurred. He summoned up his last failing strength and made another effort, still taking Quinn on his back, but, after proceeding a short distance, he grew faint, and was unable to go further with his precious burden. Then, laying the dying man down in as comfortable a position as he could, Mooney crawled on his hands and knees forward what he thought was the slope. At half-past six o'clock a party of miners, while proceeding down No. 4 slope, were startled by the apparition which their lamps revealed. It was Mooney crawling slowly up the slope on his hands and knees, saying not a word, but piteously, and his whole body sore from contact with the jagged pieces of coal and rock. His eyes were at first dazzled by the light, he had been in darkness so long and trying to see, and he was speechless with joy for some seconds to find relief at last.

Thus was eight hours after the accident had happened, and they were eight hours of awful mental agony. As soon as Mooney found words to speak he related the story in brief, and begged the party to hasten to the assistance of Quinn, who might yet be saved.

They hurried to the spot indicated and found the unfortunate Quinn in the condition already described, with one leg severed from his body and the other crushed to pieces. He was still alive and they took him up in their arms to carry him to the shaft, but he never reached it a live. He died in the arms of his comrades. Mooney, who is severely wounded, is expected to recover. He played the part of a hero in the most-like manner in which he risked his own life trying to save his comrade.—New York Herald.

Harriet Martineau's First Literary Venture.

It was at the age of nineteen that Harriet Martineau felt the sensation, that is so delightful to most authors, of seeing her first contribution to literature in print. The account of her entrance upon the vocation of an authoress is full of interest. For some years, it seems, she had aspired to this vocation. It happened that her brother James, who was going to leave home for college, perceiving that she was far from happy, advised her to turn her attention to some fresh pursuit which would distract and engage her mind, and suggested writing for the press. The very next morning, before six o'clock, she was at her desk composing "a parable on 'Female Writers on Practical Subjects,'" and chose the theme for a girl of fourteen, who, when finished, she sent to a small Unitarian periodical called the Monthly Repository. Keeping her design a secret from the family, she carried the article to the Postoffice, and awaited with palpitating heart the arrival of the next number of the Repository. It came just before service on Sunday morning; and when she turned the sheet her heart "thumped prodigiously" on seeing her article in the page. In the evening her elder brother, by chance, read the article aloud in his family circle, where Harriet was taking tea, praising it as he read. When he had ended it, he turned to her and said:

"Harriet, what is the matter with you? I never knew you so slow to praise anything before."

"I replied, in utter confusion:

"I never could battle anybody. The truth is, that paper is mine."

"He made no reply, read on in silence, and spoke no more till I was on my way to my room, when he merely remarked that on my shoulder, and said, gravely:

"Now, dear, leave it to other women to make shirts and darn stockings; and do you devote yourself to this."

"I went home," she adds, "in a sort of dream, so that the squares of the pavement seemed to float before my eyes. That evening made me an authoress."—Appleton's Journal.

The Oriental Business.

A good citizen of Croghan street was reading the other day of a Persian gentleman who always walked about with a smile on his face. When this Persian was asked why he always looked so happy when other men looked sad, he replied:

"I smile because it may be sunshine to some poor soul surrounded by shadows."

It was very nice in the Persian, and the Croghan-street man said he'd be hanged if he couldn't imitate a Persian or anybody else walking around on two legs. He at once began to smile at his wife. She stood it for a few minutes, and then observed:

"What's the matter, William—got the color again?"

"I smile because I want to carry sunshine to your darkened soul," he replied.

She wanted him to understand that fifteen minutes at the wash pile would help her more than all the grins he could get on at a single week, and when he went into the kitchen to smile some sunshine at the hired girl the wife followed him and raised a row that put the other quarters of an hour behindhand. However, one can't get the hang of Oriental business in a day, and this man tried it again on the street-car as he came down town yesterday. Opposite him sat an old woman with a basket, and he undertook to smile the shadows from her heart. She watched him for two or three minutes, growing mad all the time, and presently she asked:

"Do you think you're smiling at me, that you are grinning across the aisle like a circus baboon?"

"I smile, madam, because—because—" he stammered, forgetting what the Persian said. "I smile, because——"

"You are grinning because I've got sore eyes!" she shouted.

"No, madam. I smile that I—that I——"

"I'll not stand it!" she exclaimed, and she hammered him with the basket until he escaped off the platform.

"Now, grin over that, will you!" she called after him as she shook the basket in the air.

The Persian who went around smiling was a fool, and I'm his first cousin!" growled the man, and he quit smiling, and picked a fight with a harness-maker.—Detroit Free Press.

MECHANICAL AND SCIENTIFIC.

—According to the researches of an eminent German authority, of the 1,000,000 kinds of animals, of which 240,000 are now extinct, while the other 135,000 are still with us. Among the survivors are 4,000 species of mammalia, 2,000 of birds, 1,500 creeping things, 8,000 of fish, 100,000 of insects, 4,000 cuttlefish, 3,500 polyps and 1,000 infusoria.

—West Virginia has the largest and most valuable body of timber of any State in the Union. Prof. Fontaine estimates that the area still covered by forests is between 9,000,000 and 10,000,000 acres, and that the value of the supplies exportable timber is fully $25,000,000 as it stands in the forests. The oak, walnut, cherry, ash, poplar, maple, elm, sycamore and locust attain a size there not surpassed on the American continent.

—An improved nozzle for spreading, as described in the foreign journals, the peculiar feature of the device giving it some important advantages over others. This nozzle consists of a jet formed to deliver a solid stream of water; but, when it is desirable that the water should be spread, a slight turn of the wrist causes a number of metal fingers to enter the stream and break it up into a number of smaller streams, which have the effect of a spray. It is claimed for this spreading of the jet that the water not only acts more efficiently on the flames, but that the spray, by driving back the smoke and placing a shield of water between the fireman and the flames, enables him to get sufficiently near to pour water on the seat of the fire.

—A proposal to reduce the week from seven days to five, and, further, to remove the days, comes from Australia. Mr. H. K. Rusden, the author of this scheme, enunciates his view in a paper on the week in the last volume of the "Transactions of the Royal Society of Victoria," where he expresses the opinion that while reducing the number of the days in the week it would be a good opportunity to discard the present pagan names, and to substitute Oneday, Twoday, Threeday and Fourday for the first Sunday to be called Goodday. The author is very sanguine as to the success of his proposal, and answers the objection that Australians would not mark that "the week itself was actually altered by the Romans, Greeks and Jews, and many other nations, for the better, and I am sure will. My wife swears me is all for change, and I am willing to try the week change." We think it is willing to the world at considerable expense for the last three years, and has certainly recommended them to the suffering.

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE For CATARRH.

MEETS THE WANTS OF THOUSANDS.

Gentlemen,—We have sold SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE for nearly two years, and do not hesitate to say we never sold a similar preparation that gave such general satisfaction. We have in fact in the line of remedies for catarrh, etc., that we can recommend with such confidence as we do SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE. Every purchaser we have ever known to use it has been perfect satisfied, and we are confident every one will be convinced of its great merit, as that is the universal verdict of those using it. We have sold the drug business for the past twelve years or more, and have sold nothing for catarrh, for the last ten of the year. It was our proper you can use the letter or not, as you like, but it is the truth.

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in Drugs, Medicines, Books and Stationery, Washington, D.C.

GREATLY AFFLICTED.

Messrs. J. O. Simonds & Co., Dover: Gentlemen,—I am a practicing physician, and have sold SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE for CATARRH till I am afraid of losing my reputation as an honest man. I have for a long time used it myself, and can say from experience that it is the best catarrh remedy I ever saw. Above a year ago I was induced to use it for a severe case of catarrh, which had troubled me for years, and which I had tried almost every remedy for without benefit. I was hostile, which fixed me all right, giving me relief from the first. I am daily recommending it to my patients, and all that is claimed for it, and more too. Wishing you success in introduction, I am, A. W. SMITH.

DEXTER, Oct. 6, 1875. Dr. Smith is a Dell.

Each package contains Dr. Sanford's Improved Inhaler, and full directions for use. Price $1.00 in all cases. Price $1.00 per package. For sale by all wholesale and retail druggists throughout the country. WEEKS & POTTER, General Agents and Wholesale Druggists, Boston.

LAME BACK AND RHEUMATISM CURED BY COLLINS' VOLTAIC PLASTERS.

Messrs Weeks & Potter: Gentlemen,—One year ago this winter I was taken with a severe attack of Rheumatism in my right leg, in which I was crippled. I tried various remedies and received no relief. A friend advised me to send for a Collins' Voltaic Plaster, and get relief at once. I did so, and received relief in less than one hour after applying the plaster. I continued using it for about three weeks, when I was entirely cured, and have had no return of the disease. I have since used it for Lame Back, and it relieved me in a few days. I have recommended it to many of my friends, and they have all found relief by its use. I am now using it for a Cough, and find relief. I am confident that for Rheumatism, Lame Back, Pain in the Side, Cough, Cold, Sore Throat, Pleurisy, or any pain in the chest, it is the best remedy in the world. I am willing to refer any one to me at Bangor, Me., where I have lived for the past thirty years. Yours truly, JOHN F. HOWARD.

—Sponge Cake. Three eggs; one cup of sugar; three tablespoons of water; one teaspoon baking powder; one cup of flour.

—Baking Powder Cake.—White of one egg; one cup of white sugar; one-half cup of sweet milk; one and one-third teaspoons of baking powder; one and one-third cups of sifted flour.

—Soaking peas a few minutes in benzoline, or warm parafine, before planting, is said by a correspondent of the Gardener's Chronicle to entirely prevent the ravages of mice and birds on the seed.

—Number Cake.—One cup of butter; two cups of sugar; two table spoons of molasses; three cups of flour; four eggs; one teaspoon of soda; two teaspoons of cream tartar; one cup of raisins; spice to taste.

—If a cattle fiend cannot raise their coal, hold three or four at a time of ordinary sized stalks of white pulled elder between the grinders; pass them up as they grind thickly. Keep the mill feeding and crying, then coal will be forthcoming. If you put much water upon a very dusty floor, you have a big, troublesome mud-puddle to sop up or mop away. Experiment has convinced me that a floor of pine or basswood looks better after cleaning, if a small amount of water has been put on each portion of it. And as the water is put on please on the whole floor, the more the better, if you wash and wipe only a small portion at a time, and then throw out the dirty water and begin the next division with clean water. The suspect a soft wood floor dries the better it looks. I have seen women work very hard to scrub a pine or lass-wood floor white, and the result has been quite disappointing. They would put on too much water upon the floor, and then scrub with a brown hard and long; after this would sweep all of the dirty water out, and then, after the waters had settled, they could afford. When at last the well-soaked floor was dry it was undoubtedly clean, but looked dark and smeary. Weather-beaten, in consequence of remaining wet so long. It is a question of health with me, in winter, to have as little water upon a floor as a little by-en the water has an excellent effect upon floors. It may be poured directly upon deodorized copperas, or upon four to sixteen well very little hard rubbing, if a small amount of lye is mixed with the water. Too much lye, however, will make the boards yellow. How much should be used depends upon its strength. Soft soap is just the thing with which you wash a painted floor, else you gradually but speedily remove the paint with each cleaning. If you put on soap you have to rinse it off with water, and then you have a sticky condition, let us remember it all in the animal, and then send the carcass only; thus furnishing at the least possible expense the meat which they take so attractive a market for. They want good beef, will pay for it, and of this fact let breeders make a note. It costs no more to send sweet, tender and desirable meat than its opposite, and it will command a much larger price. There is no limit to the demand, and the improvement in quality will tend to the consumption and consequent amount required. Factory and Farm.

How to Wash a Wood-Floor.

"Topsoil" can be washed off with no great labor. Have the water only moderately warm, especially when the floor is of soft wood, because hot water sinks in so rapidly, and compresses so much the fibers in drying, than cold water upon wood. Drain the mop pretty well before putting it upon the floor, thus wetting the floor but little. Wet but a small portion of the floor at a time, rubbing it off from the mop into the water, and changing the water for a leaner very often. If you put much water upon a very dusty floor, you have a big, troublesome mud-puddle to sop up or mop away. Experiment has convinced me that a floor of pine or basswood looks better after cleaning, if a small amount of water has been put on each portion of it. And as the water is put on please on the whole floor, the more the better, if you wash and wipe only a small portion at a time, and then throw out the dirty water and begin the next division with clean water. It is a question of health with me, in winter, to have as little water upon a floor as possible. A little lye in the water has an excellent effect upon floors. It may be poured directly upon deodorized copperas, or upon four to sixteen ounces to a gallon of water, and then well, and they are done. I like mine with more sugar. Cor. Household.

—Sweet pickles of ripe cucumbers or green tomatoes, or both, may be made. Prepare the cucumbers by scraping out the inside and paring the outside; then cut in small pieces, let them lay in weak salt-and-water all night, or half a day; then drain them out, put them in a porcelain kettle, and cover with one-third vinegar and two-thirds water; let them boil about fifteen minutes, or till you can pierce with a straw from the outside; then drain and throw the liquor away; to one quart of the cucumbers, or the same quantity of ripe cucumbers, take two pounds of sugar, two tablespoonfuls each of allspice, cloves, cinnamon and whole ginger, one teaspoonful of cayenne pepper, put in the kettle with two quarts of vinegar, or enough to cover, and boil twenty minutes; skim out the spices, put in the cucumbers, let them boil
